U.S. Oil Company Is Attacked In Lebanon

Activists' Claim Is Rejected

By LARRY MOWELL

Despite claims that they held up a Corte Madera market only to bail out the financially troubled Marin City Learning Center, three radical activists were sentenced yesterday to one-year-to-life terms in state prison before a crowd of spectators in Marin Superior Court.

As more than 50 persons, including at least a dozen small children looked on, Judge E. Warren McGuire impassively handed out the terms to John Turner, 27, of Marin City, and Stephaie Catherine Kline and Candice Yockey, both 26-year-old San Franciscans.

However, the judge granted a delay until Tuesday for the sentencing of a fourth defendant, Claudia Vonetta Grayson, 20, of Oakland, when her attorney said he had not had time to review the probation report and wanted time to call in a psychiatrist to testify.

Turner, Mrs. Kline and Miss Yockey invaded the Co-Op Market at 8 a.m. Dec. 31, brandished guns and forced assistant manager William Fletcher to open the store safe after binding other employees with tape.

However, opening the safe set off a silent alarm and Corte Madera police arrived before the armed bandits, disguised by stockings over their heads, could escape with $2,700. Miss Grayson, standing lookout outside, exchanged shots with Corte Madera officer Andre Horn before the four were captured.

McGuire earlier had reduced the charge against the four from first degree robbery, which carries a sentence of five years to life, to second degree robbery when they agreed to plead guilty March 23.

However, he said at the time he would send them to prison unless something extraordinary in their behalf appeared in the probation reports. The reports by probation officers Jesse W. Johnson and Virginia Di Cerbo recommended prison and 90 minutes of arguments and testimony by Turner and character witnesses for him failed to sway the judge.

"I really have not heard anything new," the judge said. "The record shows a propensity to use force and violence to achieve justifiable social ends. Nobody is going to change their philosophy," McGuire said.

The judge felt they had joined the "so-called antisocial antiestablishment community."

All four had been involved in the Marin City Learning Center and the three sentenced yesterday participated in radical movements. Mrs. Kline, wrapped up in the antiwar

Guerrillas Take Blame For Raid

BEIRUT (UPI) — A selfstyled guerrilla organization calling itself the Lebanese Revolutionary Guard today claimed credit for the early morning attack on an American-owned oil tank farm near the south Lebanon port of Sidon and said it was aimed at the "dishonorable American-Saudi Arabia-Lebanese alliance."

The official Palestinian news agency WAFA, however, charged the claim was circulated "by American agents to mislead the people." WAFA denied guerrillas were involved and said the attack actually was carried out by Israeli commandos.

Earlier in the week, the Palestinian guerrillas tried to link U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) agents and the U.S. Embassy in Beirut with the Israeli commando raid into the Lebanese capital in which three top guerrilla leaders were assassinated. The United States has denounced the allegation as reminiscent of the "big lie" tactics of Adolf Hitler's Nazi Germany.

Armed saboteurs overpowered four guards and used time bombs to set fire to two oil storage tanks in the tank farm owned by the Trans-Arabian Pipeline Co., or Tapline. A doctor who treated the guards said they identified their 11 assailants as Palestinians but an American oil official said the identity of the attackers remained a mystery.

The 1:00 a.m. attack on the huge oil facility at Zahrani, about six miles south of Sidon and about 30 miles south of Beirut, followed repeated calls by Palestinian leaders for attacks on American property in the Middle East as a reprisal for Tuesday's Israeli raid on Beirut.

WAFA emphatically denied any guerrilla responsibility and said the attack was the work of Israeli commandos who landed on the shore near the storage tank farm. The agency claimed it warned Lebanese police an hour before the attack that "concentrations of Israeli land

HOME TO THE SEA FOR LISA THE SEAL

Lisa the seal, who's really a him and not a her, was returned to the sea yesterday.

The mammal, which had been cared for at the Louise A. Boyd Marin Museum of Science in San Rafael since being found battered and bleeding on a Sausalito beach Feb. 4, was crated up and driven at Ano Nuevo state preserve in San Mateo County.

At the site, a breeding ground for elephant seals Lisa at first seemed perplexed and hesitant with the surroundings but finally, with a slap on the behind from museum curator Lloyd Smalley, waddled into the ocean.

Release of the seal, originally mistaken for a female by museum officials, culminated a long effort to nurse the mammal back to health.

Smalley said yesterday the young elephant seal had gained substantial weight on a bolstered diet at the museum, and was fit for reunion with her native habitat.

Loan To Be Sought For Railway Rights

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Golden Gate Bridge District directors, rejecting objections from the City of Mill Valley, voted unanimously yesterday to seek a $1 milion federal loan to start purchase of abandoned railroad rights-of-way through Mill Valley, Corte Madera and Larkspur. (See another bridge story, page 3.)

The sentiment of the full board was evident in director Dean N. Meyer's warning that the rights-of-way "should never be lost to public use."

Transit plans by the district and county long have eyed the rights-of-way for future transit use. For almost as many years, master planning by the City of Mill Valley has looked to eventual removal of the line, which runs through a city recreation area and next to a new school.

No new testimony was taken yesterday, but the Mill Valley City Council voted only Tuesday night to oppose any rapid transit use of the right-of-way through the city.

A 1972 state law pushed quietly through the Legislature by the bridge district empowered it to ignore such opposition. It was unclear, however, whether the city's objections could convince the federal government to refuse the loan.

The district had delayed action for months on seeking the federal loan, hoping it could win over the Mill Valley City Council. The district's staff cautioned further delay could mean some of the rights-of-way will be sold before they can be bought by the district.

Robert E. Shields, the district's engineer, said no long-range transit system will work without the rights-of-way, especially the one east of Highway 101 in Corte Madera. The district hopes to use the Mill Valley line as a feeder to the main trunk.

Even the present bus system could use the line east of the freeway within two years, Shields estimated.

The $1 million loan would be to start appraisals and purchase of the rights-of-way, he said.

Shields said that running transit down the median strip of highways could not substitute for exclusive rights-of-way. The Division of Highways, he said, is far too slow to meet district needs, "the loss of control of the district's operations undesirable, and the outcome far too uncertain."

$400 Taken At Gunpoint At Theater

Two men in their middle 20s took $400 at gunpoint last night from employees at the Cinema I theater in Corte Madera.

Police said the robbers went into the manager's office in the theater lobby at about 10:30 p.m. and told him that one of them had lost a wallet. One of the men then pulled a revolver and ordered everyone in the office but the manager to step outside.

Before leaving with money kept in the office, the robbers herded the manager and other employees into a storage room and told them to wait 10 minutes. Three minutes after they left, the manager called police.

No witnesses saw how the men left or spotted a getaway car. One robber was described as having a mustache and wearing a dark leather jacket. The other, with shoulder length hair, wore a purple shirt, witnesses said.

Reagan Sets Vote On Monagan Seat

Monagan, the GOP floor leader, resigned April 9.

CHEAP, NUTRITIOUS

Next Time Try Rabbit For That Main Course

By PAT ANGLE

Marin residents looking for ways to stretch their meat dollar might consider inviting the Easter bunny for dinner — as the main course.

Not only is rabbit meat nutritious and delicious, according to Philip L. Fritchey of Bolinas, but it will cost the amateur rabbit raiser only about 25 or 35 cents a pound to grow his own.

"Rabbits are clean and quiet and easy to raise because they require a minimum of care," said Fritchey, a director of the Sonoma-Marin Rabbit Association. "My wife and I spend about 15 or 20 minutes a day feeding our 11 animals, watering them and cleaning their cages. It's very light work, too."

Not only that, but initial investment for a would-be rabbit farmer is small — about $55 — and the animals can be successfully raised and bred in a very small area, less than 30 square feet.

A trio of good "meat bred" rabbits may be purchased for as little as $15, Fritchey said, while all wire, self-cleaning hutches for use inside garages or sheds will cost between $20 and $30.

He said feed is not terribly expensive and the enterprising grower can produce his own from a small backyard garden, stock beets for winter feed and green leafy vegetables and root crops for summer feed.

In addition, rabbits — which are strictly vegetarian — will consume all kinds of garden trimmings and vegetable kitchen scraps.

As an added bonus, a good breeding rabbit can produce more meat per year than a cow, up to 250 pounds in accelerated breeding programs. The average backyard breeker, though, may expect only about 140 to 175 pounds per year.

Rabbit meat tastes something like chicken, except that the meat is denser and has a better flavor and the animal has smaller bones, according to John O. Williams, anothem Bolinas resident who shares Fritchey's enthusiasm for the activity, "It's better than chicken because it's all white meat," he said.

The Fritcheys have their home-grown meat about three times a week and enjoy it immensely.

Marsha Fritchey has been collecting rabbit recipes ever since the family started raising them about a year ago. She now has about 280 of them, including ones for such intriguing-sounding dishes as rabbit paprika, rabbit and sour cream, rabbit and dumplings, stuffed rabbit with cranberry glaze, sweet and sour rabbit, rabbit ala bourguignone and arroz con conejo.

"We haven't tried them all. But she hasn't made one yet that wasn't great," said Fritchey with a grin.

And not only is the meat good, but it's good for you — even better than beef — according to a Department of Agriculture pamphlet. It has more protein than more expensive beef (25.5 per cent, compared to 18.3 per cent per portion), according to the booklet, and fewer calories — 627 as compared to 1,130.

The inevitable question arises: How can anyone bear to kill and eat those delightful, gentle, furry little creatures?

Fritchey has an answer for the tender-hearted, although he laughingly admits "it may be a rationalization."

"I believe the greatest achievement of any creature is fulfilling its function on the earth," he said. "An animal's function is to provide food and we allow it to do that, then we are one step closer to understanding what life is all about."

Fritchey, on the other hand, is shocked that people are considering turning to horsemeat to save money, "I can't see why anybody who is contemplating eating horses should be squeamish about rabbits. The idea of that turns me off completely; I don't even feed horsemeat to my dog."

As meat prices have risen, so has interest in rabbit breeding and eating. A Southern California chain of restaurants, called "Mr. Rabbit," is becoming popular.

Since rabbit meat is not that great a bargain in the stores ($1.20 to $1.59), Fritchey is convinced that raising one's own is the only way to beat high prices. "Prices are not going to be low for anything — including horsemeat — if it's left in the hands of the commercial producer."

Not everyone can follow his advice, of course, because some cities — like Sausalito — frown on rabbit growing in the city limits. But others, like San Ra-

A Sharp Quake In Costa Rica

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — A major earthquake shook the border area between Costa Rica and Nicaragua before dawn today, killing at least one person and causing heavy but localized damage in rural areas.

The National Earthquake Information Center in Boulder, Colo., registered the quake's force at 6.7 on the open-ended Richter Scale, fractionally higher than the killer quake that devastated Nicaragua's capital, Manaugua, Dec. 23, 1972.

Officials said the epicenter was located at the city of Tilaran, about 75 miles northwest of San Jose, the capital. The quake zone was located about 120 miles southeast of Managua.

ELECTION ON TUESDAY IS SPOTLIGHTED

On Tuesday most Marinites will have an opportunity to participate in the selection of the men and women who will help set policy for their public school districts.

Other important contests and issues will also be on the ballot.

Power Outage In Southern Marin

A cable failure yesterday resulted in a power outage in Tiburon and part of Belvedere lasting several hours and affecting 3,703 consumers.

The power failed at 9:55 a.m., with most of the customers getting back service by 12:37 p.m. and all by 2:08 p.m., according to Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

During the failure, Tiburon firemen were called out to rescue Letah Mealy of 25 Raleigh Circle, Tiburon, who was trapped in an elevator at 1690 Tiburon Boulevard. The call was at 11:56 a.m. and she was freed in about 35 minutes, firemen said.

Post Card Vote Sparks A Filbuster In Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the past four days the Senate has been debating whether every eligible voter in America ought to be able to register by a simple postcard.

The idea of a national register-by-mail program for federal elections isn't new. The Senate defeated such a bill last year, 46-42.

Fearful that this time there are enough votes to pass it, a bloc of Republicans and southern Democrats have been carrying on a determined filibuster in an effort to kill the bill.

Yesterday, Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., the bill's chief sponsor, said he would file a cloture petition to shut off debate if critics continued "their dilatory tactics."

The bill would create a special office in the Census Bureau to mail postcard-sized voter registration forms to each household every two years.

Eligible voters could simply fill out the card and mail it to their local registrar who would be reimbursed for the processing and tabulating costs by the federal treasury.

The measure is aimed primarily at federal elections but carries a financial incentive for the states to adopt the postcard system to register voters for local and state elections as well.

The Census Bureau has estimated that the program's start-up costs will run about $30 million.

McGee and other supporters say that some 62 million voting age Americans did not vote in last year's election.

They argue that perhaps as many as 40 million do not register to vote because of what McGee called "cumbersome, onerous and unnecessary" local registration procedures. Registration offices are open at inconvenient hours. They are inaccessible to the old, the handicapped and those who do not drive, McCgee says.

The administration opposes the measure, which some say would benefit Democrats by registering large blocks of blue-collar workers who tend to vote Democratic.

But the reasons given by Sen. Hiram Fong, R-Hawaii, who is leading GOP opposition to the bill, are that the measure is "radical," "expensive" and just won't work.

The major cause of millions of citizens not registering is "apathy," he told the Senate.

A Census Bureau survey of 50,000 households after the 1968 presidential election showed that more than half of those not registered—53.3 per cent —"did not register because they were not interested, never got around to registering or disliked politics," Fang said.

Red Abandon Major Highway In Cambodia

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Communist troops today abandoned their positions along a 17-mile stretch of vital Highway 1, field reports said, following 38 consecutive days of pounding by U.S. warplanes.

The field reports said the Communist withdrew to the east bank of the Mekong, leaving the 32 miles of Highway 1 between here and the important base of Neak Luong on the Mekong, plus long stretches of the river's west bank, in government hands. The route is the main highway link between Saigon and Phnom Penh, all but cut off from fuel, water and food supplies since early March. ,

"It looks like the bombing has finally put a damper on their little offensive," said one Western military man. "They've lost their stride now and I think we've got this one licked."

Other military analysts agreed that the momentum, which had carried the Communists to within 15 miles of Phnom Penh during the past 74 days, had been broken and that the Communists now would either retreat into their sanctuary areas to regroup or would concentrate their activities against remaining government strongholds in the outlying provinces.

In Saigon, the Viet Cong warned that any South Vietnamese troop movement into Cambodia to relieve pressure on besieged Phnom Penh would result in "failure."

U.S. B52 bombers and F111 fighter-bombers consentrated their raids today on Highway 1 and on Communist positions round Takeo, a provincial capital 55 miles south of Phnom Penh.

Command spokesman Col. Am Rong said 100 mortar rounds hit Takeo during the night, and early today the Communists started shelling the town with captured U.S. made 105-mm howitzers. The Communists earlier in the day broke through government defense lines in their two-day drive to recapture the embattled provincial capital as fighting continued on.

Cambodian President Nguyen Van Thieu returned from a two-week trip abroad today to a roaring airport welcome and said he and President Nixon agreed that "peace in Vietnam includes peace in Cambodia and Laos."

Saigon's sun-drenched Tan Son Nhut airport was packed with more than 50,000 cheering, flag-waving civil servants, political workers, members of youth groups, school children and ranks of servicemen when Thieu arrived from Korea and Taiwan just before 4 a.m. EST.

Thieu reviewed a military guard of honor and then gave a 20-minute speech.

He said, "The United States has promised us from now to the end of 1973 to give us everything we need to replace what has been destroyed in the war and to form the base for an economic takeoff."

Thieu said, "In San Clemente, President Nixon and I decided that if the Communists continued to bring in weapons and ammunition and to violate the basic provisions of the Paris agreement, we on the allied side would have to take an appropriate reactin."

Nixon Selects New Boss For Census Bureau

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon has nominated Vincent R. Barabba to head the U.S. Census Bureau.

Barabba, 38, chairman of Decision Making Information Inc., of Los Angeles, a firm which did some public opinion polling for Nixon during the 1972 campaign, was named to succeed George Hay Brown who resigned Jan. 30 from the $36,000-a-year job.

Nixon also:

Nominated John M. Porges, 50, a banker who lives at Douglas Manor, N.Y., to be executive director of the Inter-American Development Bank.

Air Crash Blamed On Human Error

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (UPI) — A Navy patrol plane was practicing "touch and go" landings, possibly with a student pilot at the controls, when it collided with a space agency jet in an inflight accident that took 16 lives, military investigators report.

They say it is not clear whether Lt. Stephen A. Schwarting, 28, Santa Clara, Calif., or the unidentified student was flying the P3C Orion sub chaser when the two planes crashed onto a golf course 30 miles south of San Francisco Thursday.

The commander of the Navy's Pacific Air Fleet said yesterday that human error — and not mechanical problems or aircraft failure—was to blame for the mishap.

"Of course, someone made an error," said Rear Adm. Herbert S. Ainsworth. "We have to look to personnel."

The Navy patrol plane, with six men aboard, and NASA's Convair 990 flying laboratory, carrying 11 men, plunged onto the 12th fairway of Sunnyvale Municipal Golf Course and exploded into flames. One Navy airman was thrown free and survived, although he remained in criticial condition with multiple injuries.

The Navy declined to identify the student pilot pending notification of his next of kin of his death.

Ainsworth declined at a news conference at Moffett Field, where the two planes were trying to land, to discuss the exact sequence of events which led to the crash, saying investigators must first examine flight recorders and conversations between the planes and airport tower.

But investigators said the patrol plane, which had been on a routine patrol flight over the Pacific, was practicing "touch and go" landings—landing and taking off without stopping—before the accident.

The NASA plane, a $5 million lab which recently completed a joint three-week study of the Bering Sea with the Russians, was returning from a checkout flight for its new assignmentrecording of sea mammal migrations from the air.

Exploratory Nod Is Given To Santa Barbara Drilling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Interior Department has taken a step toward possible resumption of large-scale oil production in the Santa Barbara Channel off the California coast, where there was a major oil spill in 1969.

Secretary of Interior Walter J. Hickel suspended drilling after the 1969 spill. Production has resumed on five platforms since then.

The Interior Department yesterday authorized oil companies holding federal leases in the channel to "unitize" 34 tracts for purposes of exploratory and production drilling. This means one company would conduct joint drilling operations for the group.

But a spokesman said that in most cases the companies would have to submit plans for approval before beginning even exploratory drilling.

The department said public hearings would probably have to be held and environmental statements prepared and that exploratory drilling probably could not begin until late 1974 or 1975.

On March 31, the department authorized unitization of 20 other tracts by Gulf, Texaco and Standard Oil of California. Drilling on one tract has begun.

In Santa Barbara, Alvin Weingand, chairman of Get Oil Out (GOO), formed after the 1969 spill, said his organization does not object to exploratory drilling as long as there is no further production.

"We can find out what the resources are, and then keep them in reserve for a national crisis," he said.

Diamond Haul

LONDON (UPI) — A bandit hitched a ride on a truck traveling without armed protection at Heathrow Airport yesterday and then stole $1.2 million in diamonds and platinum from the vehicle.

It was one of the biggest robberies ever staged at the giant airport, police said.

A Picasso Stolen

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Authorities searched today for a small painting by Pablo Picasso valued at $85,000 that was stolen from the St. Louis Art Museum.

The painting was discovered missing late Wednesday afternoon, police said, but its disappearance was not revealed until yesterday. Police said the 14 inch by 8 inch painting entitled "Nude" was taken along with its frame from where it was hanging on display with two other Picasso paintings.

The work was done in 1906 during Picasso's rose period.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Pentagon Papers trial, delayed more than two days becuase of a defense attorney's illness, was expected to resume Monday with Daniel Ellsberg telling the jury why he took the Vietnam war documents.

"think tank." But his attorney, Leonard Boudin, 60, who has a heart condition and wears a pacemaker, complained of feeling ill and the trial was adjourned.

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., has accused President Nixon of naming a "Republican hatchet man" to a high Commerce Department post.

"Mr. Nixon misreads his mandate from the people if he thinks it is a license to load his administration with political hacks," said Reuss.

Reagan Task Force Outlay Is Revealed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State welfare and disability insurance funds were spent without legal authority on Gov. Ronald Reagan's tax limitation plan, a report of the state auditor general says.

Although the report was delivered to six members of the Joint Legislative Audit Committee April 6, it has not been released to the public or other legislators.

A copy of the 60-page report obtained by The Associated Press confirms accusations made over the past three weeks by critics of the Republican governor that "proper accounting procedures" were not followed when his administration signed two contracts for $52,000 to develop the tax plan.

But the report raises no new issues and says that the auditor general can neither confirm nor disprove allegations that a total of more than $100,000 in state funds were spent improperly to develop the controversial plan.

Democratic Assemblyman John Burton of San Francisco, who requested the audit, said he believes Republican members of the audit committee are attempting to suppress the report to save Reagan embarrassment.

"It's my understanding that Republican members of the committee won't authorize its release. It's Coombs and Deukmejian," Burton said. "There must be something pretty terrible in it," he added.

Sen. William Coombs of Rialto was reported at home sick and Sen. George Deukmejian of Long Beach denied that there was any intent to suppress the auditor general's report.

"That's not true at all. The report just reached me yesterday, and I haven't had a chance to read it," Deukmejian said.

The report supports allegations that the Reagan administration used welfare and disability insurance funds to pay for salaries and research of members of the task force.

Leadership Of Hongisto Is Attacked

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sheriff Richard Hongisto's new policies have done more harm than good and a special board should be established to help run the sheriff's department, the grand jury said yesterday.

"The overall administration of the sheriff's department leaves a great deal to be desired," the jury said in its 17-page report to the board of supervisors. "The sheriff instituted policies that caused more problems than they solved."

But Hongisto replied: "I am not at all surprised at the report. I deplore the inaccuracies and biased perspective of the report."

The sheriff said he filed suit Thursday "detailing the factors I believe lead to the bias of the grand jury, asking that the grand jury be disbanded."

The report charged that Hongisto's deputies "believe he spends too little time administering his office and too much time on political activity."

Poor administrative coordination between the sheriff and his staff was "one of the main contributory causes" to the Feb. 25 riot at the main jail in San Bruno, the jurors charged.

The report said that prior to the riot there appeared to be "a complete breakdown of inmate discipline due to lack of positive direction from responsible officials.

"Lack of consistency on the part of some deputies, in the enforcement of the alleged rules and regulations, enforced the feeling among inmates that rule infractions would be overlooked," it said.

The grand jury criticized Hongisto's educational rehabilitation program and urged that it be discontinued in its present form.

In their report, the jurors charged that Hongisto had been informed of a "demonstration" planned for Feb. 25 and noted "there is some indication that one or two deputies may have conducted themselves improperly during the riot."

The jury said it wants to make sure Hongisto prosecutes those responsible for the Feb. 25 damage.

Japan Expected To Curb Lumber Buying

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Faced with mounting pressure for a ban on American lumber exports, Japan was reported yesterday ready to voluntarily curb its purchases.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said he had been informed by the State Department of Japan's move, but he had no other details.

Cranston made the disclosure at the start of a third day of hearings by a Senate Banking Subcommittee into legislation he and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., have proposed. It would bar the export of logs from public lands beginning Jan. 1 next year and from private lands by 1977.

Japan's purchase of logs, amounting to 2.7 billion board feet in 1972 and running at a rate of 4 ½ billion board feet this year, have been blamed for skyrocketing prices of lumber. Washington State provides 82 per cent of the logs for export and the remainder comes from other Pacific Coast States.

Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's m e n's and Warehousemen's Union, strongly opposed the proposed ban. His union's members held one-day strikes in West Coast ports to coincide with the subcommittee hearings.

The ban, Bridges told the senators, would mean the loss of 16,000 jobs in Washington and a lesser number in California and Oregon.

While longshoremen picketed outside the building where the hearing was held, Bridges said: "Entire communities might be wiped out if the log export ban passes. Others would obviously be hard hit."

He said the ban would benefit only a handful of mill operators and homebuilders. The problem could be solved.

Reagan Task Force Outlay Is Revealed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State welfare and disability insurance funds were spent without legal authority on Gov. Ronald Reagan's tax limitation plan, a report of the state auditor general says.

Although the report was delivered to six members of the Joint Legislative Audit Committee April 6, it has not been released to the public or other legislators.

A copy of the 60-page report obtained by The Associated Press confirms accusations made over the past three weeks by critics of the Republican governor that "proper accounting procedures" were not followed when his administration signed two contracts for $52,000 to develop the tax plan.

But the report raises no new issues and says that the auditor general can neither confirm nor disprove allegations that a total of more than $100,000 in state funds were spent improperly to develop the controversial plan.

Democratic Assemblyman John Burton of San Francisco, who requested the audit, said he believes Republican members of the audit committee are attempting to suppress the report to save Reagan embarrassment.

"It's my understanding that Republican members of the committee won't authorize its release. It's Coombs and Deukmejian," Burton said. "There must be something pretty terrible in it," he added.

Sen. William Coombs of Rialto was reported at home sick and Sen. George Deukmejian of Long Beach denied that there was any intent to suppress the auditor general's report.

"That's not true at all. The report just reached me yesterday, and I haven't had a chance to read it," Deukmejian said.

The report supports allegations that the Reagan administration used welfare and disability insurance funds to pay for salaries and research of members of the task force.

Leadership Of Hongisto Is Attacked

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sheriff Richard Hongisto's new policies have done more harm than good and a special board should be established to help run the sheriff's department, the grand jury said yesterday.

"The overall administration of the sheriff's department leaves a great deal to be desired," the jury said in its 17-page report to the board of supervisors. "The sheriff instituted policies that caused more problems than they solved."

But Hongisto replied: "I am not at all surprised at the report. I deplore the inaccuracies and biased perspective of the report."

The sheriff said he filed suit Thursday "detailing the factors I believe lead to the bias of the grand jury, asking that the grand jury be disbanded."

The report charged that Hongisto's deputies "believe he spends too little time administering his office and too much time on political activity."

Poor administrative coordination between the sheriff and his staff was "one of the main contributory causes" to the Feb. 25 riot at the main jail in San Bruno, the jurors charged.

The report said that prior to the riot there appeared to be "a complete breakdown of inmate discipline due to lack of positive direction from responsible officials.

"Lack of consistency on the part of some deputies, in the enforcement of the alleged rules and regulations, enforced the feeling among inmates that rule infractions would be overlooked," it said.

The grand jury criticized Hongisto's educational rehabilitation program and urged that it be discontinued in its present form.

In their report, the jurors charged that Hongisto had been informed of a "demonstration" planned for Feb. 25 and noted "there is some indication that one or two deputies may have conducted themselves improperly during the riot."

The jury said it wants to make sure Hongisto prosecutes those responsible for the Feb. 25 damage.

movement from 1966 to 1970, also worked with the Black Panthers.

Turner helped set up health and education programs for the panthers for a year and Miss Yockey was arrested twice during Berkeley demonstrations and went to Cuba in 1970 to harvest sugar cane for Fidel Castro.

The judge's comments followed arguments by defense attorneys, each of whom echoed Mrs. Kline's attorney, Paul Harris, "I have a feeling no one is concerned with rehabilitation and deterrence here," Harris said. "I have a feeling what the judicial system is concerned with is retribution."

Deputy Public Defender Buford L. Toney, representing Turner, urged the judge to "treat him as others have been treated" by giving him probation and nine months or a year in jail.

However, Deputy Dist. Atty. Ernest C. Zunino said the four received a break when the judge reduced the charge over the district Attorney's opposition.

The reduction also did not sit well with the Citizens for Law and Order, a 1,500-member Oakland group, which issued a press release denouncing the reduction as "not in the best interest of justice."

The group's president, Earl W. Huntting said his group is interested because Miss Kline was acquitted in Oakland last August in a celebrated bomb possession case filed after a 22-uear-old Black Panther was killed by an explosion in her car.

Turner testified that they went to the market to take money "because of the frustration we have been going through for the last four to five months with the school."

The Marin City Learning Center, started by parents dissatisfied with education in the Sausalito School District, had dwindled from about 40 children to about a dozen by December because of financial problems, according to Turner.

"I regret what we did only in terms of the means we used to achieve the ends," Turner said.

Turner said it was hoped violence could be avoided during the robbery. Women were used, he said, because "it was almost impossible a police officer would shoot a female." Although he conceded the possibility "somebody could have gotten hurt," he said, "The whole idea was fear, not necessarily violence."

Toney called four charcacter witnesses for Turner, who was married in jail Thursday to Lee Vella Bland, a former Marin City Councilman . The four, including Berkeley City Councilman D'Army Bailey, praised Turner's social work, oth with the Black Panthers and after he left the group last year. All agreed he is not a violent man.

The probation officers, however, concluded the three sentenced yesterday had set themselves up as judges of the community and were willing to do anything for goals they considered worthy.

"I feel the instant offense represents perhaps the pinnacle of her confrontation with society," Mrs. De Cerbo said of Miss Yockey. The probation officials believed that no program at the local level would alter their attitudes.

McGuire noted all four were outstanding students from good families who had rejected what their parents believe in. "They have all become alienated," he said.

Hearing Set On Home Entry

A 21-year-old Fairfax man, allegedly startled inside a San Rafael house by the returning homeowner, is to appear Tuesday in Marin Municipal Court for a preliminary hearing.

Richard Sheldon Knowles was arrested April 6 after Paul Hillesheim of 50 Miraflores Avenue flushed a man from his home. Knowles fled, but Hillesheim cornered him in bushes nearby and turned him over to officers, according to San Rafael police.

A gun taken from the home was found outside, police said.

Hearing Set In Burglary Case

A preliminary hearing has been scheduled for April 24 for a 23-year-old San Anselmo man charged with breaking into a San Rafael glass business.

Ordered to appear in Marin Municipal Court on that date was Flynn William Harris, arrested April 6 by San Rafael police on Fourth Street after witnesses gave them a description of the man who peeled off metal siding of the Golden West Glass Co. at 915 Lincoln Avenue.

Inmate At Quentin Is Found Dead

A San Quentin inmate, who had suffered from terminal cancer, was found dead in his cell yesterday with a red bandana wrapped tightly around his neck.

Prison officials said that a medical officer making his rounds discovered the body of Harry M. Howser, 54, in a locked cell on the third floor of the adjustment center. Howser had refused an operation for a tumor of the left lung, and the coroner is trying to determine whether the tumor or self-strangulation caused the death.

Prison official William Drummond said that Howser was moved from the Correctional Institute at Tehachapi earlier this year for an operation but refused surgery. He was moved to the adjustment center in "protective custody" after he complained to guards he had enemies in the prison and did not feel safe in the hospital, Drummond said.

Howser, originally convicted in Los Angeles for first degree robbery in 1951, was convicted again in 1957 for robbery while on parole. He was sentenced to a term of from one year to life after an escape from Folsom Prison in 1961.

He was paroled twice more but was sent back each time for violating parole.

Felony Charge Is Reduced

The district attorney has reduced a felony burglary charge against Lee Allan Bramson, 24, of San Rafael, because of evidence problems, according to Deputy Dist. Atty. Kathryn D. Mitchell.

Bramson, charged with burglarizing the restaurant he works in, denied the charge and is to appear in Marin Municipal Court Wednesday for a pretrial conference.

San Anselmo police arrested Bramson March 11 when he reported to work in muddy boots that may have made prints on the roof of the Cafe Ambrosia at 112 Spaulding Avenue.

The prints apparently were left by a burglar who smashed a window and took $650 from the cafe's cash register earlier in the day.

Beating Probe Arrest Made

Sheriff's deputies arrested a Marin City woman last night for reportedly beating her husband with a police-type hard leather club in a domestic dispute.

Deputies said that they responded to an anonymous phone call at about midnight and found Marie Dean, 44, of 69 Cole Drive, Apt. 5, fighting with her husband William, 48, in the 300 block of Drake Avenue in Marin City.

She was booked at Marin County Jail on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon and was scheduled to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday. No bail had been set.

Subdivisions Before Council

Subdivision plans for 323 new homes will be considered at the Rohnert Park City Council meeting Monday at 7 p.m. at city hall.

Final maps by Gentry Development Corp., Condiotti Enterprises and Forhim Corp. will be considered. All are in the Country Club Estates area.

The council also will hear a request by Rodavco Inc. for single-family zoning on 18 acres south of the city golf course.

and naval forces had been sighted" near Sidon.

Nearly 12 hours after the start of the spectacular blaze, which destroyed two 100,000-barrel-capacity tanks, typewritten leaflets were deposited in Beirut newspaper offices. They were signed by an organization styling itself the Lebanese Revolutionary Guard and claimed responsibility for the attack.

The leaflet attacked the Lebanese government, currently in a state of crisis because of the resignation of Premier Saeb Salam in protest against army inaction in face of the Israeli strike last Tuesday. It said the Revolutionary Guard aimed at "destroying our national and class enemy with organized and armed violence."

The leaflet said the attack on the oil installations was aimed at the "dishonorable American-Saudi Arabia-Lebanese alliance which is directed against the freedom of our people and its independence." It denounced the "hireling" Beirut government which it said had opened "its borders, coasts and skies to the Israeli enemy" and turned Lebanon "into a focus of corruption and a playground for hirelings and spies. . . ."

RABBITS

fael, Mill Valley, Fairfax and Tiburon permit them, with some restrictions. The County of Marin allows each homeowner or renter to have 12 rabbits on his property.

There are few pitfalls to rabbit breeding, Fritchey said, since the animals are susceptible to very few diseases and are fairly adaptable to normal temperatures.

"The biggest problem is that they reproduce so prolifically. If you are careless with your animals or decide you don't want to use them for meat, you are going to end up with a whole lot of rabbits."

Tiburon Driver Hurt In Crash

A Tiburon man was hospitalized last night with a possible broken pelvis and rib injuries received in a two-car crash at Lucas Valley and Mount Lassen roads in Lucas Valley.

Earl H. Kissinger, 64, of 206 Trestle Glen Terrace, was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital.

The California Highway Patrol said Kissinger's auto, southbound on Mount Lassen and another, northbound on Lucas Valley, collided about 10:45 p.m. The second car was operated by Nicholas W. Dollwet, 16, of 1150 Idylberry Road, San Rafael.

Condition Of Driver Is Good

A Nicasio man was reported in good condition today at Novato General Hospital with a broken arm and facial cuts received in a two-car crash at 10:35 a.m. yesterday near Novato.

The California Highway Patrol said Manuel D. Pinheiro, 24, was hurt when his westbound auto collided head-on with an eastbound vehicle on the Point Reyes-Petaluma Road west of Novato Boulevard.

Officers said the second car, driven by Wallace F. Krueger, 20, of 1109 Third Street, Novato, had crossed the road's center line on a curve.

Plans For New Meat Price Fight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A coalition of consumer groups is threatening to organize two more weeks of food boycotts in May if Congress does not roll back prices to Jan. 10 levels by then.

Leaders of a newly created National Consumer Congress, composed of groups which organized the nationwide meat boycott earlier this month, told a news conference yesterday another meat boycott is being planned for the first week in May and another on fish and poultry for the following week.

Meanwhile, Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz said in Paris that American housewives had succeeded by the April boycott in pulling down beef prices.

"But when I give the housewives credit for bringing down some meat prices, I give them credit for pushing them up," Butz said. He explained that Americans will continue to eat meat and push the prices up again.

Butz, attending a meeting of the 23-nation Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), said European meat prices are higher than in this country.

Mrs. Jan Alfaro, of Logan, Utah, temporary chairman of the consumer coalition, said the May boycotts were authorized at a meeting here Wednesday attended by representatives of 50 boycott groups around the country.

The House will act next week on a bill that would roll back food and other prices and interest rates to March 16 levels. It would return rents to Jan. 10 levels.

Mrs. Alfaro said reverting food prices only to March 16 would not be enough.

"Passage of this bill would only encourage a rise in food prices," she said. "Some of our key commodities are lower today than they were March 16."

Trial Set On Original Count

A Mill Valley man, who had pleaded guilty to a reduced misdemeanor charge in a 1972 shooting, will have a trial after all—on the original felony count.

Judge Henry J. Broderick of Marin Superior Court voided the plea by Ephorn Freeman Jr., 28, because his attorney James Murray argued he is innocent.

Freeman had admitted a misdemeanor charge of using a gun during a quarrel on condition he received no more than 90 days in jail, but must now stand trial on a felony charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

Judge Broderick continued the case to May 7 to set a trial date.

Freeman, a self-employed vitamin salesman, allegedly wounded 21-year-old Charles Dobson of Mill Valley Nov. 17 during an argument in Lytton Square in Mill Valley.

Puppet Show Set At Library

A puppet show in the children's room of the San Rafael Public Library will replace the regular story hour for 4 to 7 year olds at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Puppeteers Kathy Sternberg and Peggy Manuel will act out several stories for the youngsters.

The usual story hour will be postponed to 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, for the one time only.

movement from 1966 to 1970, also worked with the Black Panthers.

Turner helped set up health and education programs for the panthers for a year and Miss Yockey was arrested twice during Berkeley demonstrations and went to Cuba in 1970 to harvest sugar cane for Fidel Castro.

The judge's comments followed arguments by defense attorneys, each of whom echoed Mrs. Kline's attorney, Paul Harris, "I have a feeling no one is concerned with rehabilitation and deterrence here," Harris said. "I have a feeling what the judicial system is concerned with is retribution."

Deputy Public Defender Buford L. Toney, representing Turner, urged the judge to "treat him as others have been treated" by giving him probation and nine months or a year in jail.

However, Deputy Dist. Atty. Ernest C. Zunino said the four received a break when the judge reduced the charge over the district Attorney's opposition.

The reduction also did not sit well with the Citizens for Law and Order, a 1,500-member Oakland group, which issued a press release denouncing the reduction as "not in the best interest of justice."

The group's president, Earl W. Huntting said his group is interested because Miss Kline was acquitted in Oakland last August in a celebrated bomb possession case filed after a 22-uear-old Black Panther was killed by an explosion in her car.

Turner testified that they went to the market to take money "because of the frustration we have been going through for the last four to five months with the school."

The Marin City Learning Center, started by parents dissatisfied with education in the Sausalito School District, had dwindled from about 40 children to about a dozen by December because of financial problems, according to Turner.

"I regret what we did only in terms of the means we used to achieve the ends," Turner said.

Turner said it was hoped violence could be avoided during the robbery. Women were used, he said, because "it was almost impossible a police officer would shoot a female." Although he conceded the possibility "somebody could have gotten hurt," he said, "The whole idea was fear, not necessarily violence."

Toney called four charcacter witnesses for Turner, who was married in jail Thursday to Lee Vella Bland, a former Marin City Councilman . The four, including Berkeley City Councilman D'Army Bailey, praised Turner's social work, oth with the Black Panthers and after he left the group last year. All agreed he is not a violent man.

The probation officers, however, concluded the three sentenced yesterday had set themselves up as judges of the community and were willing to do anything for goals they considered worthy.

"I feel the instant offense represents perhaps the pinnacle of her confrontation with society," Mrs. De Cerbo said of Miss Yockey. The probation officials believed that no program at the local level would alter their attitudes.

McGuire noted all four were outstanding students from good families who had rejected what their parents believe in. "They have all become alienated," he said.

Hearing Set On Home Entry

A 21-year-old Fairfax man, allegedly startled inside a San Rafael house by the returning homeowner, is to appear Tuesday in Marin Municipal Court for a preliminary hearing.

Richard Sheldon Knowles was arrested April 6 after Paul Hillesheim of 50 Miraflores Avenue flushed a man from his home. Knowles fled, but Hillesheim cornered him in bushes nearby and turned him over to officers, according to San Rafael police.

A gun taken from the home was found outside, police said.

Hearing Set In Burglary Case

A preliminary hearing has been scheduled for April 24 for a 23-year-old San Anselmo man charged with breaking into a San Rafael glass business.

Ordered to appear in Marin Municipal Court on that date was Flynn William Harris, arrested April 6 by San Rafael police on Fourth Street after witnesses gave them a description of the man who peeled off metal siding of the Golden West Glass Co. at 915 Lincoln Avenue.

Inmate At Quentin Is Found Dead

A San Quentin inmate, who had suffered from terminal cancer, was found dead in his cell yesterday with a red bandana wrapped tightly around his neck.

Prison officials said that a medical officer making his rounds discovered the body of Harry M. Howser, 54, in a locked cell on the third floor of the adjustment center. Howser had refused an operation for a tumor of the left lung, and the coroner is trying to determine whether the tumor or self-strangulation caused the death.

Prison official William Drummond said that Howser was moved from the Correctional Institute at Tehachapi earlier this year for an operation but refused surgery. He was moved to the adjustment center in "protective custody" after he complained to guards he had enemies in the prison and did not feel safe in the hospital, Drummond said.

Howser, originally convicted in Los Angeles for first degree robbery in 1951, was convicted again in 1957 for robbery while on parole. He was sentenced to a term of from one year to life after an escape from Folsom Prison in 1961.

He was paroled twice more but was sent back each time for violating parole.

Felony Charge Is Reduced

The district attorney has reduced a felony burglary charge against Lee Allan Bramson, 24, of San Rafael, because of evidence problems, according to Deputy Dist. Atty. Kathryn D. Mitchell.

Bramson, charged with burglarizing the restaurant he works in, denied the charge and is to appear in Marin Municipal Court Wednesday for a pretrial conference.

San Anselmo police arrested Bramson March 11 when he reported to work in muddy boots that may have made prints on the roof of the Cafe Ambrosia at 112 Spaulding Avenue.

The prints apparently were left by a burglar who smashed a window and took $650 from the cafe's cash register earlier in the day.

Beating Probe Arrest Made

Sheriff's deputies arrested a Marin City woman last night for reportedly beating her husband with a police-type hard leather club in a domestic dispute.

Deputies said that they responded to an anonymous phone call at about midnight and found Marie Dean, 44, of 69 Cole Drive, Apt. 5, fighting with her husband William, 48, in the 300 block of Drake Avenue in Marin City.

She was booked at Marin County Jail on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon and was scheduled to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday. No bail had been set.

Subdivisions Before Council

Subdivision plans for 323 new homes will be considered at the Rohnert Park City Council meeting Monday at 7 p.m. at city hall.

Final maps by Gentry Development Corp., Condiotti Enterprises and Forhim Corp. will be considered. All are in the Country Club Estates area.

The council also will hear a request by Rodavco Inc. for single-family zoning on 18 acres south of the city golf course.

and naval forces had been sighted" near Sidon.

Nearly 12 hours after the start of the spectacular blaze, which destroyed two 100,000-barrel-capacity tanks, typewritten leaflets were deposited in Beirut newspaper offices. They were signed by an organization styling itself the Lebanese Revolutionary Guard and claimed responsibility for the attack.

The leaflet attacked the Lebanese government, currently in a state of crisis because of the resignation of Premier Saeb Salam in protest against army inaction in face of the Israeli strike last Tuesday. It said the Revolutionary Guard aimed at "destroying our national and class enemy with organized and armed violence."

The leaflet said the attack on the oil installations was aimed at the "dishonorable American-Saudi Arabia-Lebanese alliance which is directed against the freedom of our people and its independence." It denounced the "hireling" Beirut government which it said had opened "its borders, coasts and skies to the Israeli enemy" and turned Lebanon "into a focus of corruption and a playground for hirelings and spies. . . ."

RABBITS

fael, Mill Valley, Fairfax and Tiburon permit them, with some restrictions. The County of Marin allows each homeowner or renter to have 12 rabbits on his property.

There are few pitfalls to rabbit breeding, Fritchey said, since the animals are susceptible to very few diseases and are fairly adaptable to normal temperatures.

"The biggest problem is that they reproduce so prolifically. If you are careless with your animals or decide you don't want to use them for meat, you are going to end up with a whole lot of rabbits."

Tiburon Driver Hurt In Crash

A Tiburon man was hospitalized last night with a possible broken pelvis and rib injuries received in a two-car crash at Lucas Valley and Mount Lassen roads in Lucas Valley.

Earl H. Kissinger, 64, of 206 Trestle Glen Terrace, was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital.

The California Highway Patrol said Kissinger's auto, southbound on Mount Lassen and another, northbound on Lucas Valley, collided about 10:45 p.m. The second car was operated by Nicholas W. Dollwet, 16, of 1150 Idylberry Road, San Rafael.

Condition Of Driver Is Good

A Nicasio man was reported in good condition today at Novato General Hospital with a broken arm and facial cuts received in a two-car crash at 10:35 a.m. yesterday near Novato.

The California Highway Patrol said Manuel D. Pinheiro, 24, was hurt when his westbound auto collided head-on with an eastbound vehicle on the Point Reyes-Petaluma Road west of Novato Boulevard.

Officers said the second car, driven by Wallace F. Krueger, 20, of 1109 Third Street, Novato, had crossed the road's center line on a curve.

Plans For New Meat Price Fight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A coalition of consumer groups is threatening to organize two more weeks of food boycotts in May if Congress does not roll back prices to Jan. 10 levels by then.

Leaders of a newly created National Consumer Congress, composed of groups which organized the nationwide meat boycott earlier this month, told a news conference yesterday another meat boycott is being planned for the first week in May and another on fish and poultry for the following week.

Meanwhile, Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz said in Paris that American housewives had succeeded by the April boycott in pulling down beef prices.

"But when I give the housewives credit for bringing down some meat prices, I give them credit for pushing them up," Butz said. He explained that Americans will continue to eat meat and push the prices up again.

Butz, attending a meeting of the 23-nation Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), said European meat prices are higher than in this country.

Mrs. Jan Alfaro, of Logan, Utah, temporary chairman of the consumer coalition, said the May boycotts were authorized at a meeting here Wednesday attended by representatives of 50 boycott groups around the country.

The House will act next week on a bill that would roll back food and other prices and interest rates to March 16 levels. It would return rents to Jan. 10 levels.

Mrs. Alfaro said reverting food prices only to March 16 would not be enough.

"Passage of this bill would only encourage a rise in food prices," she said. "Some of our key commodities are lower today than they were March 16."

Trial Set On Original Count

A Mill Valley man, who had pleaded guilty to a reduced misdemeanor charge in a 1972 shooting, will have a trial after all—on the original felony count.

Judge Henry J. Broderick of Marin Superior Court voided the plea by Ephorn Freeman Jr., 28, because his attorney James Murray argued he is innocent.

Freeman had admitted a misdemeanor charge of using a gun during a quarrel on condition he received no more than 90 days in jail, but must now stand trial on a felony charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

Judge Broderick continued the case to May 7 to set a trial date.

Freeman, a self-employed vitamin salesman, allegedly wounded 21-year-old Charles Dobson of Mill Valley Nov. 17 during an argument in Lytton Square in Mill Valley.

Puppet Show Set At Library

Puppeteers Kathy Sternberg and Peggy Manuel will act out several stories for the youngsters.

The usual story hour will be postponed to 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, for the one time only.

Plea Of Innocent To Marijuana

A 23-year-old Woodside man has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a felony charge of possessing marijuana and is to appear Tuesday for preliminary hearing.

James Lionel Traube was arrested Sunday at Howard Johnson's Motel on Shoreline Highway.

Louis Jack Katzberg, 25, and Janice Kay Katzberg, 24, both of no known address, were arrested at the same time on suspicion of having drugs for sale and conspiracy, but have not been charged pending further investigation.

Sheriff's Deputy John Goff reportedly found about a pound of suspected pot in the back seat of Traube's car, then went to the motel room housing the Katzbergs and arrested them after he saw traces of white powder on Katzberg's hands and plastic bags of suspected drugs in the bathroom.

Six Killed In Crash Of Plane

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — A twin-engine plane on a test flight for prospective buyers crashed near a dinner theater 20 seconds after takeoff last night, killing all six persons aboard.

The blue and white Cessna 310 appeared to go almost straight up before its lights went out and it fell 500 feet from the end of the runway at Triad Regional Airport, witnesses said.

Deputy Sgt. John Wray said when he arrived at the scene "the plane was totally in flames and the area around it was in flames."

"It was down here on a test flight," said Wray, "and these men were thinking of buying the plane."

THE BYRD MACHINE

An Era Ends In Virginia Politics

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — The Byrd Democratic machine is dead.

For decades, the political machine built by the late Sen. Harry Byrd dominated Virginia politics from the courthouse to the statehouse.

Political pundits have been writing obituaries for the organization since a Republican, Gov. Linwood Holton, took control of the statehouse in 1969 and when Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr. was re-elected in 1970 as an independent rather than face a possible loss in the Democratic primary.

Some observers believed the machine would make a comeback.

But now, in a state were the blessing of the Byrd machine once automatically meant election, not a single candidate filed to run as governor in this year's Democratic primary.

Only two candidates filed for statewide posts as Democrats this year—neither for the governorship.

Virginia's top-ranking Democrat, Attorney General Andrew P. Miller, filed for re-election after turning down party efforts to get him to run for governor, and State Sen. J. Harry Michael of Charlottesville filed for lieutenant governor. Since both are unopposed, there will be no statewide primary.

Holton is prohibited by Virginia's constitution from succeeding himself as governor.

This year's governor's race likely will be between two former Democrats—Lt. Gov. Henry Howell and former Gov. Mills Godwin.

Howell made an unsuccessful bid for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in 1969, campaigning on pocketbook issues with a pledge to "Keep the Big Boys Honest." He garnered support from both liberals and supporters of Alabama Gov. George Wallace.

Howell dropped out of the Democratic party in 1971 when party officials decided to abandon the primary and pick a candidate for lieutenant governor by convention. Running as an independent, he defeated both the Democratic and Republican candidates in the race. Howell will run as an independent again this year.

Godwin, once a lieutenant in the conservative Byrd organization, was Virginia campaign manager for President Nixon in last year's election. He le a conservative stampede out of the party when liberals grabbed control of the state organization.

Godwin has announced he would accept the Republican nomination for governor, but said he would run as an independent if he does not get it. The Republicans choose their candidate by convention this summer—and Godwin is expected to get the nomination easily.

Shooting Case Hearing Set

A preliminary hearing has been scheduled for Tuesday for a 56-year-old Oregon man charged with shooting at an occupied house during a dispute over a dog.

Ordered to appear for hearing in Marin Municipal Court was Edgar Jack Storey of Gresham, arrested April 7 by Corte Madera police.

The police said Storey went to the Alexis Sill home at 11 Birch Court to retrieve a Doberman pinscher dog, but fired three shots through the front door of the home and left.

Hearing For Sailor Canceled

A preliminary hearing for a 26-year-old sailor charged with auto theft was canceled yesterday in favor of a 72-hour commitment to the Marin Community Mental Health Center.

Judge Peter Allen Smith of Marin Municipal Court ordered a psychiatric evaluation of Daniel Leon Welborn and put off setting another hearing on the felony charge until the report is completed.

Welborn, of Treasure Island, was turned over to Novato police April 4 after a highway patrolman stopped him the day before in a car apparently stolen there.

In his pocket were keys to a 1972 Corvette stolen the day before from Empire Chevrolet in Novato, police said.

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Actress Shirley MacLaine and 11 other American women will start a tour of the People's Republic of China next Tuesday to learn more about Chinese women.

The actress said Friday the tour will last several weeks. She said the purpose of the visit is to meet with Chinese women on an informal basis to exchange ideas and information on life-styles.

San Rafael Rec Board Approves Proposed Budget

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Commission has approved a proposed budget for 1973-74 of $441,671, down $771 from this year's $442,382 spending program.

The proposal, which does not include cost-of-living increases for departmental employees, will now be considered by the city council, according to Andrew J. Snyder, parks and recreation director.

Snyder said the proposed budget does not provide for utility and communication costs since these will be included in a nondepartmental account handling such expenses for all city departments.

The parks and recreation commission approved the budget proposal Thursday, Snyder said, adding that commissioners asked that a proposed parks ranger at $886 per month and relocating and refurbishing of the Boyd House at a cost of about $32,000 be studied further. Remodeling of the Boyd House would cost about $20,000 and relocating it to level ground within Boyd Park would cost an additional $12,000, he said.

Proposed expenditures, with this year's figures in parenthesis, are administration, $40,211 ($39,546); parks, $191,541 ($213,147) and recreation, $209,819 ($189,699), he said. Snyder attributed the dip in proposed expenditures for parks to the shift in the utilities and communication account.

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Commission also:

FENCING — Proposed that the city split a $1,600 fee with the San Rafael American Little League for fencing two baseball diamonds at Davidson School.

PEACOCK GAP — Recommended that the city study the feasibility of using the plateau area at the end of McNear Drive within the proposed Peacock Gap Unit 5 subdivision as a park and recreation area.

TENNIS — Said the county should give budgeting priority to a proposal for tennis and sports facilities at the proposed North Bay Front Park, before considering funding of Civic Center fairgrounds.

TOUR — Said the commission will tour all city parks on May 5.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to 8 p.m. May 10 in city hall.

Dominican Is Cataloguing Oriental Books

A collection of some 1,200 volumes on Japan, China and the Pacific area donated to Dominican College is currently being catalogued at the school's Archbishop Alemany Library.

The books, named the Payson J. Treat Collection, were the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Richard M. Davis of San Rafael.

They were collected by the late Professor Treat, Mrs. Davis's uncle, who taught at Stanford University for many years.

Sister Marguerite Stanka, head librarian at the college, said the collection will lead the way to additional courses in Oriental studies at the college, and possibly, a major field of study in the future.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Elderly Women Make Comeback From Life In Geriatric Home

The British Medical Journal recently told of two elderly sisters who were brought back to satisfactory living after spending a short time in a geriatric hospital. Mrs. Y. Z. had lived in London for 40 years. Although in her seventies, she had managed to care for her husband despite her failing memory. When he died suddenly, she became depressed and somewhat demented. As a result, she went to live with her 78-year-old sister, Miss A.B.

BUT MISS A.B. was far from well and hardly able to care for her sister. She complained of increasing weariness and unsteadiness. During the past six months, she had had attacks of pain and stiffness of the neck with headaches. In addition, she developed dizziness on getting out of bed and when bending down or hanging up the laundry. Several years ago, part of her stomach had been removed because of a stubborn peptic ulcer. Miss A. B. blamed her troubles on old age.

The family doctor sent her to a geriatric hospital where a thorough examination revealed several abnormalities. Her brain was not getting enough blood because of hardening and kinking of the arteries in the neck. In addition, she had arthritis of the neck vertebrae. Blood tests also showed that she had pernicious anemia which was treated with vitamin B12 and iron. He also prescribed an orthopedic collar to prevent the vertebral arteries from kinking. Improvement was dramatic.

Meanwhile, the local doctor found her sister, Mrs. Y.Z., in bed where she was determined to remain "partly to keep warm and partly to dream of the dear dead days." Because of her depressed state, hospitalization in the geriatric unit was also advised. Her doctors found that her skin was dry, the pulse slow, and her voice croaky. Tests revealed a very sluggish thyroid gland.

Following thyroxin, she felt better and was more alert. Social workers took care of their financial mess and — should we say "they lived happily ever after."

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to Dr. Van Dellen, c/o the Independent-Journal.

SLOW PULSE

H. writes: My 16-year-old son's pulse is only 50. The doctor says the boy's heart and health are good. Should we check further?

REPLY

Not if the heart and the electrocardiogram are normal. A slow pulse is an asset because the heart works with less effort. In addition, it gets more rest between beats. It is abnromal only when the heart rate cannot speed up to meet the demands of the body during exertion and excitement. The victim faints whenever he tries to walk to run faster. This occurs when the nervous mechanism is distrubed (heart block), a condition detected with the electrocardiogram.

MIGRAINE

E. G. writes: Can young children develop migraine headaches?

REPLY

They can and do. Vomiting, lassitude, paleness, and a family history of this type of headache help in making the diagnosis in infants and young children. Older children are better able to describe the one-sided headaches, spots before the eyes, dizziness, and other discomforts associated with migraine. Tension is a common cause. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on migraine.

ALMANAC

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Today is Saturday, April 14, the 104th day of 1973 with 261 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Jupiter. The evening stars are Venus and Saturn.

British Antarctic explorer Sir James Clark was born April 14, 1800.

On this day in istory:

In 1861, the flag of the Confederacy was raised over Fort Sumter, S.C., as Union troops there surrendered.

In 1865, John Wilkes Booth crept into the box of President Abraham Lincoln at Ford Theater in Washington and shot him. Lincoln died the next morning.

In 1910, President William Howard Taft set a precedent by throwing out the first baseball to open the major league season.

In 1965, 15-year-old Frank Mitchell became the first black page boy in the House of Representatives.

A thought for the day: British novelist Dinah Craik said: "Oh, my son's my son till he gets him a wife, but my daughter's my daughter all her life."

San Rafael air quality yesterday:

Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.

Other areas:

San Francisco, clean air.

San Jose, clean air.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Jail Time On Grand Theft Count

Frank Dewey Haygood, 48, of no fixed address, has been ordered to serve a year in the county jail on a reduced charge of grand theft.

Judge Charles Read Best of Marin Superior Court reduced an armed robbery charge at the suggestion of Deputy Dist. Atty. Raymond E. Gilbert, who also recommended a state prison sentence.

Gilbert said he recommended the reduced charge because of evidence problems.

Haygood was arrested Jan. 22 in Sacramento, a week after Perry H. Stewart, owner of the Barrel House Tavern in San Rafael, was robbed of $1,600 by a man waving a pearl-handled revolver.

Stewart told police he thought the gunman was Haygood although the robber wore a silk stocking over his head. Haygood reportedly frequented the tavern.

Dominican Is Cataloguing Oriental Books

A collection of some 1,200 volumes on Japan, China and the Pacific area donated to Dominican College is currently being catalogued at the school's Archbishop Alemany Library.

The books, named the Payson J. Treat Collection, were the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Richard M. Davis of San Rafael.

They were collected by the late Professor Treat, Mrs. Davis's uncle, who taught at Stanford University for many years.

Sister Marguerite Stanka, head librarian at the college, said the collection will lead the way to additional courses in Oriental studies at the college, and possibly, a major field of study in the future.

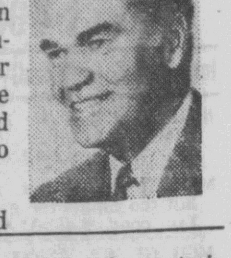
HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Elderly Women Make Comeback From Life In Geriatric Home



The British Medical Journal recently told of two elderly sisters who were brought back to satisfactory living after spending a short time in a geriatric hospital. Mrs. Y. Z. had lived in London for 40 years. Although in her seventies, she had managed to care for her husband despite her failing memory. When he died suddenly, she became depressed and somewhat demented. As a result, she went to live with her 78-year-old sister, Miss A.B.

BUT MISS A.B. was far from well and hardly able to care for her sister. She complained of increasing weariness and unsteadiness. During the past six months, she had had attacks of pain and stiffness of the neck with headaches. In addition, she developed dizziness on getting out of bed and when bending down or hanging up the laundry. Several years ago, part of her stomach had been removed because of a stubborn peptic ulcer. Miss A. B. blamed her troubles on old age.

The family doctor sent her to a geriatric hospital where a thorough examination revealed several abnormalities. Her brain was not getting enough blood because of hardening and kinking of the arteries in the neck. In addition, she had arthritis of the neck vertebrae. Blood tests also showed that she had pernicious anemia which was treated with vitamin B12 and iron. He also prescribed an orthopedic collar to prevent the vertebral arteries from kinking. Improvement was dramatic.

Meanwhile, the local doctor found her sister, Mrs. Y.Z., in bed where she was determined to remain "partly to keep warm and partly to dream of the dear dead days." Because of her depressed state, hospitalization in the geriatric unit was also advised. Her doctors found that her skin was dry, the pulse slow, and her voice croaky. Tests revealed a very sluggish thyroid gland.

Following thyroxin, she felt better and was more alert. Social workers took care of their financial mess and — should we say "they lived happily ever after."

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to Dr. Van Dellen, c/o the Independent-Journal.

SLOW PULSE

H. writes: My 16-year-old son's pulse is only 50. The doctor says the boy's heart and health are good. Should we check further?

REPLY

Not if the heart and the electrocardiogram are normal. A slow pulse is an asset because the heart works with less effort. In addition, it gets more rest between beats. It is abnromal only when the heart rate cannot speed up to meet the demands of the body during exertion and excitement. The victim faints whenever he tries to walk to run faster. This occurs when the nervous mechanism is distrubed (heart block), a condition detected with the electrocardiogram.

MIGRAINE

E. G. writes: Can young children develop migraine headaches?

REPLY

They can and do. Vomiting, lassitude, paleness, and a family history of this type of headache help in making the diagnosis in infants and young children. Older children are better able to describe the one-sided headaches, spots before the eyes, dizziness, and other discomforts associated with migraine. Tension is a common cause. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on migraine.

ALMANAC

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Today is Saturday, April 14, the 104th day of 1973 with 261 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Jupiter. The evening stars are Venus and Saturn.

British Antarctic explorer Sir James Clark was born April 14, 1800.

On this day in istory:

In 1861, the flag of the Confederacy was raised over Fort Sumter, S.C., as Union troops there surrendered.

In 1865, John Wilkes Booth crept into the box of President Abraham Lincoln at Ford Theater in Washington and shot him. Lincoln died the next morning.

In 1910, President William Howard Taft set a precedent by throwing out the first baseball to open the major league season.

In 1965, 15-year-old Frank Mitchell became the first black page boy in the House of Representatives.

A thought for the day: British novelist Dinah Craik said: "Oh, my son's my son till he gets him a wife, but my daughter's my daughter all her life."

San Rafael air quality yesterday:
Oxidants, clean air.
Nitrogen dioxide, clean air.
Carbon monoxide, clean air.
Smoke particles, clean air.
Other areas:
San Francisco, clean air.
San Jose, clean air.

Colorless oxidants, brownish nitrogen dioxide and smoke particles aggravate respiratory diseases. Carbon monoxide causes dizziness, headaches and slows reflexes. Smoke particles come largely from industrial sources, the other three come primarily from motor vehicles.

Jail Time On Grand Theft Count

Frank Dewey Haygood, 48, of no fixed address, has been ordered to serve a year in the county jail on a reduced charge of grand theft.

Judge Charles Read Best of Marin Superior Court reduced an armed robbery charge at the suggestion of Deputy Dist. Atty. Raymond E. Gilbert, who also recommended a state prison sentence.

Gilbert said he recommended the reduced charge because of evidence problems.

Haygood was arrested Jan. 22 in Sacramento, a week after Perry H. Stewart, owner of the Barrel House Tavern in San Rafael, was robbed of $1,600 by a man waving a pearl-handled revolver.

Stewart told police he thought the gunman was Haygood although the robber wore a silk stocking over his head. Haygood reportedly frequented the tavern.

KOREAN STUDENTS — Eager to learn English, Korean students and adults will learn the language from Agapa Movement staff members through the Bible and other evangelistic material.

(World Vision International Photo)

Bible Will Help Koreans Learn To Speak The English Language

It is not unique for the government of an Asian country to want to give its people the opportunity to learn conversational English. But it was definitely unique when Korean educators, under government approval, asked Dr. Joon Gon Kim, director in Korea for Campus Crusade for Christ International, to provide English teachers for the country's high schools, and invited them to use as tools the Bible and Campus Crusade materials.

Dr. Kim eagerly accepted and now "The Korean Project," as it is called, is scheduled to begin in the summer of 1973. Initial plans call for teams—each with 100 teachers, 10 supervisors and a director—to be based in Seoul and, as they become accustomed to Korean culture, to be transferred to other cities. A total staff of approximately 1,000 is anticipated.

Korean Project staff members will participate in the preparations for EXPLO '74, an International Student Congress on Evangelism to be held in Seoul in August, 1974, for an estimated 300,000. Staff will also be available to follow up individuals who respond to the claims of Christ during the 1973 Billy Graham Korea Crusade.

The Korean Project is part of widespread evangelistic efforts by Campus Crusade and other Christian groups and churches to help Korea become the first country in almost 2,000 years to be saturated with the gospel.

The project is an initial thrust of The Agape Movement, a ministry of Campus Crusade which will send Christian specialists—engineers, teachers, agriculture experts, doctors, nurses and others to various countries to help meet spiritual and physical needs of nationals and to train them to communicate their faith in Christ with their own countrymen.

Groundwork for The Korean Project was actually being laid during August, 1971, when more than 10,600 Korean laymen and students attended an evangelistic training institute in Taejon sponsored by Campus Crusade.

During the institute, as conferees were being trained to share their faith in Christ with others, 16,352 Taejon residents indicated that they prayed to receive Christ. Among them were 170 Buddhist high school girls who had volunteered as street guides for the conferees.

The excitement of those who were trained mushroomed as, after the institute, 72 additional county- and city-wide institutes were held across Korea during the remaining three weeks of August.

Because more than one-half (17 million) of South Koreans live in rural areas, an evangelistic Village Plan has also been initiated. One of those reached for Christ through this plan is Kim Yang Sung, a primary school teacher in Hampyung County. Kim received Campus Crusade training in January, 1972, and began to tell people about Christ. Now 59 of his 60 students regularly attend his Sunday school class. So far, 43 per cent of the students' parents have prayed to receive Christ and started to attend church. In addition, nine other teachers who have become Christians through Kim's witness have purchased bicycles and started their own home visitation program.

So now the multiplication process continues as 1,000 English-speaking university graduates are recruited to teach Korean high schoolers. "As evangelicals using English instruction as a vehicle for evangelism," says Bill Bright, Campus Crusade for Christ president, "our goal is to establish bridges of real friendship that will result in innumerable opportunities to share the message of Christ. We will teach the best English possible; and actively seek opportunities to present the gospel."

Tiburon Baptist Players Slate 'Out Of Darkness'

The Tiburon Baptist Players will present "Out of Darkness," a Biblical drama in one act, on April 20 at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of Tiburon Baptist Church. The play was selected by the director, Mrs. Lee Long, because of its timeliness during the Easter season. The drama takes place in Bethsaida at the home of Cornelius in the spring of the year 54 A.D. "Out of Darkness," written by John McGreevey, is based on the scripture from Matthew 28:11-15:

"Now, when they were going, behold, some of the Guard came into the city, and showed unto the High Priests all the things that were done. And when they were assembled with the elders and had taken counsel, they gave much money to the soldiers.

"Saying, say ye that His disciples came by night and stole him away while we slept. And if this comes to the Governer's ears, we will persuade him and secure you. So, they took the money and did as they were taught; and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day."

KOREAN STUDENTS — Eager to learn English, Korean students and adults will learn the language from Agapa Movement staff members through the Bible and other evangelistic material.

Bible Will Help Koreans Learn To Speak The English Language

It is not unique for the government of an Asian country to want to give its people the opportunity to learn conversational English. But it was definitely unique when Korean educators, under government approval, asked Dr. Joon Gon Kim, director in Korea for Campus Crusade for Christ International, to provide English teachers for the country's high schools, and invited them to use as tools the Bible and Campus Crusade materials.

Dr. Kim eagerly accepted and now "The Korean Project," as it is called, is scheduled to begin in the summer of 1973. Initial plans call for teams—each with 100 teachers, 10 supervisors and a director—to be based in Seoul and, as they become accustomed to Korean culture, to be transferred to other cities. A total staff of approximately 1,000 is anticipated.

Korean Project staff members will participate in the preparations for EXPLO '74, an International Student Congress on Evangelism to be held in Seoul in August, 1974, for an estimated 300,000. Staff will also be available to follow up individuals who respond to the claims of Christ during the 1973 Billy Graham Korea Crusade.

The Korean Project is part of widespread evangelistic efforts by Campus Crusade and other Christian groups and churches to help Korea become the first country in almost 2,000 years to be saturated with the gospel.

The project is an initial thrust of The Agape Movement, a ministry of Campus Crusade which will send Christian specialists—engineers, teachers, agriculture experts, doctors, nurses and others to various countries to help meet spiritual and physical needs of nationals and to train them to communicate their faith in Christ with their own countrymen.

Groundwork for The Korean Project was actually being laid during August, 1971, when more than 10,600 Korean laymen and students attended an evangelistic training institute in Taejon sponsored by Campus Crusade.

During the institute, as conferees were being trained to share their faith in Christ with others, 16,352 Taejon residents indicated that they prayed to receive Christ. Among them were 170 Buddhist high school girls who had volunteered as street guides for the conferees.

The excitement of those who were trained mushroomed as, after the institute, 72 additional county- and city-wide institutes were held across Korea during the remaining three weeks of August.

Because more than one-half (17 million) of South Koreans live in rural areas, an evangelistic Village Plan has also been initiated. One of those reached for Christ through this plan is Kim Yang Sung, a primary school teacher in Hampyung County. Kim received Campus Crusade training in January, 1972, and began to tell people about Christ. Now 59 of his 60 students regularly attend his Sunday school class. So far, 43 per cent of the students' parents have prayed to receive Christ and started to attend church. In addition, nine other teachers who have become Christians through Kim's witness have purchased bicycles and started their own home visitation program.

So now the multiplication process continues as 1,000 English-speaking university graduates are recruited to teach Korean high schoolers. "As evangelicals using English instruction as a vehicle for evangelism," says Bill Bright, Campus Crusade for Christ president, "our goal is to establish bridges of real friendship that will result in innumerable opportunities to share the message of Christ. We will teach the best English possible; and actively seek opportunities to present the gospel."

Tiburon Baptist Players Slate 'Out Of Darkness'

The Tiburon Baptist Players will present "Out of Darkness," a Biblical drama in one act, on April 20 at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of Tiburon Baptist Church. The play was selected by the director, Mrs. Lee Long, because of its timeliness during the Easter season. The drama takes place in Bethsaida at the home of Cornelius in the spring of the year 54 A.D. "Out of Darkness," written by John McGreevey, is based on the scripture from Matthew 28:11-15:

"Now, when they were going, behold, some of the Guard came into the city, and showed unto the High Priests all the things that were done. And when they were assembled with the elders and had taken counsel, they gave much money to the soldiers.

"Saying, say ye that His disciples came by night and stole him away while we slept. And if this comes to the Governer's ears, we will persuade him and secure you. So, they took the money and did as they were taught; and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day."

All Must Assist To Curb Burglaries

IT HAS BEEN more than two decades since that memorable day when an irate subscriber called in to complain that because of the I-J his home had been burglarized.

"After my house was burglarized, I found out that a good many of my neighbors for blocks around had been burglarized in previous weeks. You never printed a thing in the paper about it, so I didn't know. Had you done your duty and printed the facts, I would have been properly warned. I would have taken more care to see that all doors were locked and windows secured. I would have put valuables in safe places. It's all your fault at the I-J," said the caller rather heatedly.

In a sense, he was right. One buys a newspaper to keep abreast of what goes on in one's community. The I-J had not reported the rash of burglaries in that subscriber's neighborhood. He had a right to feel cheated.

Come to find out, San Rafael's elected police chief had simply seen to it that I-J reporters did NOT see the burglary reports on file in his office. Election was right around the corner and news of a burglary wave in town would not help his campaign for reelection.

An I-J reporter went to work on the task to find out who in that end of town had recently been burglarized. In a short time he gathered information of 17 previously unreported burglaries.

Unquestionably, there were others besides the irate subscriber who might have saved valuables if only they had known what was going on.

SINCE THAT TIME the I-J has been especially sensitive to its responsibility to warn about the activities of burglars.

Several years ago the incidence of burglary began to climb sharply in Marin. Each was duly reported in the paper. They became so numerous as to become routine.

They became so commonplace that they apparently were largely ignored.

That's when the I-J began collecting them and printing them in a weekly report, so as to present the full dimensions of the situation to our readers.

Now anyone who looks at the paper even casually knows that in the area served by the I-J there are three to four dozen burglaries per week, on an average.

A couple of years ago, a defendant in a burglary trial in Marin testified that picking targets was easy. If he and his accomplices wanted to pick up several new color TV sets, they had only to watch the I-J burglary reports. They surmised that homes reported as having lost color TVs probably would have brand new replacements in a short time.

The I-J responded by eliminating lists of specific items taken. Now we refer only to the loss of "household goods" or "personal effects." We also discontinued the use of specific street addresses, indicating instead only the neighborhood where the burglary has taken place.

An occasional burglary victim objects to the I-J reporting anything at all about his particular case. He wants to be just an anonymous statistic.

Unfortunately, anonymous statistics don't influence the rest of us to take precautions against burglars in the way that a burglary in our neighborhood does — or even the burglary of someone we know in a neighboring town.

WHAT CAN ONE do toward burglary prevention?

Police will usually tell you that your best protection is a suspicious neighbor who will report anything out of the ordinary around your house or property.

If we want to stamp out burglary, then, we need to become suspicious neighbors so as to protect each other.

A burglar alarm system can help, especially those which convey a silent alarm direct to a police station. But such are expensive.

"Operation Identification" is effective in two ways. When you lose property with your social security number engraved on it, you have an infinitely better chance of recovering it. Also, a thief who knows articles are thus identified is less likely to steal them.

Bringing burglary under control is not a job we can expect someone else to do; it will take an effort on the part of each of us.

The sooner we get on with it, the better.

Subterfuge In Tax Measure

On the ballot Tuesday in Bolinas-Stinson School District will be a proposal that is not what it seems. It proposes an increase in the district's general purpose tax limit. However, under new law, a school district is limited in spending per pupil, and can levy only enough taxes to finance the allowable spending.

However, because of a quirk in the law, passage of the measure would give the Bolinas-Stinson district more state funds, as it could pretend the permitted tax total was spent this year and figure per-pupil outlay accordingly.

We call this subterfuge.

Here Are I-J's Recommendations

Here are the Independent-Journal's recommendations in Tuesday's election:

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Any Market May Sell Tough Meat Sometime

I believe Mrs. Emily Johnson (letter Apr. 4) and "those two Congressmen" to be grossly unfair to Safeway markets. I have bought their steaks for years, and have never had a really tough one. However, if one were to name every market in the county where a tough cut of meat was purchased, the list would include practically any market.

Deer Have Bad Life Because Of Hunters

According to Kenneth Whitehead in his dry book about deer, there are approximately eight million deer in the U.S. and one million are killed each year so there must be about one million hunters around the country during the season. The deer are trapped. There are hunters all over and I suppose hidden around the water holes. Probably half of these hunters are novices, leaving wounded deer to suffer. I guess cowards is an apt description.

There are an increasing number of women and children who feel very unhappy over deer hunting and this fact should be recognized by the wild life and game and American Rifle Associations.

During the off-season, poaching and dog packs harass the deer. Also the season starts before half of the baby deer are old enough to cope with fences and dogs and as a result great numbers die or are killed.

Deer are such lovely animals. They do not deserve such a bad life.

The deer population control should be done quickly, efficiently and quietly with a minimum of disturbance.

The offices of game preservation would be better served by women.

Arrigoni Defends Schenck Property Action

This is in reply to a letter to the editor that appeared in your newspaper on April 5, signed by Mr. T. R. Smith of San Anselmo. Part of the letter referred to a recent board of supervisors action on a rezoning and master plan, commonly known as the Schenck property. I would like to clarify the facts and set the record straight.

Unquestionably, it is common knowledge that the land is currently zoned R-1 single family residential, allowing one building site per 10,000 square feet. The owner has the legal right to submit a subdivision map complying with the State Map Act for a single family project for this 15-acre parcel that can legally accommodate 44 units, according to the county planning staff. This would be in compliance with the state and county subdivision laws and would not be appealable to the Board of Supervisors. Only the environmental impact report would be appealable.

In my opinion, the decision of the board of supervisors was far-reaching and protected the interest of the public and the integrity of the Sorich Park neighborhood. First of all, the original project, consisting of 44 units, rezoning from R-1 to RMP residential was denied by the Board of Supervisors and referred back to the planning commission with the instructions that the 15-acre parcel not exceed 20 units on a cluster basis. This works out to almost one unit per acre, with the units to be constructed on the lower two acres of the 15-acre project, leaving approximately 13 acres in permanent open space. . .

I might add that one of the additional advantages of RMP zoning is that it provides for strict architectural control, as well as detailed landscaping maps, and a provision for other amenities which, under R-1 single family zoning, are not possible under the law.

Emergency Help Draws Appreciation

I wish to highly commend two public institutions in this area:

1. Police departments
2. Marin General emergency room staff

Approximately two weeks ago, while at lunch alone, a piece of meat became securely wedged in my lower esophagus. When it became apparent that it was neither going to come up or go down, I prudently decided that I had better seek help. On my way out of the restaurant I spotted a police car in front and explained my predicament to the officers. They gallantly came to my aid and saw that I reached Marin General Emergency in short order. By that time, I was most uncomfortable and extremely grateful for their help and kindness.

Upon my arrival at Marin General, I was immediately taken into the emergency room and helped. This was not the first time I have had occasion to use their facilities and I want to state publicly that I have always found their staff to be most courteous, kind, sympathetic and helpful. This includes everyone from the aids to the technicians and doctors.

I was in such a state that I did not determine whether or not the Officers who came to my aid were city or county employees and I want to take this means of thanking them and letting them know how much I appreciate their efforts on my behalf . . .

Reader Seeks Hidden Meaning In Editorial

The omission in the April 9 editorial of Jack Nixon as a qualified candidate for the San Rafael City Council intrigues me.

For what I'm sure must be a fascinating reason, someone in downtown San Rafael is so worried about a Jack Nixon victory that you don't even mention his name.

One sure thing, the "supposedly sophisticated" I.-J. is editorially deeply involved in "horse-opera" politics, which is what you accused the rest of the town last week.

BARBARA LINDBERG

(The April 9 editorial did not mention two of the six candidates for city council. It recommended election of Lawrence E. Mulryan and Thomas R. O'Toole, but said we would have no qualms about the city's being in good hands should Carl J. Brown and/or Richard C. Fox be elected. This is a straightforward statement that we regard Mulryan and O'Toole as the best candidates, Brown and Fox as next best. — Editor)

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

Women are to blame for the expanding variety and popularity of men's perfumed beauty aids.

Men may not be prettier but they sure are smellier.

It isn't that the gals want their guys to be beautiful. They're just sick and tired of having to select another necktie for every gift occasion.

Nowadays instead of getitng a tie you can't wear, you receive a bottle of goop you're afraid to pour on you.

Time was, a he-man was supposed to smell like tobacco and whiskey. Now that women have taken up smoking and drinking, those scents are effeminate.

Meat Price Climb Shows Need For New Agricultural Policy

WASHINGTON — There is some misconception of what old King Canute was up to when he sat on the shore and ordered the tide to stay back. Under no illustion himself, he was demonstrating to his foolish sycophantic courtiers that he could not control the forces of nature. A parallel may exist here with President Nixon's attempt to hold back prices against what many of his own courtiers believe are the inexorable laws of supply and demand.

As the battle of the beefsteak rages on, grumbling can be heard in the White House directed at Secretary of the Treasury (and general commander of domestic affairs) George P. Shultz. The kindest thing said about him is that he is an ideologue with his feet stuck in concrete.

Whether Shultz was personally responsible for the incredible folly of abandoning the Phase 2 controls, which were working fairly well, for the charade of Phase 3, no one will say. But the onus falls heavily on the commander who now confronts the rising tide of protests, boycotts and a demand in Congress for a rollback of prices to the level of early January.

OBSERVERS with close contacts with consumers feel that neither the boycott nor the freeze on food prices will substantially lower the total the housewife pays at the checkout counter. The latest 2.2 per cent jump in wholesale prices makes the retail climb inevitable for several months ahead. And the most disturbing aspect of that jump was the way in which prices of industrial commodities nearly kept pace with the consumer rise.

One of the ablest consumer advisers, Mrs. Esther Peterson, a former assistant secretary of labor, in talking to housewives finds an awareness that government tinkering with prices is not enough. As one of her audience put it recently:

"I'm a Republican and I don't like to think that it's Mr. Nixon's fault that we're paying $2 a pound for steak and $1.50 a pound for hamburger. Isn't there something wrong with our food policy?"

A great many people are asking whether the present food policy is not a completely outmoded carryover from the scarcity concept of the '30s. That was when, under the New Deal program to raise the level of farm income, millions of acres were taken out of production and farmers — not a few in the large-scale agribusiness — were getting government checks to keep their land idle.

After delaying for more than seven months, Sec. of Agriculture Earl Butz finally began to reverse this scarcity program. But far more must be done to put idle land back into production. At least 50 million acres can become productive again if government moves quickly. Given the great facilities of mechanized agriculture in this country, the problems of food at home and abroad could be manageable.

THE BOYCOTT has served at least to bring into sharp perspective the urgent need for a new national food policy. Last year the chairman of the American Meat Institute, Clifton B. Cox, who is also president of Armour Food, in his annual report pointed to the "feast or famine" character of livestock production and marketing resulting in inefficiency and start-and-stop operations contributing to unemployment and higher prices.

"We need a national policy to stabilize the production of an ample supply of meat for consumers," Cox said.

He laid down several prescriptions for a new policy. Most important was the stabilization of food drains with a government-sponsored storage and insurance program to level off the peaks and valleys in the supply of what is the raw material of meat production. It takes eight pounds of grain to produce one pound of beef.

AGRICULTURE is the most vital element in the American economy. If the full force of productivity on the farms is unleashed, exports of wheat, feed grains and soy beans can go a long way to offset the deteriorating trade balance in the next decade. The red-ink side of the trade ledger will be augmented by 1980 with a deficit in the cost of imported oil of up to $17 billion a year. One estimate is that the abundance of the farms as geared to full production could offset at least half of this.

The hard-working American farmer with the superior mechanization at his command can do a lot to pull us out of the trade slump. But government must be an active partner if this is to come about.

WATERGATE POLL

Republican Leaders Outraged At Nixon's Handling Of Probe

By GODFREY SPERLING Jr.

WASHINGTON — The Watergate affair is stirring up a surprising amount of anti-administration feeling among key Republican leaders in every section of the United States.

A Christian Science Monitor survey of GOP leaders in half the states and in every geographical region finds that some state chairmen and national committeemen are very upset over what they see as the administration's misbehavior, or over what they view as the administration's failure to clear up the Watergate charges —or over a combination of both.

The survey also shows that the public, long apathetic about Watergate, is now becoming aroused. The Watergate affair clearly is emerging as a major issue.

SAID ONE STATE chairman from the West: "I'm darned unhappy with Watergate. I just don't think anyone in any political organization has any business instigating criminal activity by investigating the other side. . .

"The President is in a position to see to it that everything is brought out into the open. And he hasn't and he has had plenty of time to do it."

Said another state chairman, this one from the South:

"For six months no one paid attention to this. But now, with McCord and other developments, people are paying attention. We've got a real problem.

"It's time for someone high up — probably the President — to stand up and say, 'This is what's happened.' It's not what happened at Watergate that's hurting us so much — it's the apparent cover-up by our administration."

In some states, particularly in the South where the Republican party is struggling to gain numbers, leaders said that Watergate was hurting their recruiting.

Many said that Republicans in their states were becoming unhappy with the administration's role in Watergate — and that the apathy over the case had suddenly ended in recent days.

Said one Midwest state chairman:

"There is a growing feeling in this state among Republicans that the administration is involved. Here and there, there is a feeling that Nixon may be involved — but generally this view does not prevail. And there is a heavy feeling that former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell knew all about it. It8really is hurting the Republican party."

Said another Midwest state chairman: "The President ought to facilitate facts coming out — and anyone who is involved should be nailed to the wall.

"Watergate is the biggest issue of all in this state, bigger than inflation. If the issue continues, it is going to hurt those running for office all the way down to the local level. Republicans here are terribly concerned. But they don't think the President was the instigator or was aware of it."

A LARGE NUMBER of the leaders said that Watergate had finally become a major political issue and that — if it continued — it could be most damaging to Republican candidates in 1974.

At a meeting of some 300 Republicans in one Midwest city a few days ago, a speaker asked: "How many of you think that Watergate is now damaging the Republican party?" Almost everyone raised his hand.

In the Southwest, a state chairman put his distress over Watergate this way:

"People, including the Republicans, are getting concerned. They weren't two weeks ago.

"They are concerned about the arrogance or lack of empathy of this administration in realizing that people want to know what is going on.

SEVERAL COMMENTS from leaders in the East illustrate the strong questioning going on about Watergate — and the administration's role — in that region.

Said one: "There's lots of disgust among the Republicans here, as well as concern. Republicans now are saying, 'If there was wrongdoing, let's get it out in the open. If not, let's get it over with.' "

All Must Assist To Curb Burglaries

IT HAS BEEN more than two decades since that memorable day when an irate subscriber called in to complain that because of the I-J his home had been burglarized.

"After my house was burglarized, I found out that a good many of my neighbors for blocks around had been burglarized in previous weeks. You never printed a thing in the paper about it, so I didn't know. Had you done your duty and printed the facts, I would have been properly warned. I would have taken more care to see that all doors were locked and windows secured. I would have put valuables in safe places. It's all your fault at the I-J," said the caller rather heatedly.

In a sense, he was right. One buys a newspaper to keep abreast of what goes on in one's community. The I-J had not reported the rash of burglaries in that subscriber's neighborhood. He had a right to feel cheated.

Come to find out, San Rafael's elected police chief had simply seen to it that I-J reporters did NOT see the burglary reports on file in his office. Election was right around the corner and news of a burglary wave in town would not help his campaign for reelection.

An I-J reporter went to work on the task to find out who in that end of town had recently been burglarized. In a short time he gathered information of 17 previously unreported burglaries.

Unquestionably, there were others besides the irate subscriber who might have saved valuables if only they had known what was going on.

SINCE THAT TIME the I-J has been especially sensitive to its responsibility to warn about the activities of burglars.

Several years ago the incidence of burglary began to climb sharply in Marin. Each was duly reported in the paper. They became so numerous as to become routine.

They became so commonplace that they apparently were largely ignored.

That's when the I-J began collecting them and printing them in a weekly report, so as to present the full dimensions of the situation to our readers.

Now anyone who looks at the paper even casually knows that in the area served by the I-J there are three to four dozen burglaries per week, on an average.

A couple of years ago, a defendant in a burglary trial in Marin testified that picking targets was easy. If he and his accomplices wanted to pick up several new color TV sets, they had only to watch the I-J burglary reports. They surmised that homes reported as having lost color TVs probably would have brand new replacements in a short time.

The I-J responded by eliminating lists of specific items taken. Now we refer only to the loss of "household goods" or "personal effects." We also discontinued the use of specific street addresses, indicating instead only the neighborhood where the burglary has taken place.

An occasional burglary victim objects to the I-J reporting anything at all about his particular case. He wants to be just an anonymous statistic.

Unfortunately, anonymous statistics don't influence the rest of us to take precautions against burglars in the way that a burglary in our neighborhood does — or even the burglary of someone we know in a neighboring town.

WHAT CAN ONE do toward burglary prevention?

Police will usually tell you that your best protection is a suspicious neighbor who will report anything out of the ordinary around your house or property.

If we want to stamp out burglary, then, we need to become suspicious neighbors so as to protect each other.

A burglar alarm system can help, especially those which convey a silent alarm direct to a police station. But such are expensive.

"Operation Identification" is effective in two ways. When you lose property with your social security number engraved on it, you have an infinitely better chance of recovering it. Also, a thief who knows articles are thus identified is less likely to steal them.

Bringing burglary under control is not a job we can expect someone else to do; it will take an effort on the part of each of us.

The sooner we get on with it, the better.

Subterfuge In Tax Measure

On the ballot Tuesday in Bolinas-Stinson School District will be a proposal that is not what it seems. It proposes an increase in the district's general purpose tax limit. However, under new law, a school district is limited in spending per pupil, and can levy only enough taxes to finance the allowable spending.

However, because of a quirk in the law, passage of the measure would give the Bolinas-Stinson district more state funds, as it could pretend the permitted tax total was spent this year and figure per-pupil outlay accordingly.

We call this subterfuge.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Any Market May Sell Tough Meat Sometime

I believe Mrs. Emily Johnson (letter Apr. 4) and "those two Congressmen" to be grossly unfair to Safeway markets. I have bought their steaks for years, and have never had a really tough one. However, if one were to name every market in the county where a tough cut of meat was purchased, the list would include practically any market.

Deer Have Bad Life Because Of Hunters

According to Kenneth Whitehead in his dry book about deer, there are approximately eight million deer in the U.S. and one million are killed each year so there must be about one million hunters around the country during the season. The deer are trapped. There are hunters all over and I suppose hidden around the water holes. Probably half of these hunters are novices, leaving wounded deer to suffer. I guess cowards is an apt description.

There are an increasing number of women and children who feel very unhappy over deer hunting and this fact should be recognized by the wild life and game and American Rifle Associations.

During the off-season, poaching and dog packs harass the deer. Also the season starts before half of the baby deer are old enough to cope with fences and dogs and as a result great numbers die or are killed.

Deer are such lovely animals. They do not deserve such a bad life.

The deer population control should be done quickly, efficiently and quietly with a minimum of disturbance.

The offices of game preservation would be better served by women.

Arrigoni Defends Schenck Property Action

This is in reply to a letter to the editor that appeared in your newspaper on April 5, signed by Mr. T. R. Smith of San Anselmo. Part of the letter referred to a recent board of supervisors action on a rezoning and master plan, commonly known as the Schenck property. I would like to clarify the facts and set the record straight.

Unquestionably, it is common knowledge that the land is currently zoned R-1 single family residential, allowing one building site per 10,000 square feet. The owner has the legal right to submit a subdivision map complying with the State Map Act for a single family project for this 15-acre parcel that can legally accommodate 44 units, according to the county planning staff. This would be in compliance with the state and county subdivision laws and would not be appealable to the Board of Supervisors. Only the environmental impact report would be appealable.

In my opinion, the decision of the board of supervisors was far-reaching and protected the interest of the public and the integrity of the Sorich Park neighborhood. First of all, the original project, consisting of 44 units, rezoning from R-1 to RMP residential was denied by the Board of Supervisors and referred back to the planning commission with the instructions that the 15-acre parcel not exceed 20 units on a cluster basis. This works out to almost one unit per acre, with the units to be constructed on the lower two acres of the 15-acre project, leaving approximately 13 acres in permanent open space. . .

I might add that one of the additional advantages of RMP zoning is that it provides for strict architectural control, as well as detailed landscaping maps, and a provision for other amenities which, under R-1 single family zoning, are not possible under the law.

Emergency Help Draws Appreciation

I wish to highly commend two public institutions in this area:

1. Police departments
2. Marin General emergency room staff

Approximately two weeks ago, while at lunch alone, a piece of meat became securely wedged in my lower esophagus. When it became apparent that it was neither going to come up or go down, I prudently decided that I had better seek help. On my way out of the restaurant I spotted a police car in front and explained my predicament to the officers. They gallantly came to my aid and saw that I reached Marin General Emergency in short order. By that time, I was most uncomfortable and extremely grateful for their help and kindness.

Upon my arrival at Marin General, I was immediately taken into the emergency room and helped. This was not the first time I have had occasion to use their facilities and I want to state publicly that I have always found their staff to be most courteous, kind, sympathetic and helpful. This includes everyone from the aids to the technicians and doctors.

I was in such a state that I did not determine whether or not the Officers who came to my aid were city or county employees and I want to take this means of thanking them and letting them know how much I appreciate their efforts on my behalf . . .

Reader Seeks Hidden Meaning In Editorial

The omission in the April 9 editorial of Jack Nixon as a qualified candidate for the San Rafael City Council intrigues me.

For what I'm sure must be a fascinating reason, someone in downtown San Rafael is so worried about a Jack Nixon victory that you don't even mention his name.

One sure thing, the "supposedly sophisticated" I.-J. is editorially deeply involved in "horse-opera" politics, which is what you accused the rest of the town last week.

This is a straightforward statement that we regard Mulryan and O'Toole as the best candidates, Brown and Fox as next best. — Editor)

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

Women are to blame for the expanding variety and popularity of men's perfumed beauty aids.

Men may not be prettier but they sure are smellier.

It isn't that the gals want their guys to be beautiful. They're just sick and tired of having to select another necktie for every gift occasion.

Nowadays instead of getitng a tie you can't wear, you receive a bottle of goop you're afraid to pour on you.

Time was, a he-man was supposed to smell like tobacco and whiskey. Now that women have taken up smoking and drinking, those scents are effeminate.

Meat Price Climb Shows Need For New Agricultural Policy

WASHINGTON — There is some misconception of what old King Canute was up to when he sat on the shore and ordered the tide to stay back. Under no illustion himself, he was demonstrating to his foolish sycophantic courtiers that he could not control the forces of nature. A parallel may exist here with President Nixon's attempt to hold back prices against what many of his own courtiers believe are the inexorable laws of supply and demand.

As the battle of the beefsteak rages on, grumbling can be heard in the White House directed at Secretary of the Treasury (and general commander of domestic affairs) George P. Shultz. The kindest thing said about him is that he is an ideologue with his feet stuck in concrete.

Whether Shultz was personally responsible for the incredible folly of abandoning the Phase 2 controls, which were working fairly well, for the charade of Phase 3, no one will say. But the onus falls heavily on the commander who now confronts the rising tide of protests, boycotts and a demand in Congress for a rollback of prices to the level of early January.

OBSERVERS with close contacts with consumers feel that neither the boycott nor the freeze on food prices will substantially lower the total the housewife pays at the checkout counter. The latest 2.2 per cent jump in wholesale prices makes the retail climb inevitable for several months ahead. And the most disturbing aspect of that jump was the way in which prices of industrial commodities nearly kept pace with the consumer rise.

One of the ablest consumer advisers, Mrs. Esther Peterson, a former assistant secretary of labor, in talking to housewives finds an awareness that government tinkering with prices is not enough. As one of her audience put it recently:

"I'm a Republican and I don't like to think that it's Mr. Nixon's fault that we're paying $2 a pound for steak and $1.50 a pound for hamburger. Isn't there something wrong with our food policy?"

A great many people are asking whether the present food policy is not a completely outmoded carryover from the scarcity concept of the '30s. That was when, under the New Deal program to raise the level of farm income, millions of acres were taken out of production and farmers — not a few in the large-scale agribusiness — were getting government checks to keep their land idle.

After delaying for more than seven months, Sec. of Agriculture Earl Butz finally began to reverse this scarcity program. But far more must be done to put idle land back into production. At least 50 million acres can become productive again if government moves quickly. Given the great facilities of mechanized agriculture in this country, the problems of food at home and abroad could be manageable.

THE BOYCOTT has served at least to bring into sharp perspective the urgent need for a new national food policy. Last year the chairman of the American Meat Institute, Clifton B. Cox, who is also president of Armour Food, in his annual report pointed to the "feast or famine" character of livestock production and marketing resulting in inefficiency and start-and-stop operations contributing to unemployment and higher prices.

"We need a national policy to stabilize the production of an ample supply of meat for consumers," Cox said.

He laid down several prescriptions for a new policy. Most important was the stabilization of food drains with a government-sponsored storage and insurance program to level off the peaks and valleys in the supply of what is the raw material of meat production. It takes eight pounds of grain to produce one pound of beef.

AGRICULTURE is the most vital element in the American economy. If the full force of productivity on the farms is unleashed, exports of wheat, feed grains and soy beans can go a long way to offset the deteriorating trade balance in the next decade. The red-ink side of the trade ledger will be augmented by 1980 with a deficit in the cost of imported oil of up to $17 billion a year. One estimate is that the abundance of the farms as geared to full production could offset at least half of this.

The hard-working American farmer with the superior mechanization at his command can do a lot to pull us out of the trade slump. But government must be an active partner if this is to come about.

WATERGATE POLL

Republican Leaders Outraged At Nixon's Handling Of Probe

By GODFREY SPERLING Jr.

WASHINGTON — The Watergate affair is stirring up a surprising amount of anti-administration feeling among key Republican leaders in every section of the United States.

A Christian Science Monitor survey of GOP leaders in half the states and in every geographical region finds that some state chairmen and national committeemen are very upset over what they see as the administration's misbehavior, or over what they view as the administration's failure to clear up the Watergate charges —or over a combination of both.

The survey also shows that the public, long apathetic about Watergate, is now becoming aroused. The Watergate affair clearly is emerging as a major issue.

SAID ONE STATE chairman from the West: "I'm darned unhappy with Watergate. I just don't think anyone in any political organization has any business instigating criminal activity by investigating the other side. . .

"The President is in a position to see to it that everything is brought out into the open. And he hasn't and he has had plenty of time to do it."

Said another state chairman, this one from the South:

"For six months no one paid attention to this. But now, with McCord and other developments, people are paying attention. We've got a real problem.

"It's time for someone high up — probably the President — to stand up and say, 'This is what's happened.' It's not what happened at Watergate that's hurting us so much — it's the apparent cover-up by our administration."

In some states, particularly in the South where the Republican party is struggling to gain numbers, leaders said that Watergate was hurting their recruiting.

Many said that Republicans in their states were becoming unhappy with the administration's role in Watergate — and that the apathy over the case had suddenly ended in recent days.

Said one Midwest state chairman:

"There is a growing feeling in this state among Republicans that the administration is involved. Here and there, there is a feeling that Nixon may be involved — but generally this view does not prevail. And there is a heavy feeling that former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell knew all about it. It8really is hurting the Republican party."

Said another Midwest state chairman: "The President ought to facilitate facts coming out — and anyone who is involved should be nailed to the wall.

"Watergate is the biggest issue of all in this state, bigger than inflation. If the issue continues, it is going to hurt those running for office all the way down to the local level. Republicans here are terribly concerned. But they don't think the President was the instigator or was aware of it."

JUPITER IS FIRST

American Cameras Will Explore The Universe

By AL ROSSITER JR.

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn have one thing in common—they all will be visited by American space probes to be launched within five years in a stepped up effort to explore the solar system.

Only the three outermost planets will escape the scrutiny of cameras and other reconnaissance instruments aboard robot spacecraft now on the drawing boards or in extra clean assembly buildings. Uranus, Neptune and Pluto will have to wait until NASA has more money.

Jupiter, the almost star-like colossus 480 million miles from the sun, is the first target of the new series of planetary explorers. One little spacecraft is more than halfway there and a twin, Pioneer 11, was launched last week.

The job of the two pioneers is to pave the way to the fifth planet out from the sun and give man his first closeup look at its brilliantly striped atmosphere and its deadly radiation belts.

Pioneer 10, launched a year ago, is due to fly within 87,000 miles of Jupiter Dec. 3. Pioneer 11 should reach the planet Dec. 5, 1974. Both will take 10 pictures of Jupiter and examine its atmosphere and environment with a dozen other experiments.

Jupiter stands at the gateway to the outer planets and will serve as a junction point for future spacecraft enroute to Saturn and the planets beyond. Pioneer 10 improved the outlook for such flights when it passed safely through the debris-filled asteroid belt last month between Mars and Jupiter. None had gone that far before.

"I think we're firmly convinced now that the asteroid belt presents little hazard to future spacecraft going out to explore the outer planets," said Dr. William H. Kinard, meteoroid specialist from the Langley Research Center, Hampton, Va.

The key to the rapidly expanding interest in the planets is the question that has intrigued thinking men for centuries—is Earth the only place to harbor life?

Many scientists think there must be some kind of life somewhere else and they say Mars is the best place to start looking. This idea was buoyed recently when photographs taken by the Mariner 9 showed that Mars is a dynamic, evolving planet with what seems to be unmistakable evidence it once had great volumes of water flowing across its surface.

There also has been speculation that life might exist in Jupiter's thick and colorful atmosphere. And Cornell University astronomers reported recently they have found that Titan, the largest of the 10 moons of Saturn, has an atmosphere that might support life.

"Our research has shown that at the very least," Dr. Carl Sagan said, "Titan should be littered with the kind of organic molecule which, in the early history of the Earth, led to the origin of life."

The investigations now planned will concentrate on a direct search for biological substances on Mars. Two large unmanned Viking spacecraft will be launched toward the Red Planet in 1975 and land in the warmest, dampest places available there in July and August of 1976.

Each Viking will scratch, dig and probe the Martian surface, then swallow and analyze soil samples for signs of biological activity. The landers also will carry television cameras, Marsquake detectors and weather observatories.

But before the 7,500-pound Vikings reach Mars, the United States will have completed the two Jupiter missions and will have sent a television scout past Venus and Mercury, the two inner planets between Earth and sun. Then, in 1977, two Mariners will be sent on a picture-taking voyage to Jupiter and Saturn.

Russia, too, is active in planetary exploration and the Soviets accomplished the first unmanned landings on both Mars and Venus. The Martian lander, however, failed seconds after touchdown in a raging dust storm in late 1971.

Russian scientists are expected to take advantage of the next Mars launch opportunity next year and send two more spacecraft on Martian landing missions. The United States and Russia agreed in February in Moscow to exchange information on potential Mars landing sites.

The Mariner that will explore Venus and Mercury is set for launch Oct. 10. It will be the first spacecraft to visit two planets.

The plan is to aim Mariner 10 so it passes about 3,300 miles from Venus and then, with an assist from the Venusian gravity, swings out to travel to little Mercury, the planet nearest the sun. The probe is expected to pass within 625 miles of unexplored Mercury and take pictures that should be able to show surface objects as small as a football field.

Mercury is so close to the sun that it is hard to see with Earth telescopes and only general shading characteristics are known. The satellite's pictures are expected to tell man as much about Mercury as the first telescopic observations told man about the moon.

Venus also has never been photographed from up close although it has been explored by seven American and Russian spacecraft over the past 10 years. The Mariner will take several thousand pictures of Venus' dense blanket of clouds and scientists hope the probe will find some openings in the atmospheric veil so it can see through to the Venusian surface.

Mariner 10 should reach Venus in February, 1974, and pass by Mercury in late March. It will circle the sun after passing Mercury and will return to the little planet in September, 1975.

After the Viking Mars expeditions of 1975 and 1976, the space agency plans to devote more attention to Jupiter and Saturn.

Two 1,600-pound Mariners will be launched in August and September, 1977, to scout Jupiter first and then fly on to Saturn using the cosmic billiard ball technique that will be tried out by the Mariner Venus-Mercury flight. It will take the probe more than 1 ½ years to reach Jupiter and about two more years to fly to Saturn, the huge ringed planet that is sixth out from the sun.

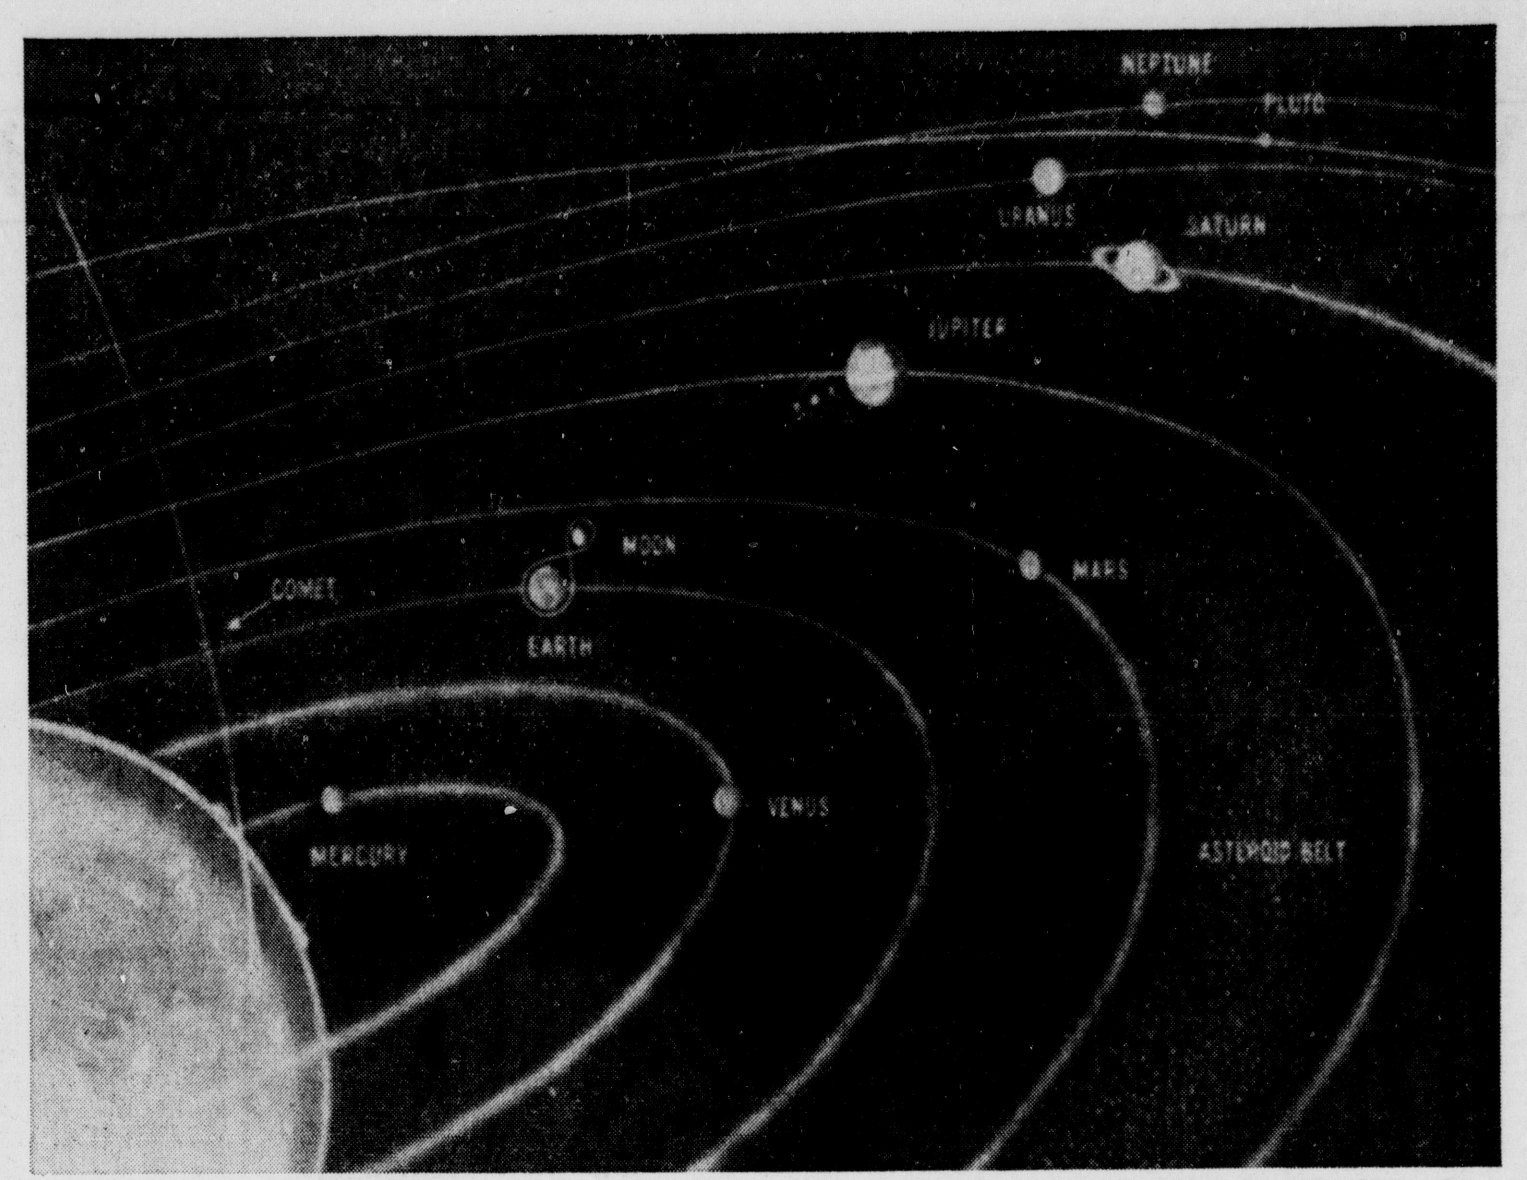
One of the two Mariners' objectives will be to look at the mysterious rings around Saturn. They are generally believed to consist of gas, ice and dust, although two astronomers at the jet propulsion laboratory, Pasadena, Calif., reported earlier this month that radar examination of the planet showed its rings are made of solid chunks of something.

Dr. Richard M. Goldstein said Saturn's rings, girdling the planet from 57,000 to 87,000 miles out, "must be considered an extreme hazard to any spacecraft sent into or near the rings."

Saturn itself is about 72,000 miles in diameter, yet it is believed to be a gaseous body lacking a solid surface and with a density less than water.

NASA's definite planetary exploration plans end with the Mariner Jupiter-Saturn mission, but the agency hopes to begin work next year on another program to explore Venus in 1978 with small Pioneer spacecraft.

Two Pioneers would be wunched with one designed to orbit Venus while the second shoots small instrumented probes into its thick atmosphere. (Advance—into its thick atmosphere.



FUTURE EXPLORATION — This is a schematic of major solar system exploration missions which was drawn up by NASA in 1969. Man has already landed on the moon. Pioneer 10, launched a year ago, is due to fly within 87,000 miles of Jupiter early next December. Pioneer 11, launched last week, should reach the planet in early December of 1974. And two unmanned spacecrafts will be launched toward Mars in 1975.

SCENE IN SOUTH VIETNAM — This is a familiar scene in South Vietnam since the cease-fire agreement. The burning question among the refugees: "When are we going home?" But life does continue as seen through the lens of Christian Science Monitor photographer Gordon N. Converse at a camp at Suoi Nghe, 40 miles southeast of Saigon.

Behind The News

QUESTION: WHEN?

S. Vietnam Refugees Wanting To Go Home

By DANIEL SOUTHERLAND
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

TRUNG LAP — The Vietnam peace agreement supposedly guarantees the civilian population freedom of movement.

But in many villages such as this one in South Vietnam where people want to return to their old homes, the Saigon government is doing everything it can to stop them.

The problem, as the government sees it here, is that the people's former homes — or what is left of them — are located in old battle zones now under the influence of the Viet Cong.

Several years ago, the American Army forced many of the poeple living here to move out of their native hamlets. Now that there is a peace agreement, these people say that they should be allowed to go back to their former lands to farm and to rebuild homes that were destroyed.

At night, the Viet Cong sometimes come to the edges of this village with loudspeakers, urging the people to return to their old homes. Some, of course, have returned. But they complain that they are constantly being harassed by government artillery fire.

During this reporter's visit to Trung Lap, 105-mm. howitzers at a government outpost fired regularly into the surrounding countryside. It was not clear what the gunners' targets were. But there was no evidence of any Viet Cong military activity.

Villagers also complain that government troops have deliberately burned down houses in their old hamlets in order to discourage them from settling there.

Another widespread complaint is that the government has confiscated identification papers as a means of keeping a hold on villagers. Group photographs of each family in this village are being taken, apparently as another means of tightening control.

One villager showed a photograph of himself with his wife and two children. They looked rather unhappy as they stood stiffly under a banner which said: "Down with the Communists for violating the cease-fire." A placard also shown in the picture said: "This family does not accept the Communists."

The man said that he did not know why the picture had been taken. But he complained that he had been forced to pay 250 piasters (about 50 U.S. cents) for it.

One gets varying explanations for all this from government officials.

A hamlet chief said that he did not want people leaving his hamlet and building permanent homes in areas outside the government's control.

He said that it was all right for them to build temporary shacks for farming purposes. But he said that permanent homes would be burned down.

The hamlet chief said that his superiors had ordered him to confiscate identification cards for "security reasons" and in order "to prepare for elections."

The policeman in charge of village security said that his task was "to hold on to our territory and to control the people effectively and not let them go over to the other side."

When asked about the freedom of movement and residence supposedly guaranteed by Article 2 of the peace agreement, government officials often replied that they had not read the text of the agreement.

A young Army lieutenant in charge of "psychological warfare" for the government said that he had read a "summary" of the peace agreement as part of one-week's training he received for his mission in this village, 35 miles northwest of Saigon.

"When people ask us about the peace agreement, we tell them that this is nothing more than a cease-fire in place," the lieutenant said. "And the people are supposed to stay in place."

One middle-aged woman thought at first that this reporter was a member of the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS). She complained loudly about being unable to return to her old fields.

"The soldiers beat us up if we go to our fields," she said. "But if we don't work the fields, we won't have enough to eat."

When told that the reporter was not a member of the ICCS, the disappointed woman said: "We'd heard the international inspectors were going to come here."

The young lieutenant in charge of the government's political warfare here is up against some tough competitors on the Viet Cong side. As best one can determine, they consist mostly of old women, who, thanks to their advanced age, have nothing to fear anymore from anyone.

One such woman in her late 60's, who was obviously a Viet Cong sympathizer, grabbed this reporter by the hand.

"We like the Americans very much," she said, loudly enough so that some of the Vietnamese gathered around could hear. "We like them because they are leaving."

This Week In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The government of President Lon Nol this week broke at least temporarily the Communist stranglehold on the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh.

WASHINGTON — Anne Armstrong, counselor to the President, said she agreed with Sen. Barry Goldwater that fundraising efforts had been affected and that Republican candidates could be hurt next year unless the Watergate controversy was cleared up.

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Before dawn Tuesday, Israeli commandos landed near Beirut, traveled by car to a suburb, where they stormed an apartment building and killed three Arab guerrilla leaders. Only hours before, 10 Arab guerrillas in Nicosia, Cyprus, attacked the home of the Israeli ambassador with a powerful bomb and attacked an El Al jetliner at Nicosia airport.

MOUGINS, France — Pablo Picasso, the Spanish-born titan of 20th century art, died of a heart attack Sunday at his hilltop villa. Picasso, 91, lived the last 10 years a virtual recluse. His extraordinary talents were as diverse as they were bold, and he changed from style to style as the mood hit him. He was entombed without ceremony at one of his French homes. He left a vast estate worth millions but no will because of a superstition about death. WASHINGTON — The administration proposed raising the Federal minimum wage to $2.30 an hour from the current $1.60 by 1976.

WASHINGTON — President Nixon proposed Federal standards that would increase unemployment benefits and extend coverage to 635,000 farm workers. The proposed legislation, which would give most workers at least half their regular pay when out of work, would also prevent states from extending benefits to strikers.

HOCHWALD, Switzerland — A chartered British airliner carrying 144 people, many of them women on a one-day shopping trip, crashed into a hillside in a blizzard, and 105 persons died in the worst Swiss aviation disaster. SPACE CENTER, Houston — Astronaut Charles (Pete) Conrad said this week he is as excited about going on the first U.S. Skylab mission next month as when he walked on the moon in 1969. The Skylab will be moved to the launching pad at Cape Kennedy Monday. The unmanned lab will be launched May 14 with the three-man crew going up in the Apollo command module the following day and dock in space with the huge workshop.

JUPITER IS FIRST

American Cameras Will Explore The Universe

By AL ROSSITER JR.

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn have one thing in common—they all will be visited by American space probes to be launched within five years in a stepped up effort to explore the solar system.

Only the three outermost planets will escape the scrutiny of cameras and other reconnaissance instruments aboard robot spacecraft now on the drawing boards or in extra clean assembly buildings. Uranus, Neptune and Pluto will have to wait until NASA has more money.

Jupiter, the almost star-like colossus 480 million miles from the sun, is the first target of the new series of planetary explorers. One little spacecraft is more than halfway there and a twin, Pioneer 11, was launched last week.

The job of the two pioneers is to pave the way to the fifth planet out from the sun and give man his first closeup look at its brilliantly striped atmosphere and its deadly radiation belts.

Pioneer 10, launched a year ago, is due to fly within 87,000 miles of Jupiter Dec. 3. Pioneer 11 should reach the planet Dec. 5, 1974. Both will take 10 pictures of Jupiter and examine its atmosphere and environment with a dozen other experiments.

Jupiter stands at the gateway to the outer planets and will serve as a junction point for future spacecraft enroute to Saturn and the planets beyond. Pioneer 10 improved the outlook for such flights when it passed safely through the debris-filled asteroid belt last month between Mars and Jupiter. None had gone that far before.

"I think we're firmly convinced now that the asteroid belt presents little hazard to future spacecraft going out to explore the outer planets," said Dr. William H. Kinard, meteoroid specialist from the Langley Research Center, Hampton, Va.

The key to the rapidly expanding interest in the planets is the question that has intrigued thinking men for centuries—is Earth the only place to harbor life?

Many scientists think there must be some kind of life somewhere else and they say Mars is the best place to start looking. This idea was buoyed recently when photographs taken by the Mariner 9 showed that Mars is a dynamic, evolving planet with what seems to be unmistakable evidence it once had great volumes of water flowing across its surface.

There also has been speculation that life might exist in Jupiter's thick and colorful atmosphere. And Cornell University astronomers reported recently they have found that Titan, the largest of the 10 moons of Saturn, has an atmosphere that might support life.

"Our research has shown that at the very least," Dr. Carl Sagan said, "Titan should be littered with the kind of organic molecule which, in the early history of the Earth, led to the origin of life."

The investigations now planned will concentrate on a direct search for biological substances on Mars. Two large unmanned Viking spacecraft will be launched toward the Red Planet in 1975 and land in the warmest, dampest places available there in July and August of 1976.

Each Viking will scratch, dig and probe the Martian surface, then swallow and analyze soil samples for signs of biological activity. The landers also will carry television cameras, Marsquake detectors and weather observatories.

But before the 7,500-pound Vikings reach Mars, the United States will have completed the two Jupiter missions and will have sent a television scout past Venus and Mercury, the two inner planets between Earth and sun. Then, in 1977, two Mariners will be sent on a picture-taking voyage to Jupiter and Saturn.

Russia, too, is active in planetary exploration and the Soviets accomplished the first unmanned landings on both Mars and Venus. The Martian lander, however, failed seconds after touchdown in a raging dust storm in late 1971.

Russian scientists are expected to take advantage of the next Mars launch opportunity next year and send two more spacecraft on Martian landing missions. The United States and Russia agreed in February in Moscow to exchange information on potential Mars landing sites.

The Mariner that will explore Venus and Mercury is set for launch Oct. 10. It will be the first spacecraft to visit two planets.

The plan is to aim Mariner 10 so it passes about 3,300 miles from Venus and then, with an assist from the Venusian gravity, swings out to travel to little Mercury, the planet nearest the sun. The probe is expected to pass within 625 miles of unexplored Mercury and take pictures that should be able to show surface objects as small as a football field.

Mercury is so close to the sun that it is hard to see with Earth telescopes and only general shading characteristics are known. The satellite's pictures are expected to tell man as much about Mercury as the first telescopic observations told man about the moon.

Venus also has never been photographed from up close although it has been explored by seven American and Russian spacecraft over the past 10 years. The Mariner will take several thousand pictures of Venus' dense blanket of clouds and scientists hope the probe will find some openings in the atmospheric veil so it can see through to the Venusian surface.

Mariner 10 should reach Venus in February, 1974, and pass by Mercury in late March. It will circle the sun after passing Mercury and will return to the little planet in September, 1975.

After the Viking Mars expeditions of 1975 and 1976, the space agency plans to devote more attention to Jupiter and Saturn.

Two 1,600-pound Mariners will be launched in August and September, 1977, to scout Jupiter first and then fly on to Saturn using the cosmic billiard ball technique that will be tried out by the Mariner Venus-Mercury flight. It will take the probe more than 1 ½ years to reach Jupiter and about two more years to fly to Saturn, the huge ringed planet that is sixth out from the sun.

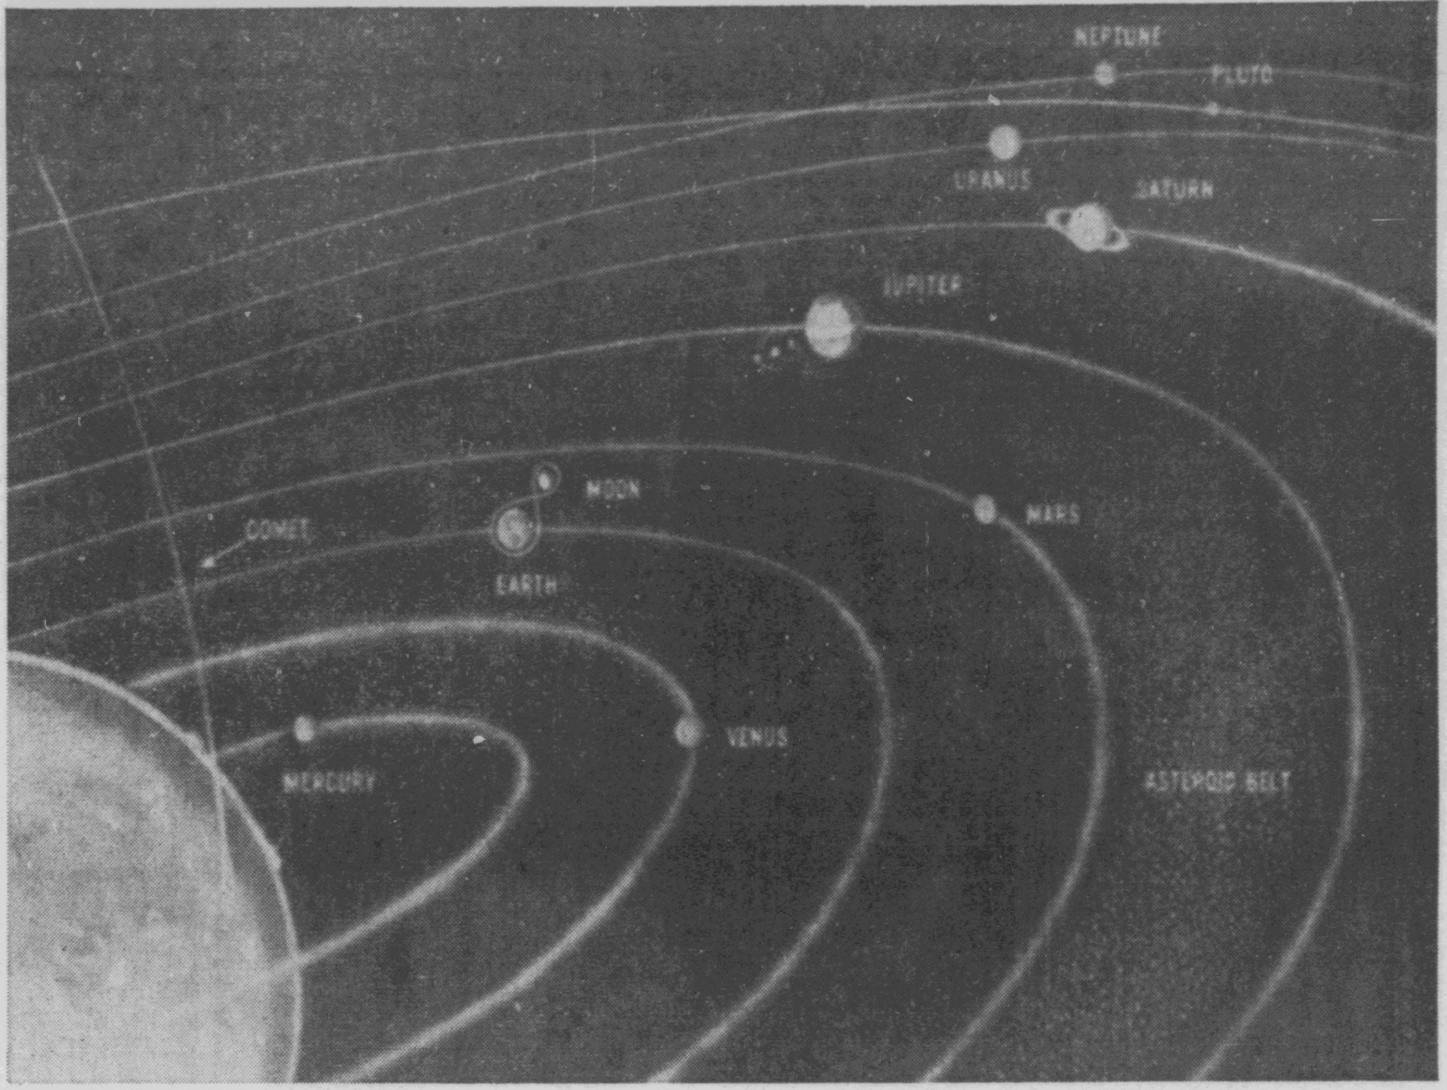
One of the two Mariners' objectives will be to look at the mysterious rings around Saturn. They are generally believed to consist of gas, ice and dust, although two astronomers at the jet propulsion laboratory, Pasadena, Calif., reported earlier this month that radar examination of the planet showed its rings are made of solid chunks of something.

Dr. Richard M. Goldstein said Saturn's rings, girdling the planet from 57,000 to 87,000 miles out, "must be considered an extreme hazard to any spacecraft sent into or near the rings."

Saturn itself is about 72,000 miles in diameter, yet it is believed to be a gaseous body lacking a solid surface and with a density less than water.

NASA's definite planetary exploration plans end with the Mariner Jupiter-Saturn mission, but the agency hopes to begin work next year on another program to explore Venus in 1978 with small Pioneer spacecraft.

Two Pioneers would be wunched with one designed to orbit Venus while the second shoots small instrumented probes into its thick atmosphere. (Advance—into its thick atmosphere.



FUTURE EXPLORATION — This is a schematic of major solar system exploration missions which was drawn up by NASA in 1969. Man has already landed on the moon. Pioneer 10, launched a year ago, is due to fly within 87,000 miles of Jupiter early next December. Pioneer 11, launched last week, should reach the planet in early December of 1974. And two unmanned spacecrafts will be launched toward Mars in 1975.

SCENE IN SOUTH VIETNAM — This is a familiar scene in South Vietnam since the cease-fire agreement. The burning question among the refugees: "When are we going home?" But life does continue as seen through the lens of Christian Science Monitor photographer Gordon N. Converse at a camp at Suoi Nghe, 40 miles southeast of Saigon.

Behind The News

QUESTION: WHEN?

S. Vietnam Refugees Wanting To Go Home

By DANIEL SOUTHERLAND
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

TRUNG LAP — The Vietnam peace agreement supposedly guarantees the civilian population freedom of movement.

But in many villages such as this one in South Vietnam where people want to return to their old homes, the Saigon government is doing everything it can to stop them.

The problem, as the government sees it here, is that the people's former homes — or what is left of them — are located in old battle zones now under the influence of the Viet Cong.

Several years ago, the American Army forced many of the poeple living here to move out of their native hamlets. Now that there is a peace agreement, these people say that they should be allowed to go back to their former lands to farm and to rebuild homes that were destroyed.

At night, the Viet Cong sometimes come to the edges of this village with loudspeakers, urging the people to return to their old homes. Some, of course, have returned. But they complain that they are constantly being harassed by government artillery fire.

During this reporter's visit to Trung Lap, 105-mm. howitzers at a government outpost fired regularly into the surrounding countryside. It was not clear what the gunners' targets were. But there was no evidence of any Viet Cong military activity.

Villagers also complain that government troops have deliberately burned down houses in their old hamlets in order to discourage them from settling there.

Another widespread complaint is that the government has confiscated identification papers as a means of keeping a hold on villagers. Group photographs of each family in this village are being taken, apparently as another means of tightening control.

One villager showed a photograph of himself with his wife and two children. They looked rather unhappy as they stood stiffly under a banner which said: "Down with the Communists for violating the cease-fire." A placard also shown in the picture said: "This family does not accept the Communists."

The man said that he did not know why the picture had been taken. But he complained that he had been forced to pay 250 piasters (about 50 U.S. cents) for it.

One gets varying explanations for all this from government officials.

A hamlet chief said that he did not want people leaving his hamlet and building permanent homes in areas outside the government's control.

He said that it was all right for them to build temporary shacks for farming purposes. But he said that permanent homes would be burned down.

The hamlet chief said that his superiors had ordered him to confiscate identification cards for "security reasons" and in order "to prepare for elections."

The policeman in charge of village security said that his task was "to hold on to our territory and to control the people effectively and not let them go over to the other side."

When asked about the freedom of movement and residence supposedly guaranteed by Article 2 of the peace agreement, government officials often replied that they had not read the text of the agreement.

A young Army lieutenant in charge of "psychological warfare" for the government said that he had read a "summary" of the peace agreement as part of one-week's training he received for his mission in this village, 35 miles northwest of Saigon.

"When people ask us about the peace agreement, we tell them that this is nothing more than a cease-fire in place," the lieutenant said. "And the people are supposed to stay in place."

One middle-aged woman thought at first that this reporter was a member of the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS). She complained loudly about being unable to return to her old fields.

"The soldiers beat us up if we go to our fields," she said. "But if we don't work the fields, we won't have enough to eat."

When told that the reporter was not a member of the ICCS, the disappointed woman said: "We'd heard the international inspectors were going to come here."

The young lieutenant in charge of the government's political warfare here is up against some tough competitors on the Viet Cong side. As best one can determine, they consist mostly of old women, who, thanks to their advanced age, have nothing to fear anymore from anyone.

One such woman in her late 60's, who was obviously a Viet Cong sympathizer, grabbed this reporter by the hand.

"We like the Americans very much," she said, loudly enough so that some of the Vietnamese gathered around could hear. "We like them because they are leaving."

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Enthusiasm Noted In Market Trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices moved higher in stepped-up trading on the New York Stock Exchange this week, buoyed to a great extent by investor enthusiasm over better-than expected first quarter earnings reports.

The Dow Jones average of 30 blue-chip industrial stocks gained 28.29 to 959.36, including an advance of 16.40 Monday. This marked the biggest daily leap by the widely followed indicator since it picked up 17.01 points on March 27.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock index, a more broadly based indicator than the Dow, gained 2.80 to 112.08, while the NYSE index managed a 1.42 advance to 59.65. Advances far outnumbered declines, 1,155 to 604, among the 1,958 total issues on the tape.

Turnover, which has been particularly meager for the past month, picked up this week. Analysts said the increased trading was a good indication the market's rally had real buying support. Volume came to 76,173,505 shares, compared with 62,073,806 last week and with 99,533,836 during the same week a year ago.

Early in the week, before first quarter earnings reports began circulating Wall Street, the market got most of its mileage out of investor hopes for some form of wage and price controls. Inflation has been a chief market depressant ever since mid-January—when President Nixon announced Phase III.

Investors' worries focused on inflation's effect on interest rates. When interest rates climb, so does the cost of borrowing money. The primary damage, therefore, is inflation can bring on a tight money situation that threatens economic expansion.

Short-term interest rates started to decline Tuesday, the same day first quarter earnings results began rolling into Wall Street. Prices advanced and volume picked up.

The market remained comfortably in the black until Thursday. Investors then apparently decided to cash in some profits and do a turn on the sidelines. The marked declined again Friday.

Analysts and brokers generally remained optimistic, however. They attributed the market's retreat to a typical pause

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Enthusiasm Noted In Market Trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices moved higher in stepped-up trading on the New York Stock Exchange this week, buoyed to a great extent by investor enthusiasm over better-than expected first quarter earnings reports.

The Dow Jones average of 30 blue-chip industrial stocks gained 28.29 to 959.36, including an advance of 16.40 Monday. This marked the biggest daily leap by the widely followed indicator since it picked up 17.01 points on March 27.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock index, a more broadly based indicator than the Dow, gained 2.80 to 112.08, while the NYSE index managed a 1.42 advance to 59.65. Advances far outnumbered declines, 1,155 to 604, among the 1,958 total issues on the tape.

Turnover, which has been particularly meager for the past month, picked up this week. Analysts said the increased trading was a good indication the market's rally had real buying support. Volume came to 76,173,505 shares, compared with 62,073,806 last week and with 99,533,836 during the same week a year ago.

Early in the week, before first quarter earnings reports began circulating Wall Street, the market got most of its mileage out of investor hopes for some form of wage and price controls. Inflation has been a chief market depressant ever since mid-January—when President Nixon announced Phase III.

Investors' worries focused on inflation's effect on interest rates. When interest rates climb, so does the cost of borrowing money. The primary damage, therefore, is inflation can bring on a tight money situation that threatens economic expansion.

Short-term interest rates started to decline Tuesday, the same day first quarter earnings results began rolling into Wall Street. Prices advanced and volume picked up.

The market remained comfortably in the black until Thursday. Investors then apparently decided to cash in some profits and do a turn on the sidelines. The marked declined again Friday.

Analysts and brokers generally remained optimistic, however. They attributed the market's retreat to a typical pause

WEEK IN BUSINESS

following a sharp advance and found additional encouragement in the fact the selling was light.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co., the nation's most widely held stock, was most active this week and 2 ⅛ higher at 53 on volume of 991,100 shares. Trading in the issue included a block of 250,000 shares crossing at 52 on Tuesday.

Borden Inc. followed with an addition of ¾ to 23 ⅝ on turnover of 769,200 shares. The bulk of the issue's volume came on Friday with a block trade of 662,300 shares at 23 ¼.

S.S. Kresge was third and 2 ¼ lower at 36 ⅜ on 744,800 shares.

Occidental Petroleum was actively traded and 2 ⅛ higher at 12 ⅜ on 619,800 shares. The company announced Thursday it had signed a barter agreement worth $8 billion with the Soviet Union over a 20-year period for chemical fertilizer.

RCA added 2 ¼ among a higher group of broadcasting stocks. A financial newspaper Wednesday quoted a Wall Street analyst as saying the group's recent losses were due primarily to technical problems and they should be in the vanguard of any market advance.

Electronics and computers were mostly higher as IBM added 6 ¼, Burroughs 8 ⅝ and Control Data 5 ⅛. Both Burroughs and Control Data were among those companies reporting sharply higher first quarter net income.

Polaroid added 4 ⅝, Xerox 4 ⅜ and Corning Glass 4 ½ among the mixed glamors, while Itek dropped 5 ¼, Levits Furniture 2 ¾ and CurtiwsWright 2 ⅞.

Airlines advanced. Delta gained 4 ¼, TWA 3 ½, KLM and Flying Tiger 2 apiece and American 1 ¼.

General Motors added 2 ¼ and Ford 3 in the higher motors. GM said Monday a passenger car turbine engine might meet 1976 emission control standards. Also, Wednesday the Environmental Protection Agency allotted a one-year extension to the automobile industry for 1975 emission standards.

DuPont added 6 ½ among the chemicals and Monsanto 4 ⅝, Dow 3 ⅞, Eastman Kodak 3 and Allied Chemical 2. DuPont Tuesday reported sharply higher first quarter net. Many analysts said the DuPont report actually triggered the stock market rally.

Superior lost 9 and Natomas 6 ⅛ among the mixed oils. Atlantic Richfield added 4, Exxon 3 ¼ and Texaco 2 ¼.

U.S. Steel added 1 ¼ to pace its group, while General Dynamics lost 1 ⅞ and United Aircraft added 1 in the mixed aircrafts.

Rails generally were higher in fractions.

Woodland Man Bound Over In Burglary Case

Frank Joseph Grace, 26, of Woodland is to appear Wednesday in Marin Superior Court after being bound over on a felony burglary charge.

Judge Peter Allen Smith of municipal court ordered the appearance Thursday after hearing evidence against Grace, but dismissed an identical charge against Christopher Jay Wootton, 19, of San Rafael, when Deputy Dist. Atty. Michael A. Gridley said he wanted more time to investigate the case.

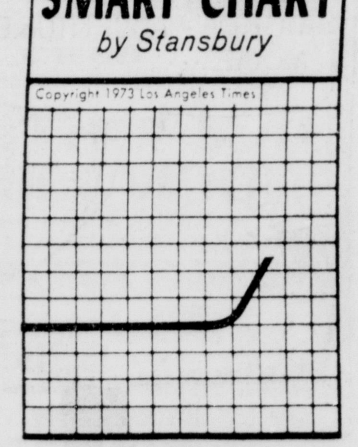
The two were arrested March 27 after delivering a stereo, two speaks and two radios taken in a burglary to Al's Used Furniture at 634 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael.

The store owner, Frank Albert Tatum, 64, of San Anselmo, was also arrested, but has not been charged.

State Bar Picks New President

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles attorney Seth M. Hufstedler has been elected president of the State Bar of California for 1973-74.

Hufstedler was elected by the 15-member board of governors and will succeed Los Angeles attorney Leonard S. Janofsky at the close of the State Bar annual meeting Sept. 10-14 in Anaheim, a spokesman said yesterday.



"We abandoned cheerful refunds."

following a sharp advance and found additional encouragement in the fact the selling was light.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co., the nation's most widely held stock, was most active this week and 2 ⅛ higher at 53 on volume of 991,100 shares. Trading in the issue included a block of 250,000 shares crossing at 52 on Tuesday.

Borden Inc. followed with an addition of ¾ to 23 ⅝ on turnover of 769,200 shares. The bulk of the issue's volume came on Friday with a block trade of 662,300 shares at 23 ¼.

S.S. Kresge was third and 2 ¼ lower at 36 ⅜ on 744,800 shares.

Occidental Petroleum was actively traded and 2 ⅛ higher at 12 ⅜ on 619,800 shares. The company announced Thursday it had signed a barter agreement worth $8 billion with the Soviet Union over a 20-year period for chemical fertilizer.

RCA added 2 ¼ among a higher group of broadcasting stocks. A financial newspaper Wednesday quoted a Wall Street analyst as saying the group's recent losses were due primarily to technical problems and they should be in the vanguard of any market advance.

Electronics and computers were mostly higher as IBM added 6 ¼, Burroughs 8 ⅝ and Control Data 5 ⅛. Both Burroughs and Control Data were among those companies reporting sharply higher first quarter net income.

Polaroid added 4 ⅝, Xerox 4 ⅜ and Corning Glass 4 ½ among the mixed glamors, while Itek dropped 5 ¼, Levits Furniture 2 ¾ and CurtiwsWright 2 ⅞.

Airlines advanced. Delta gained 4 ¼, TWA 3 ½, KLM and Flying Tiger 2 apiece and American 1 ¼.

General Motors added 2 ¼ and Ford 3 in the higher motors. GM said Monday a passenger car turbine engine might meet 1976 emission control standards. Also, Wednesday the Environmental Protection Agency allotted a one-year extension to the automobile industry for 1975 emission standards.

DuPont added 6 ½ among the chemicals and Monsanto 4 ⅝, Dow 3 ⅞, Eastman Kodak 3 and Allied Chemical 2. DuPont Tuesday reported sharply higher first quarter net. Many analysts said the DuPont report actually triggered the stock market rally.

Superior lost 9 and Natomas 6 ⅛ among the mixed oils. Atlantic Richfield added 4, Exxon 3 ¼ and Texaco 2 ¼.

U.S. Steel added 1 ¼ to pace its group, while General Dynamics lost 1 ⅞ and United Aircraft added 1 in the mixed aircrafts.

Rails generally were higher in fractions.

Woodland Man Bound Over In Burglary Case

Frank Joseph Grace, 26, of Woodland is to appear Wednesday in Marin Superior Court after being bound over on a felony burglary charge.

Judge Peter Allen Smith of municipal court ordered the appearance Thursday after hearing evidence against Grace, but dismissed an identical charge against Christopher Jay Wootton, 19, of San Rafael, when Deputy Dist. Atty. Michael A. Gridley said he wanted more time to investigate the case.

The two were arrested March 27 after delivering a stereo, two speaks and two radios taken in a burglary to Al's Used Furniture at 634 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael.

The store owner, Frank Albert Tatum, 64, of San Anselmo, was also arrested, but has not been charged.

HOW TO PLAY WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Sometimes A Finesse Is Not Best Way To Develop Tricks

A finesee is not always the best way to develop tricks in a suit. You may get better results by taking your high cards and giving up a trick or two. The principle is illustrated by a hand played some years ago in an intercollegiate contest.

A TEMPTATION

When the ten of clubs is led you are tempted to win in dummy and finesse with the queen of spades. As the cards lie, this loses to the king, and you can't get to dummy often enough to clear the spades and cash them. It's unlucky that neither of the red queens will serve as an entry to dummy, but there's no need to rely on luck in this hand.

WIN IN HAND

The best play is to win the first club trick in your own hand. Lead the ace of spades and give up the queen of spades to the king.

You can reach dummy with the jack of clubs to give up another spade to the jack. And then you can get back to dummy with the king of clubs to cash the last two spades.

When you're working with such a weak suit, count the number of times you must lead it and see if you can get to the correct hand often enough to do so. This sort of planning takes you a few seconds longer at the beginning of the hand but saves you minutes of helpless scrambling later on.

SOME TROUBLE

Incidentally, if West has four spades headed by the king-jack, he could give you some trouble by refusing to take his king when you lead the queen of spades. The effect would be much as though you had tried a spade finesse and succeeded, so even in this unlikely situation it would still pay to refuse the spade finesse.

Deadline For Loans Extended

The Small Business Administration has extended the deadline for filing applications for loans to repair flood damage in Marin to May 10, Gilbert Montano, regional director, announced yesterday.

Montano said that under the SBA's disaster program, loans of up to $50,000 to replace homes or up to $10,000 for replacing of furnishings are available.

President Nixon included Marin County in those areas in California declared disaster areas after heavy winter floods.

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Sometimes A Finesse Is Not Best Way To Develop Tricks

A finesee is not always the best way to develop tricks in a suit. You may get better results by taking your high cards and giving up a trick or two. The principle is illustrated by a hand played some years ago in an intercollegiate contest.

A TEMPTATION

When the ten of clubs is led you are tempted to win in dummy and finesse with the queen of spades. As the cards lie, this loses to the king, and you can't get to dummy often enough to clear the spades and cash them. It's unlucky that neither of the red queens will serve as an entry to dummy, but there's no need to rely on luck in this hand.

WIN IN HAND

The best play is to win the first club trick in your own hand. Lead the ace of spades and give up the queen of spades to the king.

MARIN PANORAMA — This sweeping view of Southern Marin is from a hillside on the southwestern boundary of the Gerbode Preserve, 2,138 acres of Marin County headlands that will be a wilderness classroom for county school children. To the right are Richardson Bay and the northern part of Sausalito and Marin City. To the left is some of the rolling terrain that make up the preserve, bought last year by Nature Conservancy and destined for use as an environmental education area.

Dixie District Eyes Kindergarten Drop

A sharp decline in kindergarten enrollment in the Dixie School District has clouded class scheduling next year, Supt. Clifford W. Campbell said yesterday.

Some 323 pupils were registered for kindergarten classes last year, Campbell said, and 389 showed up on opening day for classes. Only 258 have registered for kindergarten this year, he added, predicting that about 330 - or a dip of 69 over last year - will show up on opening day this year.

"It means we don't know how many kindergarten classes to schedule," he said, adding plans for staffing schools hinge on known registration of pupils.

Although kindergarten registrations closed April 6, Campbell said all parents who want to enroll children should "go immediately to their local elementary school and register."

Alioto Leaves On 'Working Vacation'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Mayor Joseph L. Alioto and his wife left yesterday on a month-long "working vacation" to Europe and Israel.

One of his stops will be in Moscow, where he will meet with Mayor Vladimir Promyslov. He will discuss trade and possible exchange of film festival motion pictures.

FINAL MARINCELLO CHAPTER

Wilderness Classroom Nears Reality

By PAUL LIBERATORE

Bucking along a washboard road climbing a grassy hill behind Sausalito, a hawk wheels on an air current and a red fox scrambles in front of the car and disappears in a clump of brush.

To the east, brown Sacramento River currents mix with bay waters in Racoon Straights and beyond in Richmond, the sun glints on the metal shell of a moving BART train that vanishes eerily into a tunnel. Behind the orange towers of the Golden Gate Bridge is a sweeping view of San Francisco from the East Bay to Land's End.

From the top of the hill to the northwest is the Gerbode Preserve, 2,138 acres of wind-swept Marin County headlands that are to become the wilderness classroom for county school children.

"You can really dream up here," said Virgil Hollis, county superintendent of schools, whose dream it was that Marincello renamed the Gerbode Preserve after the late conservationist Martha Gerbode when the Nature Conservancy bought it in 1972, be opened for use by the schools in a sweeping environmental education plan.

The Marin County Board of Education this month agreed to lease Marincello from the conservancy, a private conservation organization, capping one of the bitterest and longest conservation fights in Bay Area history.

Nine years ago the land was destined to become a "new town," the brain child of the late Thomas Frouge, who was enchanted with the planned community concept that was the trend at the early 1960s.

The land, Frouge said, would be the site of a community housing 20,000 persons. There also would be commercial development and light industry.

The development was successfully blocked for six years in the courts and in May 1971 the conservancy took an option to buy the property from Gulf Oil Corp. for $6.5 million.

It was about this time that Hollis was kicking around the idea of using the land for environmental education with old friend Huey Johnson of Mill Valley, president of the trust for public land of the conservancy, who agreed that Marincello couldn't be put to a better use.

Hollis assigned the task of developing the environmental education plan to Gene Turtle, administrative assistant for the county schools, and Daniel Campbell, environmental consultant to the Ross and Kentfield school districts.

The 34-page plan, describing the land and its history and outlining its many possibilities for educational use, was presented to the county board April 2, which budgeted $21,205 for its first year of operation.

"Students will be able to see for miles from the hilltop," Campbell said, "but will be able to get the feeling of complete wilderness and spaciousness down in the valley."

A unique feature, Hollis pointed out, is that the pristine headlands are close to a large metropolitan center which will make them easily accessible to schools throughout the Bay Area.

(The preserve will be used by Marin County schools initially, but plans are to open it to other counties after the first year.)

It eventually will be acquired by the National Park Service as part of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, but the county schools offich has been assured that it will continue to be set aside for environmental education.

According to the plan, the preserve could be used for nature study at several levels, from simple "discovery walks" by preschool children to field experiments and long-range, in-depth studies by the natural science departments of the College of Marin and other institutions of higher learning.

The land is ideal for thoughtful, close-up studies, said Campbell, because of its subtle beauty. Contrasted with the immensity of Muir Woods or the compleity of Bolinas Lagoon, "it tells the whole story very quietly," he said.

Four distinct ecosystems exist within the preserve, including a broad-leaf forest, coastal chaparral, rolling grasslands and a marsh that gradually evolves from freshwater — where streams converge at the valley floor — to saltwater near Rodeo Lagoon, outside the preserve's western tip.

Beyond the lagoon, teeming with saltwater plant life, fish and birds, are the tidepools, beaches and sea caves of Cronkhite Beach.

From the hilltops, the entire Bay Area is visible. "A teacher could spend hours discussing land use practices and the history of Mill Valley, Sausalito, Tiburon. . . ," the plan suggests.

Hollis and others hope to obtain the abandoned barracks and buildings of Fort Cronkhite which bound the preserve for use as lecture halls and classrooms, perhaps even for sleeping quarters for students on overnight trips or extended studies.

Other uses might be for experimental tree farms, animal husbandry, weather stations, astronomy, mapping and art, painting and photography classes.

"Our general philosophy is not to try to import existing programs," explained Turtle. "We must allow our minds to become as rangy as the land and let people create the structure."

Hollis said the first groups of children will be allowed on the preserve July 1.

In contrast to its future as an educational resource for studenta snd educators are the crumbling Marincello gates, the only part of Thomas Frouge's dream town that ever was built.

Behind the Spanish-style gates with their tile roofs is what is now called "the road to nowhere," the Marincello that never was to be, but might better be renamed "the road to somewhere," for the young minds that are to come.

22-Year-Old Sentenced To State Prison

A 22-year-old San Francisco man, convicted of robbery and auto theft, was sentenced yesterday to state prison by Judge Henry J. Broderick of Marin Superior Court.

The judge sent Eddie Wheatley Jr. to prison despite the plea of Deputy Public Defender Larry K. Heon for a commitment to the Synanon Foundation. "You put him in state prison, you are writing him off," Heon said.

Wheatley, whose record shows several theft convictions, has a history of insanity, but two court-appointed psychiatrists found him legally sane in this case.

Novato police arrested Wheatley last Nov. 30, minutes after a man said he threw 48-year-old Rita P. Steppler to the ground on Grant Avenue and grabbed her purse containing $11. Officers found Wheatley and the purse in a car parked nearby and discovered the car was stolen hours before in Santa Rosa.

A jury convicted Wheatley last month in a trial before visiting Judge Nat A. Agliano of Monterey County.

Case Goes To Superior Court

A 28-year-old Sonoma man has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on a felony burglary count.

Municipal Court Judge Peter Allen Smith ordered Eugene Boehm to appear Wednesday after hearing the evidence against him.

Boehm was arrested Jan. 24 after 19-year-old Mark Falch gave police a description of an intruder in his home at 23 Stetson Avenue, Corte Madera. Boehm's car was stopped on Tamalpais Avenue, police said.

A second charge of carrying a concealed weapon was dismissed because Deputy Dist. Atty. Michael A. Gridley told the judge the gun taken from Boehm did not work.

PICKETS TONIGHT?

Opera Diva's Strip Miffs Bourbon Street

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — When opera diva Carol Neblett takes off her clothes again tonight in the name of art, some miffed strippers may be picketing the performance in the name of justice.

They can't dance naked, they say, so the blonde soprano shouldn't be allowed to sing naked.

Which is exactly what she does in Massenet's 1894 opera "Thais," which premiered before a sellout crowd Thursday night and will be performed for the second, and last, time before a standing-roomonly audience tonight.

At the end of Act I, Miss Neblett, playing the defiant Thais who is converted by a flesh-hating Christian monk who loses his own soul in the process of saving hers, tries to corrupt her savior by offering him herself. She takes off all her clothes, to cries of "Bravo! Bravo!" from the audience.

But a few blocks away on Bourbon Street, observers are not so appreciative.

"I think if anybody had any sense, they'd go down to the opera house and picket it," Robin Delaune, a Bourbon Street stripper, said yesterday.

Strippers in New Orleans have to wear G-strings and strategically paced discs called pasties.

But did Miss Delaune see no difference between a naked diva and a naked stripper?

"She's singing. That's all," she said.

"If they're going to harass us about it, they should close them down like they close us down," said Jerry Sanflippo, manager of a strip emporiumqcalled Papa Joe's. "If they're going to take their clothes off, there's no difference."

He said former New Orleans Mayor Victor Schiro and current Mayor Moon Landrieu were among the applauding dignitaries at the opera.

"Maybe it's who you know or what city hall likes," Sanflippo said glumly.

Panel Supports Buying Of Land On Mt. Burdell

The Novato Citizens' Open Space Committee has urged the city to buy 2,200 acres on Mount Burdell.

The committee recommended during a public hearing Thursday that the park and recreation commission include the item in its 1973-74 budget, according to Edward Adams, park and recreation director.

The recommendation came after a study of 6,000 acres on the mountain. The proposed open space would be on the top and southern slope that faces Novato.

oThe commission delayed a decision on the proposal until a public hearing April 25, when information on cost of the land will be available from commission staff, Adams said.

Interior Secretary Is Leaving Stanford

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Interior Secretary Roges C. B. Morton responded "very well" to seven weeks of radiation treatment for prostate cancer, according to Stanford Medical Center.

The hospital said yesterday that "there is every reason to be optimistic" about the condition of the 58-year-old cabinet member. Morton will return to Washington after a brief period of recuperation.

MARIN PANORAMA — This sweeping view of Southern Marin is from a hillside on the southwestern boundary of the Gerbode Preserve, 2,138 acres of Marin County headlands that will be a wilderness classroom for county school children. To the right are Richardson Bay and the northern part of Sausalito and Marin City. To the left is some of the rolling terrain that make up the preserve, bought last year by Nature Conservancy and destined for use as an environmental education area.

FINAL MARINCELLO CHAPTER

Wilderness Classroom Nears Reality

By PAUL LIBERATORE

Bucking along a washboard road climbing a grassy hill behind Sausalito, a hawk wheels on an air current and a red fox scrambles in front of the car and disappears in a clump of brush.

To the east, brown Sacramento River currents mix with bay waters in Racoon Straights and beyond in Richmond, the sun glints on the metal shell of a moving BART train that vanishes eerily into a tunnel. Behind the orange towers of the Golden Gate Bridge is a sweeping view of San Francisco from the East Bay to Land's End.

From the top of the hill to the northwest is the Gerbode Preserve, 2,138 acres of wind-swept Marin County headlands that are to become the wilderness classroom for county school children.

"You can really dream up here," said Virgil Hollis, county superintendent of schools, whose dream it was that Marincello renamed the Gerbode Preserve after the late conservationist Martha Gerbode when the Nature Conservancy bought it in 1972, be opened for use by the schools in a sweeping environmental education plan.

The Marin County Board of Education this month agreed to lease Marincello from the conservancy, a private conservation organization, capping one of the bitterest and longest conservation fights in Bay Area history.

Nine years ago the land was destined to become a "new town," the brain child of the late Thomas Frouge, who was enchanted with the planned community concept that was the trend at the early 1960s.

The land, Frouge said, would be the site of a community housing 20,000 persons. There also would be commercial development and light industry.

The development was successfully blocked for six years in the courts and in May 1971 the conservancy took an option to buy the property from Gulf Oil Corp. for $6.5 million.

It was about this time that Hollis was kicking around the idea of using the land for environmental education with old friend Huey Johnson of Mill Valley, president of the trust for public land of the conservancy, who agreed that Marincello couldn't be put to a better use.

Hollis assigned the task of developing the environmental education plan to Gene Turtle, administrative assistant for the county schools, and Daniel Campbell, environmental consultant to the Ross and Kentfield school districts.

The 34-page plan, describing the land and its history and outlining its many possibilities for educational use, was presented to the county board April 2, which budgeted $21,205 for its first year of operation.

"Students will be able to see for miles from the hilltop," Campbell said, "but will be able to get the feeling of complete wilderness and spaciousness down in the valley."

A unique feature, Hollis pointed out, is that the pristine headlands are close to a large metropolitan center which will make them easily accessible to schools throughout the Bay Area.

(The preserve will be used by Marin County schools initially, but plans are to open it to other counties after the first year.)

It eventually will be acquired by the National Park Service as part of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, but the county schools offich has been assured that it will continue to be set aside for environmental education.

According to the plan, the preserve could be used for nature study at several levels, from simple "discovery walks" by preschool children to field experiments and long-range, indepth studies by the natural science departments of the College of Marin and other institutions of higher learning.

The land is ideal for thoughtful, close-up studies, said Campbell, because of its subtle beauty. Contrasted with the immensity of Muir Woods or the compleity of Bolinas Lagoon, "it tells the whole story very quietly," he said.

Four distinct ecosystems exist within the preserve, including a broad-leaf forest, coastal chaparral, rolling grasslands and a marsh that gradually evolves from freshwater — where streams converge at the valley floor — to saltwater near Rodeo Lagoon, outside the preserve's western tip.

Beyond the lagoon, teeming with saltwater plant life, fish and birds, are the tidepools, beaches and sea caves of Cronkhite Beach.

From the hilltops, the entire Bay Area is visible. "A teacher could spend hours discussing land use practices and the history of Mill Valley, Sausalito, Tiburon. . . ," the plan suggests.

Hollis and others hope to obtain the abandoned barracks and buildings of Fort Cronkhite which bound the preserve for use as lecture halls and classrooms, perhaps even for sleeping quarters for students on overnight trips or extended studies.

Other uses might be for experimental tree farms, animal husbandry, weather stations, astronomy, mapping and art, painting and photography classes.

"Our general philosophy is not to try to import existing programs," explained Turtle. "We must allow our minds to become as rangy as the land and let people create the structure."

Hollis said the first groups of children will be allowed on the preserve July 1.

In contrast to its future as an educational resource for studenta snd educators are the crumbling Marincello gates, the only part of Thomas Frouge's dream town that ever was built.

Behind the Spanish-style gates with their tile roofs is what is now called "the road to nowhere," the Marincello that never was to be, but might better be renamed "the road to somewhere," for the young minds that are to come.

22-Year-Old Sentenced To State Prison

A 22-year-old San Francisco man, convicted of robbery and auto theft, was sentenced yesterday to state prison by Judge Henry J. Broderick of Marin Superior Court.

The judge sent Eddie Wheatley Jr. to prison despite the plea of Deputy Public Defender Larry K. Heon for a commitment to the Synanon Foundation. "You put him in state prison, you are writing him off," Heon said.

Wheatley, whose record shows several theft convictions, has a history of insanity, but two court-appointed psychiatrists found him legally sane in this case.

Novato police arrested Wheatley last Nov. 30, minutes after a man said he threw 48-year-old Rita P. Steppler to the ground on Grant Avenue and grabbed her purse containing $11. Officers found Wheatley and the purse in a car parked nearby and discovered the car was stolen hours before in Santa Rosa.

A jury convicted Wheatley last month in a trial before visiting Judge Nat A. Agliano of Monterey County.

Case Goes To Superior Court

A 28-year-old Sonoma man has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on a felony burglary count.

Municipal Court Judge Peter Allen Smith ordered Eugene Boehm to appear Wednesday after hearing the evidence against him.

Boehm was arrested Jan. 24 after 19-year-old Mark Falch gave police a description of an intruder in his home at 23 Stetson Avenue, Corte Madera. Boehm's car was stopped on Tamalpais Avenue, police said.

A second charge of carrying a concealed weapon was dismissed because Deputy Dist. Atty. Michael A. Gridley told the judge the gun taken from Boehm did not work.

PICKETS TONIGHT?

Opera Diva's Strip Miffs Bourbon Street

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — When opera diva Carol Neblett takes off her clothes again tonight in the name of art, some miffed strippers may be picketing the performance in the name of justice.

They can't dance naked, they say, so the blonde soprano shouldn't be allowed to sing naked.

Which is exactly what she does in Massenet's 1894 opera "Thais," which premiered before a sellout crowd Thursday night and will be performed for the second, and last, time before a standing-roomonly audience tonight.

At the end of Act I, Miss Neblett, playing the defiant Thais who is converted by a flesh-hating Christian monk who loses his own soul in the process of saving hers, tries to corrupt her savior by offering him herself. She takes off all her clothes, to cries of "Bravo! Bravo!" from the audience.

But a few blocks away on Bourbon Street, observers are not so appreciative.

"I think if anybody had any sense, they'd go down to the opera house and picket it," Robin Delaune, a Bourbon Street stripper, said yesterday.

Strippers in New Orleans have to wear G-strings and strategically paced discs called pasties.

But did Miss Delaune see no difference between a naked diva and a naked stripper?

"She's singing. That's all," she said.

"If they're going to harass us about it, they should close them down like they close us down," said Jerry Sanflippo, manager of a strip emporiumqcalled Papa Joe's. "If they're going to take their clothes off, there's no difference."

He said former New Orleans Mayor Victor Schiro and current Mayor Moon Landrieu were among the applauding dignitaries at the opera.

"Maybe it's who you know or what city hall likes," Sanflippo said glumly.

Panel Supports Buying Of Land On Mt. Burdell

The Novato Citizens' Open Space Committee has urged the city to buy 2,200 acres on Mount Burdell.

The committee recommended during a public hearing Thursday that the park and recreation commission include the item in its 1973-74 budget, according to Edward Adams, park and recreation director.

The recommendation came after a study of 6,000 acres on the mountain. The proposed open space would be on the top and southern slope that faces Novato.

oThe commission delayed a decision on the proposal until a public hearing April 25, when information on cost of the land will be available from commission staff, Adams said.

Interior Secretary Is Leaving Stanford

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Interior Secretary Roges C. B. Morton responded "very well" to seven weeks of radiation treatment for prostate cancer, according to Stanford Medical Center.

The hospital said yesterday that "there is every reason to be optimistic" about the condition of the 58-year-old cabinet member. Morton will return to Washington after a brief period of recuperation.

Dixie District Eyes Kindergarten Drop

A sharp decline in kindergarten enrollment in the Dixie School District has clouded class scheduling next year, Supt. Clifford W. Campbell said yesterday.

Some 323 pupils were registered for kindergarten classes last year, Campbell said, and 389 showed up on opening day for classes. Only 258 have registered for kindergarten this year, he added, predicting that about 330 - or a dip of 69 over last year - will show up on opening day this year.

"It means we don't know how many kindergarten classes to schedule," he said, adding plans for staffing schools hinge on known registration of pupils.

Although kindergarten registrations closed April 6, Campbell said all parents who want to enroll children should "go immediately to their local elementary school and register."

Alioto Leaves On 'Working Vacation'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Mayor Joseph L. Alioto and his wife left yesterday on a month-long "working vacation" to Europe and Israel.

One of his stops will be in Moscow, where he will meet with Mayor Vladimir Promyslov. He will discuss trade and possible exchange of film festival motion pictures.

Students Knock Schools Regarding Sex Education

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California youngsters want to learn more about sex, less about physical fitness.

Those were the conclusions of a student advisory group/report presented to the State Board of Education yesterday. The students urged that school curriculum be correspondingly changed and that pupils be given greater freedoms under a "student bill of rights."

The students, from high schools throughout the state, said local districts have been "hesitant" to provide informative sex education courses, adding that current textbooks were "difficult to relate to" and "outdated."

They also complained of "a great lack of informative, objective sex education in the home."

The group said the need for sex and family life information was pointed out by the growing number of illegitimate births and the increasing rate of venereal disease.

The students presented their suggestions to the board in a series of resolutions. Board members said they would consider the proposals but took no action.

Suzie Vaughn of Orange High School in Orange County read the sex education resolution. She said her biology text contained one "tiny chapter" on sex education which the teacher "whizzed" right through.

The physical education proposal called for elimination of mandatory gym classes in the 11th and 12th grades. It urged they be replaced by "more diversified and innovative courses."

The "Student Bill of Rights" called for bans on short hair requirements for boys, corporal punishment and "arbitrary searches and seizures."

It declared that students have, among others, the following rights:

To determine their own appearance, including the style of hair and clothing.

To see their own school files and to be notified about adverse comments which are placed in them.

To wear political buttons or symbols, form political organizations and distribute political leaflets or newspapers.

On the request for more sex education, board member David Hubbard said the board has done about all it can to implement sex education in schools.

He noted that a new, updated sex education textbook, "Human Sexuality," is being prepared by the board.

'Original Residents' Block Wounded Knee

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (UPI) — A group of Oglala Sioux Indians, who say they are "original residents of Wounded Knee," blocked the main road to the village yesterday to protest being ousted from their homes by other Indians occupying the hamlet.

Government forces maintained a perimeter around the village and government negotiators tried to get the Indians to remove the roadblock, established outside the perimeter.

But the Indians vowed not to let food or medical supplies pass into the hands of the Indians occupying the village until the confrontation is ended.

Federal negotiator Stanley Pottinger flew by helicopter to the roadblock Friday and met with the group's spokesmen, Woody Richards and John Hussman, in an effort to persuade them to remove the blockade.

Richards said the group was protesting the American Indian Movement (AIM) takeover that ousted them, from their homes 46 days ago, and what they called the Justice Department's inability to end the armed confrontation.

They also said the government should compensate the original residents of the village for damage to their property and the loss of their homes since the occupation began Feb. 27.

Most of the Indians at the roadblock, Pottinger said, are residents of Wounded Knee and "some are concerned relatives."

Pottinger, an assistant U.S. attorney general, told them the Justice Department wants to end the occupation of the village "without bloodshed or loss of life."

He said he was sympathetic to their reasons for establishing the roadblock, but warned, "If you put yourself in the position of obstructing a federal officer, even if your intentions are the best, then you are violating a federal statute."

Richards said the roadblock would remain up until the armed occupation ended. Before the meeting with Pottinger was over, Richards and Hussman agreed to allow U.S. marshals, FBI agents and Community Relations Service (CRS) workers to pass through en route to the government's roadblock closer to the village.

However, the two Indians said all CRS cars would be searched, and food and medical supplies would be prevented from going through.

"If they want medical and food supplies," Huaamsn said, "they should come out and get it. They're getting better medical aid down there than we are on the outside, and they're getting it free."

A Suicide Barrier For Span Is Back

An old proposal to erect a suicide barrier on the Golden Gate Bridge was revived yesterday, apparently with enough votes by bridge district directors to assure its construction this time. (See other bridge story, page 1.)

The proposal, booted about for 23 years got as far as a preliminary design two years ago, but was shelved indefinitely.

The issue was revived at an unannounced meeting on April 4 of the board's special suicide committee, which urged the board to adopt a policy to proceed with the project "as soon as possible."

The recommendation, backed by dozens of organizations and individuals at yesterday's packed board meeting, was approved, 12-5. Two of Marin's three representatives on the board split, with Supervisor Michael Wornum voting with the majority and San Rafael Mayor C. Paul Bettini with the minority. Dean N. Meyer of Mill Valley was absent.

The board's action fell well short of agreeing to spend the $750,000 estimated for the actual construction, but it did ask the finance-auditing committee to review spending $67,500 to complete design and wind-tunnel testing of the barrier. The committee was given 30 days to report its recommendation back to the board.

The project would replace the chest-high railings with an eight-foot barrier made of thin vertial tension rods six inches apart. It would be topped with an angled rail too difficult to grasp long enough to climb over.

According to bridge officials, 477 persons are known to have jumped to their deaths from the span since it opened in 1937.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

RIDERS — Received a staff report that average weekday patronage during March was 22,980 on district buses and 2,337 on the Sausalito ferry.

DRYDOCK — Accepted a $14,715 bid from Todd Shipyards Corp., Alameda, to drydock the Sausalido ferry on April 25.

BUSES — Received a staff report that 16,432 district buses crossed the bridge during March, up 21 per cent over the same month last year.

NEW YORK — Authorized directors Meyer and L. E. Castner of Sonoma County to attend an insurance conference in New York.

WEIGHT — Approved 50 changes in the design of the three new ferries being built in San Diego, most of them designed to reduce unexpected weight problems that would have slowed the ferries below the required 25 knots.

DRIVERS — Approved hiring an additional 12 drivers to prevent a cutback in commuter service.

STUDY — Referred back to committee a proposed $231,000 study of future fare and toll hikes.

Deadline Set On Auditions

Actors, singers and dancers who wish to audition for the College of Marin Summer Theater 73 must call the college drama department before April 27.

The summer program will include productions of "Inherit the Wind" and "The Fantastiks."

Auditions will be held April 28, with rehearsals beginning June 11.

Those participating in the program may receive college credit.

Students Knock Schools Regarding Sex Education

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California youngsters want to learn more about sex, less about physical fitness.

Those were the conclusions of a student advisory group/report presented to the State Board of Education yesterday. The students urged that school curriculum be correspondingly changed and that pupils be given greater freedoms under a "student bill of rights."

The students, from high schools throughout the state, said local districts have been "hesitant" to provide informative sex education courses, adding that current textbooks were "difficult to relate to" and "outdated."

They also complained of "a great lack of informative, objective sex education in the home."

The group said the need for sex and family life information was pointed out by the growing number of illegitimate births and the increasing rate of venereal disease.

The students presented their suggestions to the board in a series of resolutions. Board members said they would consider the proposals but took no action.

Suzie Vaughn of Orange High School in Orange County read the sex education resolution. She said her biology text contained one "tiny chapter" on sex education which the teacher "whizzed" right through.

The physical education proposal called for elimination of mandatory gym classes in the 11th and 12th grades. It urged they be replaced by "more diversified and innovative courses."

The "Student Bill of Rights" called for bans on short hair requirements for boys, corporal punishment and "arbitrary searches and seizures."

It declared that students have, among others, the following rights:

To determine their own appearance, including the style of hair and clothing.

To see their own school files and to be notified about adverse comments which are placed in them.

To wear political buttons or symbols, form political organizations and distribute political leaflets or newspapers.

On the request for more sex education, board member David Hubbard said the board has done about all it can to implement sex education in schools.

He noted that a new, updated sex education textbook, "Human Sexuality," is being prepared by the board.

'Original Residents' Block Wounded Knee

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (UPI) — A group of Oglala Sioux Indians, who say they are "original residents of Wounded Knee," blocked the main road to the village yesterday to protest being ousted from their homes by other Indians occupying the hamlet.

Government forces maintained a perimeter around the village and government negotiators tried to get the Indians to remove the roadblock, established outside the perimeter.

But the Indians vowed not to let food or medical supplies pass into the hands of the Indians occupying the village until the confrontation is ended.

Federal negotiator Stanley Pottinger flew by helicopter to the roadblock Friday and met with the group's spokesmen, Woody Richards and John Hussman, in an effort to persuade them to remove the blockade.

Richards said the group was protesting the American Indian Movement (AIM) takeover that ousted them, from their homes 46 days ago, and what they called the Justice Department's inability to end the armed confrontation.

They also said the government should compensate the original residents of the village for damage to their property and the loss of their homes since the occupation began Feb. 27.

Most of the Indians at the roadblock, Pottinger said, are residents of Wounded Knee and "some are concerned relatives."

Pottinger, an assistant U.S. attorney general, told them the Justice Department wants to end the occupation of the village "without bloodshed or loss of life."

He said he was sympathetic to their reasons for establishing the roadblock, but warned, "If you put yourself in the position of obstructing a federal officer, even if your intentions are the best, then you are violating a federal statute."

Richards said the roadblock would remain up until the armed occupation ended. Before the meeting with Pottinger was over, Richards and Hussman agreed to allow U.S. marshals, FBI agents and Community Relations Service (CRS) workers to pass through en route to the government's roadblock closer to the village.

However, the two Indians said all CRS cars would be searched, and food and medical supplies would be prevented from going through.

"If they want medical and food supplies," Huaamsn said, "they should come out and get it. They're getting better medical aid down there than we are on the outside, and they're getting it free."

A Suicide Barrier For Span Is Back

An old proposal to erect a suicide barrier on the Golden Gate Bridge was revived yesterday, apparently with enough votes by bridge district directors to assure its construction this time. (See other bridge story, page 1.)

The proposal, booted about for 23 years got as far as a preliminary design two years ago, but was shelved indefinitely.

The issue was revived at an unannounced meeting on April 4 of the board's special suicide committee, which urged the board to adopt a policy to proceed with the project "as soon as possible."

The recommendation, backed by dozens of organizations and individuals at yesterday's packed board meeting, was approved, 12-5. Two of Marin's three representatives on the board split, with Supervisor Michael Wornum voting with the majority and San Rafael Mayor C. Paul Bettini with the minority. Dean N. Meyer of Mill Valley was absent.

The board's action fell well short of agreeing to spend the $750,000 estimated for the actual construction, but it did ask the finance-auditing committee to review spending $67,500 to complete design and wind-tunnel testing of the barrier. The committee was given 30 days to report its recommendation back to the board.

The project would replace the chest-high railings with an eight-foot barrier made of thin vertical tension rods six inches apart. It would be topped with an angled rail too difficult to grasp long enough to climb over.

According to bridge officials, 477 persons are known to have jumped to their deaths from the span since it opened in 1937.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

RIDERS — Received a staff report that average weekday patronage during March was 22,980 on district buses and 2,337 on the Sausalito ferry.

DRYDOCK — Accepted a $14,715 bid from Todd Shipyards Corp., Alameda, to drydock the Sausalido ferry on April 25.

BUSES — Received a staff report that 16,432 district buses crossed the bridge during March, up 21 per cent over the same month last year.

NEW YORK — Authorized directors Meyer and L. E. Castner of Sonoma County to attend an insurance conference in New York.

WEIGHT — Approved 50 changes in the design of the three new ferries being built in San Diego, most of them designed to reduce unexpected weight problems that would have slowed the ferries below the required 25 knots.

DRIVERS — Approved hiring an additional 12 drivers to prevent a cutback in commuter service.

STUDY — Referred back to committee a proposed $231,000 study of future fare and toll hikes.

Deadline Set On Auditions

Actors, singers and dancers who wish to audition for the College of Marin Summer Theater 73 must call the college drama department before April 27.

The summer program will include productions of "Inherit the Wind" and "The Fantastiks."

Auditions will be held April 28, with rehearsals beginning June 11.

Those participating in the program may receive college credit.

Golden Birthday Party Is Tuesday

The 50th anniversary of Sylvan Circle 115, United Ancient Order of Druids, will be celebrated at a meeting at the Druids Hall in Novato on Tuesday at 8 p.m. Grand Arch Druidess of California, Mrs. Cora Martinelli, will be a guest.

Three charter members of the original 37 are still members. They are Mrs. Anna De Borba, the first secretary; Mrs. Asunta Zunino and Mrs. Bert York. Mrs. York's late mother, Mrs. Anna Hirribarren, was elected the first arch druidess of the Novato circle.

Mrs. William Nave, now a member of San Rafael Circle 137, was also a charter member of the Novato Circle and suggested the name Sylvan Circle because of the many trees on the hills surrounding Novato.

The Druids, a fraternal order to assist its members, is a moral, social and beneficial order. It was organized in England in 1776 and introduced into the United States in 1830.

Mrs. Leslie Barlow has been elected to serve her third term as arch druidess for the club year. Serving with her are Mmes. John Murphy, first bard, Ed Larsen, recording secretary; Ivan Johnson, financial secretary; Fred Nave, treasurer; George Scherba, conductress; M. J. Bert York, chaplain; Bob Listman, inside guardian, Fred Nave, musician; Leo Schoen, trustee; and Ben Collier, auditor. Mrs. David Johnson is past arch druidess.

Women Mostly In Clerical Jobs

The majority of employed women in California were concentrated in clerical work, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

The report said clerical work accounted for 39 per cent of the women workers, 17 per cent were employed in professional and technical work and service outside the home accounted for 15 per cent. Operatives (including transport) and sales workers made up the fourth and fifth largest groups of employed women with 10 per cent and 8 per cent, respectively.

Bow Ties

That big, sporty bow tie is making a comeback. Often patterned, it is seen most often with casual clothes — will probably take to tailored suits, too.

THOSE ROUGH EDGES

This Beauty Salon Reshapes The Body

By VIVIAN BROWN

NEW YORK (AP) — In spring when women shop for new clothes, Nicole Ronsard does a thriving business at her beauty salon in New York. But many women never hear of her, she says.

"My business is never word of mouth," she observed the other day. "Women do not discuss the beauty problem I treat. . .But they become more aware of it whenever they shop for a new wardrobe. . ."

Mme. Ronsard is an expert in the treatment of cellulite — in France it is a well-known condition that affects the most susceptible area, the thighs, and other parts of the body including back, upper arms and knees. But the condition usually is not singled out for treatment in the United States, "although a large percentage of women suffer from it" she explained.

Cellulite — lumps, bumps, ridges and globs of matter under the skin — is accepted as just another indication of fat that they cannot control. But it is treated by doctors, hospitals, clinics and beauticians in France, Mme. Ronsard commented.

IN HER SALON she uses the French treatment method that includes automated massage, updating the treatment with two machines.

But one need not go to a salon to have it done, she explained, one reason she wrote the book, "cellulite —Those lumps, bumps and bulges you couldn't lose before."

Hw do you recognize cellulite? Mme. Ronsard suggests gripping the thighs between the thumb and index finger or between the palms of both hands.

"If cellulite is present the skin will ripple and resemble an orange peel or cottage cheese," she remarked "and there might be a little sensitivity."

At a more advanced stage the ripples are noticed just by looking in a full length mirror at an affected area such as the thighs, and women in that category often feel the most despair.

"They cannot wears pants or shorts and the condition embarrasses them. Some women must go to the water's edge at the beach before they remove a long robe that covers their thighs."

IN FACT French women describe the condition as culottes de cheval (riding breeches) because one's thighs fall into that shape with cellulite, but it was Swedish massage experts who first observed "the presence of the lumpy node-like formations" which they began treating by massage, she says. They have referred to it as panniculite, myocellulite and cellulite, the name adopted by the French.

She has been told by doctors that cellulite occurs when the waste removal process slows down in an area. Water and wastes thicken forming the bulgy bumps. One client, a yoga teacher, insists her condition was the result of having had a baby. But many of Mme. Ronsard's clients are slim models who have never been married. In many respects the actual cause is a mystery and even after it is corrected a maintenance program must be used to keep it off, she commented.

"Dieting doesn't help unless it is combined with exercise, massage and drinking enough water to eliminate the cellulite that breaks down," she explained.

Although she stresses massage, she cautions against massaging so hard one bruises the skin. Sitting in a tub is a good time to work on one's legs and thighs. Hips and buttocks might be massaged when one is towel drying. In fact, she suggests, once the knack is acquired, one can massage when one is watching television or sitting in a car or any other time.

KEEPING IN MIND that legs should always be massaged towards the heart, she suggests five massage movements to help break down cellulite — stroking (preparing the skin by using upward sliding movements) kneading (grabbing "a hunk of flesh," lifting it away from the underlying structure and squeezing it with the fingers or whole hand) knuckling (a crushing movement done in circular direction with fingers curled so that the knuckles press the skin) "S" formation (using thumb and forefinger of both hands to lift up a portion of flesh running hands back and forth in opposite directions to form an "S" fold) and wringing (an "S" formation done without picking up the flesh —a deep action massage that involves twisting flesh back and forth with the hands.) Deep stroking ends every massage (heavy pressure towards the heart which therapists believe relieves congestion and speeds removal of waste matter from tissues).

The hose air treatment she gives in her salon may be done at home with a garden hose and lots of water pressure, she advises.

Before coming to the United States six years ago, Mme. Ronsard lived in Paris where she graduated from a school specializing in the science of body shaping. But before that she had often helped her mother, a well-known skin specialist.

Social Problems To Be Discussed

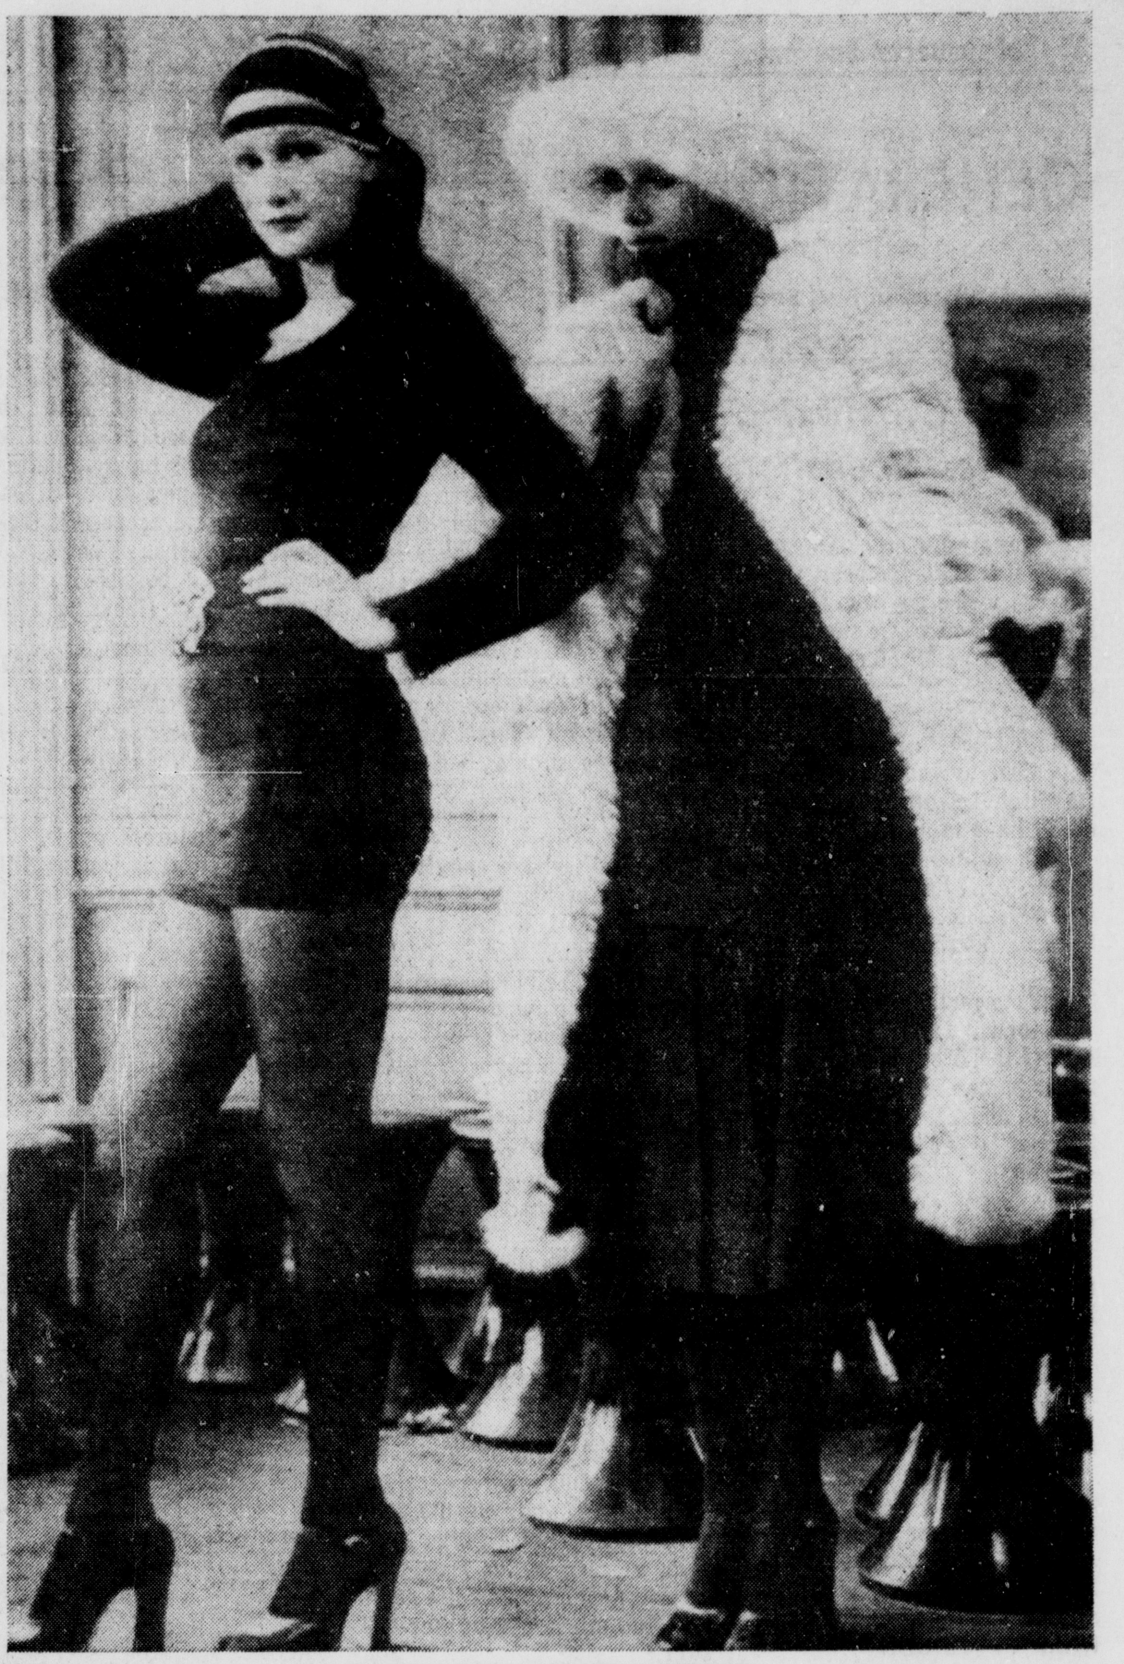
Problem-solving and action programs to meet current social issues will be the major concern of more than 6,000 home economists convening in Atlantic City for the 64th Annual Meeting of the American Home Economics Association, June 25-29.

The issues coming under the home economists' analyses include national health insurance, nutrition, child care, family planning, aging, sex roles and housing.

Officers Wives Choose Leaders

Mrs. Emile Patrick of Novato has been elected president of the Non-commissioned Officers Wives Club at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Other officers elected are Mmes. Robert Rhorer, vice president; Gerald Cameron, treasurer; John Engs, assistant treasurer; Walter Wade, recording secretary; and Edwin Dorminey, corresponding secretary.



FANNY SWEATERS

Meeting the sweater craze head on is fashion designer Sonia Rykiel whose Paris collection included the mini sweater dress for evening (left) and fanny sweater (right) tamed somewhat by the pleated skirt, just below the knee, and covered by the fake fur coat. The new, long sweaters are the hottest fashion of the year, and Miss Rykiel included several when her collection was shown last week in Paris.

Mrs. Sievers Again Chosen Club Leader

Mrs. Howard Sievers, who was president of the Sausalito Woman's Club in 1950 and 1951, has again been elected to the club's presidency.

She served as club parliamentarian last year, and has been a member of the club for 29 years.

The purpose of the Sausalito Woman's Club according to Mrs. Sievers is "to preserve the beauty of Sausalito, to aid such worthy causes as may enlist the sympathies of the membership, and to create a center for thought and action for the promotion of the best interests of Sausalito."

Any woman who is a resident of Sausalito and who is interested in the purposes for which the club was founded is eligible for membership.

Mrs. Sievers is a past president of the Sausalito League of Women Voters, and served for nine years on the Sausalito School board.

She enjoys gardening, golf, bridge and civic affairs. She and her husband, an electrical engineer with the Bechtel Corp., have lived in Marin County for 32 years. They have four grown children and eight grandchildren. Their children are William Sievers of Mountain View, Robert Sievers, Mill Valley, Mrs. Gary Weld, Fremont and Mrs. Penny Bechtel, San Mateo.

The new president is a native of Bayfield, Colo. She went to high school in Amasa, Mich., and attended the Ferris Institute in Big Rapids, Mich.

Golden Birthday Party Is Tuesday

The 50th anniversary of Sylvan Circle 115, United Ancient Order of Druids, will be celebrated at a meeting at the Druids Hall in Novato on Tuesday at 8 p.m. Grand Arch Druidess of California, Mrs. Cora Martinelli, will be a guest.

Three charter members of the original 37 are still members. They are Mrs. Anna De Borba, the first secretary; Mrs. Asunta Zunino and Mrs. Bert York. Mrs. York's late mother, Mrs. Anna Hirribarren, was elected the first arch druidess of the Novato circle.

Mrs. William Nave, now a member of San Rafael Circle 137, was also a charter member of the Novato Circle and suggested the name Sylvan Circle because of the many trees on the hills surrounding Novato.

The Druids, a fraternal order to assist its members, is a moral, social and beneficial order. It was organized in England in 1776 and introduced into the United States in 1830.

Mrs. Leslie Barlow has been elected to serve her third term as arch druidess for the club year. Serving with her are Mmes. John Murphy, first bard, Ed Larsen, recording secretary; Ivan Johnson, financial secretary; Fred Nave, treasurer; George Scherba, conductress; M. J. Bert York, chaplain; Bob Listman, inside guardian, Fred Nave, musician; Leo Schoen, trustee; and Ben Collier, auditor. Mrs. David Johnson is past arch druidess.

FANNY SWEATERS

Meeting the sweater craze head on is fashion designer Sonia Rykiel whose Paris collection included the mini sweater dress for evening (left) and fanny sweater (right) tamed somewhat by the pleated skirt, just below the knee, and covered by the fake fur coat. The new, long sweaters are the hottest fashion of the year, and Miss Rykiel included several when her collection was shown last week in Paris. (UPI Telephoto)

Women Mostly In Clerical Jobs

The majority of employed women in California were concentrated in clerical work, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

The report said clerical work accounted for 39 per cent of the women workers, 17 per cent were employed in professional and technical work and service outside the home accounted for 15 per cent. Operatives (including transport) and sales workers made up the fourth and fifth largest groups of employed women with 10 per cent and 8 per cent, respectively.

Bow Ties

That big, sporty bow tie is making a comeback. Often patterned, it is seen most often with casual clothes — will probably take to tailored suits, too.

THOSE ROUGH EDGES

This Beauty Salon Reshapes The Body

By VIVIAN BROWN

NEW YORK (AP) — In spring when women shop for new clothes, Nicole Ronsard does a thriving business at her beauty salon in New York. But many women never hear of her, she says.

"My business is never word of mouth," she observed the other day. "Women do not discuss the beauty problem I treat. . .But they become more aware of it whenever they shop for a new wardrobe. . ."

Mme. Ronsard is an expert in the treatment of cellulite — in France it is a well-known condition that affects the most susceptible area, the thighs, and other parts of the body including back, upper arms and knees. But the condition usually is not singled out for treatment in the United States, "although a large percentage of women suffer from it" she explained.

Cellulite — lumps, bumps, ridges and globs of matter under the skin — is accepted as just another indication of fat that they cannot control. But it is treated by doctors, hospitals, clinics and beauticians in France, Mme. Ronsard commented.

IN HER SALON she uses the French treatment method that includes automated massage, updating the treatment with two machines.

But one need not go to a salon to have it done, she explained, one reason she wrote the book, "cellulite —Those lumps, bumps and bulges you couldn't lose before."

Hw do you recognize cellulite? Mme. Ronsard suggests gripping the thighs between the thumb and index finger or between the palms of both hands.

"If cellulite is present the skin will ripple and resemble an orange peel or cottage cheese," she remarked "and there might be a little sensitivity."

At a more advanced stage the ripples are noticed just by looking in a full length mirror at an affected area such as the thighs, and women in that category often feel the most despair.

"They cannot wears pants or shorts and the condition embarrasses them. Some women must go to the water's edge at the beach before they remove a long robe that covers their thighs."

IN FACT French women describe the condition as culottes de cheval (riding breeches) because one's thighs fall into that shape with cellulite, but it was Swedish massage experts who first observed "the presence of the lumpy node-like formations" which they began treating by massage, she says. They have referred to it as panniculite, myocellulite and cellulite, the name adopted by the French.

She has been told by doctors that cellulite occurs when the waste removal process slows down in an area. Water and wastes thicken forming the bulgy bumps. One client, a yoga teacher, insists her condition was the result of having had a baby. But many of Mme. Ronsard's clients are slim models who have never been married. In many respects the actual cause is a mystery and even after it is corrected a maintenance program must be used to keep it off, she commented.

"Dieting doesn't help unless it is combined with exercise, massage and drinking enough water to eliminate the cellulite that breaks down," she explained.

Although she stresses massage, she cautions against massaging so hard one bruises the skin. Sitting in a tub is a good time to work on one's legs and thighs. Hips and buttocks might be massaged when one is towel drying. In fact, she suggests, once the knack is acquired, one can massage when one is watching television or sitting in a car or any other time.

KEEPING IN MIND that legs should always be massaged towards the heart, she suggests five massage movements to help break down cellulite — stroking (preparing the skin by using upward sliding movements) kneading (grabbing "a hunk of flesh," lifting it away from the underlying structure and squeezing it with the fingers or whole hand) knuckling (a crushing movement done in circular direction with fingers curled so that the knuckles press the skin) "S" formation (using thumb and forefinger of both hands to lift up a portion of flesh running hands back and forth in opposite directions to form an "S" fold) and wringing (an "S" formation done without picking up the flesh —a deep action massage that involves twisting flesh back and forth with the hands.) Deep stroking ends every massage (heavy pressure towards the heart which therapists believe relieves congestion and speeds removal of waste matter from tissues).

The hose air treatment she gives in her salon may be done at home with a garden hose and lots of water pressure, she advises.

Before coming to the United States six years ago, Mme. Ronsard lived in Paris where she graduated from a school specializing in the science of body shaping. But before that she had often helped her mother, a well-known skin specialist.

Social Problems To Be Discussed

Problem-solving and action programs to meet current social issues will be the major concern of more than 6,000 home economists convening in Atlantic City for the 64th Annual Meeting of the American Home Economics Association, June 25-29.

The issues coming under the home economists' analyses include national health insurance, nutrition, child care, family planning, aging, sex roles and housing.

They have four grown children and eight grandchildren. Their children are William Sievers of Mountain View, Robert Sievers, Mill Valley, Mrs. Gary Weld, Fremont and Mrs. Penny Bechtel, San Mateo.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Right On! Taking Initiative Proves Liberation Does Work

DEAR RAP:

Last semester break I spent a week at a ski lodge near where I live. I met a guy who is great looking and nice. We saw pretty much of each other, though casually.

When I returned home, all I could do was think of him. I happened to know his address (through friends), though he didn't have minte.

Well, after three weeks of indecision, I finally wrote him a friendly letter. When he wrote back, I nearly died of happiness.

But my mother tells me I am too forward: a boy always makes the first move; a girl is never supposed to write or call a guy; and I'll be considered a "chaser" — he'll never like me, etc., etc.

She says women's lib has brainwashed me, and I'll see.

Was I right or wrong in making the first move? — WONDERING

WON:

Right! And keep on writing! — SUE

DEAR WONDERING:

Obviously this boy's prompt answer proved your mother's views out of date for this generation. If a girl doesn't take the initiative once in a while, she misses some wonderful opportunities. — HELEN

RAP:

I'm 20, my girl is 25. We love each other, but she gets apprehensive about marriage because "she's too old for me."

I've got a good job and a good future. I'm responsible and ready for a wife. How can I get it across that five years makes no difference? — Y.D.

Y:

If your girl is so hung up on a mere five years difference, maybe she isn't as much in love as you believe. Could this be an excuse to avoid marriage? — HELEN

Y:

How about using logic on your girlfriend:

1. Women often mature later, age later, and die later than do men. It's said that a female reaches her sexual peak at age 35, while men start declining sexually before they're 25. So why the big insistence that husbands be older than their wives?

2. Some of the happiest marriages are older-women-younger-men combinations. (As Ben Franklin said: "choose an older woman — she'll make a good wife because she'll always be grateful."

(NOTE FROM HELEN: That's good advice for men, but don't use it in trying to win over your woman friend, Y.D.)

3. No one really cares about ages any more.

I think this 25-year-old is being supersensitive for nothing and, if she can't see it, well, refer back to Mom's answer and start questioning her excuses. — SUE

RAP:

"Tiger" whose boyfriend doesn't want her to finish college or have a career that might top his, should see the writing on the blackboard and find someone who is secure enough to be proud of her.

I went with a guy who resented my education. I know words didn't and I loved to study. When I took a course which would have prepared me for a better job, he made such a fuss I quit.

I lost out on the job, but I came to my senses, finally. I realized that rather than helping himself up, he wanted to hold me at his level. — FREE TO GROW

A Senior At Vallejo High Award Winner

I-J Special Report

MINNEAPOLIS — Anthony Tom Young, a senior at Vallejo Senior High School, Vallejo, has been named California's 1973 Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow.

Chosen from a field of 50,951 seniors in 742 of the state's high schools, he will receive a $1,500 college scholarship from General Mills, sponsor of the annual educational program which was open to boys as well as girls for the first time this year. He also remains eligible for national honors.

Judging centered on performance in a written knowledge and attitude examination administered throughout the country last December. From April 29 to May 4, the 51 Homemakers of Tomorrow representing 50 states and the District of Columbia will participate in an educational tour of Washington, D.C., and Colonial Williamsburg, Va. On May 3, the 1973 Betty Crocker All-American Homemaker of Tomorrow and three national runners-up will be announced.

Tony is the 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald M. Young of Vallejo. Ranked first scholastically in his class of 487, he is also a National Merit Scholarship and University of California Regents Scholarship Finalist, a California State Scholarship semi-finalist and a member of the California Scholarship Federation.

General Mills said of the contest, "While, historically, the feminine homemaker has usually exerted the major influence in shaping the home, teamwork between husband and wife has long been the ideal. In today's changing society, that teamwork will undoubtedly become increasingly important during the years ahead."

More Clothing Of Flameproof Fabric Needed

Clothing manufacturers must voluntarily increase their efforts to provide the public with flame retardant wearing apparel if the tragic number of deaths and injuries from clothing fires is to be significantly reduced, the National Safety Council advised.

Howard Pyle, president of the Safety Council, said, "An estimated 1,500 lives are lost and some 100,000 persons suffer disabling injuries each year as a result of their clothes catching fire. Sadly, most of these victims are children or elderly and disabled persons.

Clothing is involved in more than 80 per cent of these mishaps, according to studies, and approximately 34 per cent of those injured in the 1,245 fabric ignition cases studied by reports were children under the age of 15. About 15 per cent were persons over the age of 65, even though they represent only 10 per cent of the nation's population.

SEW SIMPLE

Piece Inseam To Avoid Extra Costs

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

I am another of your readers who is confused with the amount of yardage needed for knit slacks. I have a pattern that will require an extra half yard of fabric because it lacks about two inches of being wide enough. Is it possible to piece the inseam of slacks to avoid buying extra fabric?

MRS. H.H.

DEAR MRS. H.H.,

With the wide variation in widths of fabrics, depending on whether they are domestic or imported, woven expressly for the manufacturers or for the home sewer, it is just as difficult for the sales person in your fabric shop as it is for you. One point must be remembered, knits absolutely must be cut in one direction. Therefore, you can't fit one piece of a pattern into the other as you can when there is no direction to the fabric.

In answer to your question about piecing, yes, it can be done and won't be noticeable, especially if the piecing is only two or three inches at the crotch of the inseam.

I would advise piecing your fabric before you remove the pattern, then you will avoid cutting it too small because you might have overlooked adding two seam allowances. Be sure you piece your fabric with the grain running in the same direction.

DEAR EUNICE,

You have often suggested we examine the construction on expensive clothes if we are in doubt. A good friend of mine has a beautiful knit dress and jacket that she paid almost $200 for. The jacket has no lining or interfacing. However, the dress has a separate lining.

I'm afraid to do the same thing, because I've seen some pretty sad results when women don't line their knits. What is your recommendation?

MRS. C.E.

DEAR MRS. C.E.,

The quality of the knit fabric in these expensive suits is hard to find at any fabric shop. They are usually 100 per cent wool and made from a tight, twisted yarn that has very little stretch or give. This makes it possible to achieve a beautiful effect without lining or interfacing. If your fabric is of the same quality, why not try it? I think you will also notice that there is top stitching about one-half inch from all the outer edges. This again keeps the facings and hems nice and flat. You must do the same, either with machine stitching or hand picking.

As to the lining in the dress, this usually keeps the skirt from stretching out of shape from sitting. It also keeps the dress, which will be fitted closer to your body, from clinging.

THIS WEEK'S Tailor Trix pressing board winner is Mrs. Glen H. Ericson, Salina, Kan., for her sewing suggestion:

"I have used this tip for more than 50 years, hope it can be help to others. When sewing darts in any type material, especially knits, whether underlined or not, machine stitch in the exact center of the dart before folding the fabric and stitching the dart through both layers of fabric. You'll have a perfect dart with no stretching.

"To prevent stretching of fabric when stitching from the outer edge of garment, I recommend you begin this particular stitching at the point of the dart and continue to the outer edge of fabric."

DEAR EUNICE,

Why don't pattern companies tell you the size button you need in inches instead of lines. Often the buttons I like best aren't the same line the pattern suggests, and I find my selections are very limited.

SALLY H.

DEAR SALLY H.,

You won't have too much difficulty in the future if you will keep this column for future reference. In "button language," 40 lines equal one inch, 20 lines equal one-half inch, 10 lines equal one-fourth inch. A few lines make very little difference.

I would suggest you purchase the buttons you like when planning your garment, then you can add a fraction or take away a fraction according to the button you select. There doesn't seem to be any standardization in the sizes, and the imported buttons tend to use the full gamut of sizes.

Hope this clears up the confusion many of you have. You can overcome it all by selecting your buttons first, and you'll find there is no visual difference in a variation of a few lines of measurement.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Right On! Taking Initiative Proves Liberation Does Work

DEAR RAP:

Last semester break I spent a week at a ski lodge near where I live. I met a guy who is great looking and nice. We saw pretty much of each other, though casually.

When I returned home, all I could do was think of him. I happened to know his address (through friends), though he didn't have minte.

Well, after three weeks of indecision, I finally wrote him a friendly letter. When he wrote back, I nearly died of happiness.

But my mother tells me I am too forward: a boy always makes the first move; a girl is never supposed to write or call a guy; and I'll be considered a "chaser" — he'll never like me, etc., etc.

She says women's lib has brainwashed me, and I'll see.

Was I right or wrong in making the first move? — WONDERING

WON:

Right! And keep on writing! — SUE

DEAR WONDERING:

Obviously this boy's prompt answer proved your mother's views out of date for this generation. If a girl doesn't take the initiative once in a while, she misses some wonderful opportunities. — HELEN

RAP:

I'm 20, my girl is 25. We love each other, but she gets apprehensive about marriage because "she's too old for me."

I've got a good job and a good future. I'm responsible and ready for a wife. How can I get it across that five years makes no difference? — Y.D.

Y:

If your girl is so hung up on a mere five years difference, maybe she isn't as much in love as you believe. Could this be an excuse to avoid marriage? — HELEN

Y:

How about using logic on your girlfriend:

1. Women often mature later, age later, and die later than do men. It's said that a female reaches her sexual peak at age 35, while men start declining sexually before they're 25. So why the big insistence that husbands be older than their wives?

2. Some of the happiest marriages are older-women-younger-men combinations. (As Ben Franklin said: "choose an older woman — she'll make a good wife because she'll always be grateful."

(NOTE FROM HELEN: That's good advice for men, but don't use it in trying to win over your woman friend, Y.D.)

3. No one really cares about ages any more.

I think this 25-year-old is being supersensitive for nothing and, if she can't see it, well, refer back to Mom's answer and start questioning her excuses. — SUE

RAP:

"Tiger" whose boyfriend doesn't want her to finish college or have a career that might top his, should see the writing on the blackboard and find someone who is secure enough to be proud of her.

I went with a guy who resented my education. I know words didn't and I loved to study. When I took a course which would have prepared me for a better job, he made such a fuss I quit.

I lost out on the job, but I came to my senses, finally. I realized that rather than helping himself up, he wanted to hold me at his level. — FREE TO GROW

A Senior At Vallejo High Award Winner

I-J Special Report

MINNEAPOLIS — Anthony Tom Young, a senior at Vallejo Senior High School, Vallejo, has been named California's 1973 Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow.

Chosen from a field of 50,951 seniors in 742 of the state's high schools, he will receive a $1,500 college scholarship from General Mills, sponsor of the annual educational program which was open to boys as well as girls for the first time this year. He also remains eligible for national honors.

Judging centered on performance in a written knowledge and attitude examination administered throughout the country last December. From April 29 to May 4, the 51 Homemakers of Tomorrow representing 50 states and the District of Columbia will participate in an educational tour of Washington, D.C., and Colonial Williamsburg, Va. On May 3, the 1973 Betty Crocker All-American Homemaker of Tomorrow and three national runners-up will be announced.

Tony is the 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald M. Young of Vallejo. Ranked first scholastically in his class of 487, he is also a National Merit Scholarship and University of California Regents Scholarship Finalist, a California State Scholarship semi-finalist and a member of the California Scholarship Federation.

General Mills said of the contest, "While, historically, the feminine homemaker has usually exerted the major influence in shaping the home, teamwork between husband and wife has long been the ideal. In today's changing society, that teamwork will undoubtedly become increasingly important during the years ahead."

More Clothing Of Flameproof Fabric Needed

Clothing manufacturers must voluntarily increase their efforts to provide the public with flame retardant wearing apparel if the tragic number of deaths and injuries from clothing fires is to be significantly reduced, the National Safety Council advised.

Howard Pyle, president of the Safety Council, said, "An estimated 1,500 lives are lost and some 100,000 persons suffer disabling injuries each year as a result of their clothes catching fire. Sadly, most of these victims are children or elderly and disabled persons.

Clothing is involved in more than 80 per cent of these mishaps, according to studies, and approximately 34 per cent of those injured in the 1,245 fabric ignition cases studied by reports were children under the age of 15. About 15 per cent were persons over the age of 65, even though they represent only 10 per cent of the nation's population.

SEW SIMPLE

Piece Inseam To Avoid Extra Costs

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

I am another of your readers who is confused with the amount of yardage needed for knit slacks. I have a pattern that will require an extra half yard of fabric because it lacks about two inches of being wide enough. Is it possible to piece the inseam of slacks to avoid buying extra fabric?

MRS. H.H.

DEAR MRS. H.H.,

With the wide variation in widths of fabrics, depending on whether they are domestic or imported, woven expressly for the manufacturers or for the home sewer, it is just as difficult for the sales person in your fabric shop as it is for you. One point must be remembered, knits absolutely must be cut in one direction. Therefore, you can't fit one piece of a pattern into the other as you can when there is no direction to the fabric.

In answer to your question about piecing, yes, it can be done and won't be noticeable, especially if the piecing is only two or three inches at the crotch of the inseam.

I would advise piecing your fabric before you remove the pattern, then you will avoid cutting it too small because you might have overlooked adding two seam allowances. Be sure you piece your fabric with the grain running in the same direction.

DEAR EUNICE,

You have often suggested we examine the construction on expensive clothes if we are in doubt. A good friend of mine has a beautiful knit dress and jacket that she paid almost $200 for. The jacket has no lining or interfacing. However, the dress has a separate lining.

I'm afraid to do the same thing, because I've seen some pretty sad results when women don't line their knits. What is your recommendation?

MRS. C.E.

DEAR MRS. C.E.,

The quality of the knit fabric in these expensive suits is hard to find at any fabric shop. They are usually 100 per cent wool and made from a tight, twisted yarn that has very little stretch or give. This makes it possible to achieve a beautiful effect without lining or interfacing. If your fabric is of the same quality, why not try it? I think you will also notice that there is top stitching about one-half inch from all the outer edges. This again keeps the facings and hems nice and flat. You must do the same, either with machine stitching or hand picking.

As to the lining in the dress, this usually keeps the skirt from stretching out of shape from sitting. It also keeps the dress, which will be fitted closer to your body, from clinging.

THIS WEEK'S Tailor Trix pressing board winner is Mrs. Glen H. Ericson, Salina, Kan., for her sewing suggestion:

"I have used this tip for more than 50 years, hope it can be help to others. When sewing darts in any type material, especially knits, whether underlined or not, machine stitch in the exact center of the dart before folding the fabric and stitching the dart through both layers of fabric. You'll have a perfect dart with no stretching.

"To prevent stretching of fabric when stitching from the outer edge of garment, I recommend you begin this particular stitching at the point of the dart and continue to the outer edge of fabric."

DEAR EUNICE,

Why don't pattern companies tell you the size button you need in inches instead of lines. Often the buttons I like best aren't the same line the pattern suggests, and I find my selections are very limited.

SALLY H.

DEAR SALLY H.,

You won't have too much difficulty in the future if you will keep this column for future reference. In "button language," 40 lines equal one inch, 20 lines equal one-half inch, 10 lines equal one-fourth inch. A few lines make very little difference.

I would suggest you purchase the buttons you like when planning your garment, then you can add a fraction or take away a fraction according to the button you select. There doesn't seem to be any standardization in the sizes, and the imported buttons tend to use the full gamut of sizes.

Hope this clears up the confusion many of you have. You can overcome it all by selecting your buttons first, and you'll find there is no visual difference in a variation of a few lines of measurement.

For a free billfold size Fabric Conversion Chart, send a stamped, self-addressed envelope with your request for it to Eunice Farmer in care of the Independent-Journal.

Private Detective In Watergate Probe Quits

VASHINGTON (UPI) — Har-
K. Lipset, a private detec-
e hired to head the Senate's vestigation of the Watergate air, has resigned after conming that he pleaded guilty a charge of illegal electronic vesdropping in 1966.

Lipset issued a prepared atement yesterday saying at the misdemeanor convic-n in New York was "of such minor nature that I was given punishment whatsoever."

However, he said he was epping aside so that his pres-ce "in no way impedes" the mmittee's work.

'Because of my belief that e work of this select commit-e is of the utmost importance the welfare of this country, I n choosing to resign as a ecial investigator rather than use any embarrassment to e committee, its chairman or staff," Lipset said.

Lipset issued his statement after these other developments yesterday:

The Committee for the Reelection of the President said it will soon make public the sworn testimony of convicted Watergate conspirator James W. McCord Jr. The organization's lawyers, according to press spokesman Devan L. Shumway, will resume taking a deposition from McCord next Friday in connection with civil actions growing out of the June 17 break-in and bugging. "Our desire," Shumway said, is that McCord's testimony be made public as soon as possible so that we can avoid hearing about it through leaks, heresay and innuendo."

McCord met again in private with staff investigators of the Watergate committee, chaired by Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., but declined comment after chief committee counsel Samuel Dash had counseled him against revealing any of his testimony.

Both the White House and Ervin denied reports of an agreement for presidential aides to testify before Ervin's panel, but the White House said there had been communication on the subject.

Republican senators and representatives stepped up their pressure on President Nixon to cooperate in Ervin's inquiry.

Several influential GOP officeholders said continued White House silence on the Watergate case is damaging the Republican party and Nixon's image across the nation.

Among those urging Nixon to soften his stand on executive privilege and allow aides to testify were Rep. John J. Rhodes of Arizona, chairman of the House Republican Policy Committee; Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, senior GOP member of the Watergate committee; George D. Aiken, dean of Senate Republicans and Sen. William B. Saxbe of Ohio.

"The continual mystery surrounding Watergate is hurting the image of President Nixon and the Republican party in the eyes of people everywhere," Rhodes said in a statement.

Lipset, according to the New York Daily News, had pleaded guilty to the eavesdropping charge which stemmed from a 1966 case when he and 27 others were accused of bugging private hotel suites maintained by several large corporations. The eavesdropping was said to have been undertaken to learn corporate and personal secrets.

The Brink Marriage Is Dissolved

The wife of Mill Valley auto dealer Lawrence R. Brink has obtained a dissolution of their 26-year marriage in Marin Superior Court.

Judge E. Warren McGuire ordered Brink to pay his ex-wife, Leatha M. Brink, $200 a month alimony and provide her with a new car annually as long as he owns Larry Brink Motors.

The judge also ordered Brink to pay ll college costs for the couple's younger sons, Jan, 20, and Kevin, 18.

Distribution of $253,365 in community property left Brink with his dealership, while Mrs. Brink received the family home at 315 Eldredge Avenue, Mill Valley, $15,000 cash and the family membership in the Mill Valley Tennis Club.

The Brinks were married Aug. 27, 1946 in Chicago, where he played professional football. In his career with the Chicago Bears and the Los Angeles Rams, Brink was named to the all-pro team as a defensive end three times. He retired in 1954 and opened his auto business two years later.

A Contest Set On Kite Flying

The San Anselmo Recreation Department has announced it will sponsor a kite-flying contest at 1 p.m. Tuesday at Indian Rock Hill.

Prizes will be awarded to children in four age groups for kites that are the best constructed, most artistic, largest and smallest that fly and highest flyers.

The event is open to the public and is cosponsored by Long's Drug Stores.

Mill Valley Council To Study Moratorium

A porposal to slap a moratorium on large subdivisions in Mill Valley will be considered by the city council when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday at city hall.

The moratorium has been discussed at previous meetings. Originally opposed by Councilman Edward J. Boessenecker, he agreed April 2, to go along with the idea. His vote is needed to pass the proposal.

Boessenecker changed his mind when a new moratorium was proposed which would cover all undeveloped land in the city. The old moratorium would have excluded Shelter Ridge.

The moratorium, which would be in effect as long as three years, will give the city time to update its general plan.

The council on Monday also will elect a mayor pro-tem and make appointments to 11 city commissions, agencies and other local government bodies. Mayor Jean S. Barnard already has been reelected to a second one-year term.

Verdict Of Guilty In Coin Case

A Marin Superior Court Jury has convicted a 35-year-old San Jose man of robbing a Strawberry coin store owner of up to $7,000 in rare coins, ending a second trial on the matter.

The jury in the court of Judge David Menary Jr. deliberated less than three hours before convicting Robert Michael Linsley of holding up Fred Velen at the Golden Gate Coin Store in Town and Country Village Feb. 24, 1972.

In the first trial last September, the jury deadlocked nine to three for convictions.

Linsley, who is now in prison for burglary, was arrested last May 2 after he was linked through fingerprints in a coin book left behind by the two men that robbed Velen and subdued Sheriff's Deputy Billy Dews before escaping.

The second man has not been captured.

Linsley, who has an extensive record of burglaries and thefts, is to be sentenced May 14.

Private Detective In Watergate Probe Quits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Harold K. Lipset, a private detective hired to head the Senate's investigation of the Watergate affair, has resigned after confirming that he pleaded guilty to a charge of illegal electronic eavesdropping in 1966.

Lipset issued a prepared statement yesterday saying that the misdemeanor conviction in New York was "of such a minor nature that I was given no punishment whatsoever."

However, he said he was stepping aside so that his presence "in no way impedes" the committee's work.

"Because of my belief that the work of this select committee is of the utmost importance to the welfare of this country, I am choosing to resign as a special investigator rather than cause any embarrassment to the committee, its chairman or staff," Lipset said.

The eavesdropping was said to have been undertaken to learn corporate and personal secrets.

It May Be Spring, But Weather Is Bad

By U.P. International

An intensifying storm system swirled over the Great Basin of the West today, spreading snow over the Montana and Idaho Rockies and bringing rain to the Great Basin.

Heavy snow warnings were in effect for the mountains of western Colorado and stockmen's advisories were posted for Wyoming, Montana east of the Continental Divide, eastern Nevada, southeastern Idaho, Utah and portions of South Dakota.

Cold, Canadian air poured into the center of the storm system and frost warnings were in effect for eastern Washington state, where temperatures were expected to dip into the 20s early today.

Thunderstorms rumbled over the high plains of Texas from the Rio Grande to the northern Panhandle. Two-inch hail stones pelted White Deer, Tex., about 30 miles northeast of Amarillo, last night.

Some 45,000 head of cattle were evacuated and soybean and cotton land was inundated yesterday by the floodwaters of the Atchafalaya River in Louisiana. Catahoula and Avoyelles parishes in central Louisiana were hardest hit.

"About 90 per cent of the soybean land is under water, and about 20 per cent of the cotton land is under too," said James Graugnard, president of the Louisiana Farm Bureau. "We have requested the Louisiana congressional delegation to use whatever influence it has with the Nixon administration to get these adversely hurt parishes declared disaster areas."

There was, however, no flooding along the Mississippi River in Louisiana, though the river rose to its highest level in 30 years at one point.

Fair skies reigned over most of the nation east of the Mississippi River and over the central and northern Plains and the central and southern Rockies today. Cloudy to partly cloudy skies were the rule over the West Coast, the northern Rockies, the Great Basin, Texas and Oklahoma and fog shrouded much of southern Oklahoma.

Early morning temperatures ranged from 15 degrees at Houlton, Maine, to 72 at Key West, Fla.

Applications On Rezoning Due Study

Two controversial rezoning applications will be considered at the Petaluma City Council meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

Arthur Condiotti Enterprises will seek approval for planned unit development zoning and subdivision plans for land on I Street extension at Sunnyslope Road. Neighboring property owners fought the appliacation two weeks ago, complaining of potential traffic and drainage problems.

The council also will consider plans for apartments, houses and a K-Mart Department Store on Casa Grande and Frates roads. Critics two weeks ago complained the store would bring traffic problems and fragment further the business district of the city. A petition with 1,283 signatures favoring the project will be submitted to the council.

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California's smaller school districts are eligible for loans to make their buildings earthquake safe under a $15 million bill signed into law Friday by Gov. Ronald Reagan.

The Brink Marriage Is Dissolved

The wife of Mill Valley auto dealer Lawrence R. Brink has obtained a dissolution of their 26-year marriage in Marin Superior Court.

Judge E. Warren McGuire ordered Brink to pay his ex-wife, Leatha M. Brink, $200 a month alimony and provide her with a new car annually as long as he owns Larry Brink Motors.

The judge also ordered Brink to pay all college costs for the couple's younger sons, Jan, 20, and Kevin, 18.

Distribution of $253,365 in community property left Brink with his dealership, while Mrs. Brink received the family home at 315 Eldredge Avenue, Mill Valley, $15,000 cash and the family membership in the Mill Valley Tennis Club.

The Brinks were married Aug. 27, 1946 in Chicago, where he played professional football. In his career with the Chicago Bears and the Los Angeles Rams, Brink was named to the all-pro team as a defensive end three times. He retired in 1954 and opened his auto business two years later.

A Contest Set On Kite Flying

The San Anselmo Recreation Department has announced it will sponsor a kite-flying contest at 1 p.m. Tuesday at Indian Rock Hill.

Prizes will be awarded to children in four age groups for kites that are the best constructed, most artistic, largest and smallest that fly and highest flyers.

The event is open to the public and is cosponsored by Long's Drug Stores.

Mill Valley Council To Study Moratorium

A porposal to slap a moratorium on large subdivisions in Mill Valley will be considered by the city council when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday at city hall.

The moratorium has been discussed at previous meetings. Originally opposed by Councilman Edward J. Boessenecker, he agreed April 2, to go along with the idea. His vote is needed to pass the proposal.

Boessenecker changed his mind when a new moratorium was proposed which would cover all undeveloped land in the city. The old moratorium would have excluded Shelter Ridge.

The moratorium, which would be in effect as long as three years, will give the city time to update its general plan.

The council on Monday also will elect a mayor pro-tem and make appointments to 11 city commissions, agencies and other local government bodies. Mayor Jean S. Barnard already has been reelected to a second one-year term.

Verdict Of Guilty In Coin Case

A Marin Superior Court Jury has convicted a 35-year-old San Jose man of robbing a Strawberry coin store owner of up to $7,000 in rare coins, ending a second trial on the matter.

The jury in the court of Judge David Menary Jr. deliberated less than three hours before convicting Robert Michael Linsley of holding up Fred Velen at the Golden Gate Coin Store in Town and Country Village Feb. 24, 1972.

In the first trial last September, the jury deadlocked nine to three for convictions.

Linsley, who is now in prison for burglary, was arrested last May 2 after he was linked through fingerprints in a coin book left behind by the two men that robbed Velen and subdued Sheriff's Deputy Billy Dews before escaping.

The second man has not been captured.

Linsley, who has an extensive record of burglaries and thefts, is to be sentenced May 14.

Happy Warriors Ready For Next Playoff Rival

OAKLAND (UPI) — Golden State guard Jim Barnett remembers an elbow from Milwaukee's Bob Dandridge as the turning point in the National Basketball Association playoff series between the two clubs.

But to everyone else, Clyde Lee, the Warriors' soft-spoken 6-10 forward made the difference.

Barnett scored 26 points and Lee snared a game-high 19 rebounds Friday night to power the Warriors to a 100-86 win over the Milwaukee Bucks before a sellout of 13,175 howling fans. That gave the Warriors the playoff series, four games to two, and vaulted them into the Western Conference finals against either the Los Angeles Lakers or Chicago Bulls, who clash Sunday in a seventh and deciding game.

Barnett hit 11 of 18 shots from the field, topped the Warriors with seven assists and plucked seven rebounds as Golden State outrebounded the Bucks, 63-43.

"When Dandridge took that shot (elbow) that decked me in the third game (won 113-93 by Milwaukee). What did we do after that ... win three straight," said Barnett.

"Some people say that was the turning point. I'll take a shot like that anytime if it'll get us going."

Lee scored only eight points but was a demon on defense in helping to guard Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, and the Bucks' all-league center, and in shutting off the inside drives of Milwaukee forwards.

His 19 rebounds gave him 102 for the six-game series, compared to 97 for Jabbar.

Thanks mainly to the glove-like guarding of Thurmond and Lee, Jabbar never once hit his season average of 30 points in the playoffs. He topped the Bucks with 27 points, his high of the series. But still averaged only around 23 points for the six games.

"If you had to single out one guy in this series, it would have to be Lee," said Thurmond. "There's not a forward in this league who can stay with Lee on the boards. When he was playing Jabbar, he kept him outside, out of position and off balance."

The 13,175 Warrior fans apparently knew the value of Lee. They stood for 90 seconds and gave him an ovation when he was introduced before the game.

"I was embarrassed by the cheers," said the usually shy forward. "I really appreciated it, but it would have been terrible if we came out and stunk up the joint."

Stink they didn't.

Jabbar hit a free throw to open the game and that was the only lead Milwaukee enjoyed all night.

With Cazzie Russell coming off the bench and hitting 10 of his 18 points in the first period, the Warriors jumped to a 54-43 halftime lead.

Milwaukee closed the margin to 69-60 on a three-point play by Oscar Robertson with 3:06 to go in the third quarter. In the fourth period, the closest the Bucks got was 79-72 on two free thorws by Robertson with 8:49 remaining.

Then Barnett hit two buckets and Rick Barry swished two 15-footers to put it away.

"We came out and played basketball the way it should be played," said Attles. "I never saw a team ready to play like we were tonight.

"The only thing I told them before the game was if they lost. They'd have to go back to Madison (Wisc.) Sunday."

Regarding Lee, Attles said: "He did fantastic job. It's hard to believe a man can rebound that well."

Bucks coach Larry Costello said the Warriors outhustled his club.

"To win in this league, you've got to run. They ran well." said Costello.

Franklin Mieuli, owner of the Warriors, said his club is now playing the best basketball it has played in years.

"I know some time, somehow, we'd all come together," he said. "Give Attles the credit. He's been trying various combinations at various times and finally everything's beginning to click.

"We'll be ready for either Los Angeles or Chicago."

Pitcher Frey Lifts Redwood

Gene Frey pitched a four-hit shutout — no, this is not a recording — and Redwood High School took advantage of two Terra Linda fielding lapses for a 2-0 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory yesterday in Larkspur.

It was the third straight shutout for the Giant pitching staff and the second of the league season for Frey, and extended the team's consecutive scoreless inning streak to 25 in MCAL play.

The league-leading Giants (6-0) scored in the third inning when Mike Connor tripled over the center fielder's head and came home on a passed ball, and again in the fourth when Gary LaTorre singled and pinch runner Randy Harris took second on a wild pitch, third on a sacrifice by Dave Payne and home during a rundown following Ross Secor's grounder to third.

San Rafael Nine Turns Back Tam

Left-hander John Sims turned back Tamalpais High School on just one hit yesterday as San Rafael High School achieved a 5-3 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory at Albert Field.

The win kept the Bulldogs (5-1) on the heels of Redwood (6-0) in the MCAL race, and dropped Tam to 2-4.

Sims permitted two runs in the fourth inning on two walks, a passed ball, a wild pitch and a sacrifice fly, but didn't yield a hit until Jon Lea's run-scoring single with nobody out in the fifth.

The hit scored David Jones, who had walked, but on the same play John Hanley (who had reached on an error by Sims) was cut down at the plate on a relay from center fielder Craig Saunders to second baseman Joe Giordani to catcher Dave Steele.

San Rafael scored with two out in the first on Kevin Loughlin's RBI single, and added three more runs after two were out in the second, two on passed balls and one on a single by Saunders. Giordani singled in a run in the fourth.

Conklin, Novato Rip Drake In Baseball

Tom Conklin drove in four runs with a home run and a single and Joe Robinson pitched a two-hit shutout yesterday as Novato High School broke a three-game losing streak with a 5-0 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory over host Drake.

Novato (3-3) struck for four runs in the first inning when, with two out and two runners on base via fielder's choices following an error, Dan Metzger singled for one run, and Conklin smashed a three-run homer over the left fielder's head.

Conklin added an RBI single in the sixth, but Novato left-hander Robinson didn't need the run, as he permitted Drake (0-6) only three walks and struck out four.

San Marin's Bowen Stops Wildcat '9'

San Marin High School's Tom Bowen permitted visiting Marin Catholic just one hit yesterday and George Hoberg drove in four runs for the Mustangs as they romped to a 10-0 Marin County Athletic League League baseball victory.

Bowen, a senior right-hander, pitched four perfect innings, walked Layne Cozza leading off the fifth, but kept the no-hitter until Rich Lopez grounded a clean single between shortstop and third base on a 3-2 pitch leading off the seventh.

Hoberg hit a two-run double to right-center in the first inning and a two-run, bases-loaded single in the five-run fourth.

Other stars at bat included Rich Villa, with a two-run single in the third.

THE DIVE — Redwood High School's Scott Ballinger made this dive as part of a series which netted him 142.30 points and third place yesterday in a Marin County Athletic League swimming meet at Terra Linda. Terra Linda Tips Redwood In Swimming

Terra Linda High School delayed Redwood's outright clinching of the Marin County Athletic League swimming championship with a 49-46 upset of the visiting Giants yesterday.

The victory improved Terra Linda's record to 9-2 and dropped Redwood, which is already assured of a tie for the crown, to 10-1. The Giants may clinch the undisputed title by beating Novato (4-7) in the season-ending meet April 24.

In other meets yesterday, San Rafael topped Tamalpais, 56-38, and San Marin whipped Drake, 54-20. Novato was idle.

Keith Strange led Terra Linda to victory by winning the 100-yard freestyle in 50.0 and the 100 breaststroke in 1:02.3, both times the best in the MCAL this year, but Redwood's Spencer Eldred also swam MCAL bests in winning the 200 free (1:52.1) and the 100 butterfly (57.6).

Mike Kamler won two events and a relay for San Rafael, while Art Morrill and Dave Milano each took two and a relay for San Marin. Varsity and Class B swimmers from Marin Catholic competed against the San Marin and Drake "B" teams in a triangular meet and won with 58 points

GALLAGHER TRADED

N.L. Starting To Believe In Year Of Young Giants

COMBINED AP & UPI

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco likes to boast that "this is the year of the young Giants" and the rest of the National League is starting to believe it.

It was the young hotshots who led the red-hot Giants to three runs in the eighth inning Friday night for a 5-4 comeback victory over National League king Cincinnati and the team's fifth straight win.

The Giants also showed that this is the year of the youth movement when they swapped disgruntled Al Gallagher, a veteran at age 27, to the California Angels Friday night and brought up still another youngster to take his place on the roster.

Rookie Garry Matthews doubled home pinch-runner Domi Blanco with the winning run Friday after another rookie, Garry Maddix, had singled to score the tying run.

Matthews, a 22-year old outfielder, had three hits after going into the game with a .154 average.

His game-winner was a towering drive to right field that usually-reliable Bobby Tolan badly misjudged. The ball bounced over the fence for a ground rule double.

It was the third straight hit off Cincinnati relief ace Tom Hall who was the loser.

Manager Sparky Anderson of the Reds brought in Hall because he thought it would keep Giants' manager Charlie Fox from sending Willie McCovey to the plate as a pinch-hitter.

But Fox went against the strategy and McCovey made it pay off with a run-scoring single.

"I don't know who ever said I couldn't hit against lefthanded pitchers but I'm tired of it," McCovey said. He didn't start because Fox felt he needed a rest.

The big rally started quietly with Cincinnati starter Ross Grimsley getting the first two batters. Then Chris Speier walked and Dave Kingman singled.

That's when Anderson's strategy, which helped produce a National League championship last year, backfired.

Gallagher was the third baseman for the 1971 pennant-winners but had been platooned with Ed Goodson, Dave Kingman and Jim Hart over the past two seasons.

"It's up to Al Gallagher to prove manager Charlie Fox wrong," Gallagher said. "I'm just thankful for the opportunity to play. All I asked for

Twins' Hisle Continues Batting Assault On A's

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Mention Larry Hisle and the Oakland Athletics seem to roll over and play dead.

The centerfielder of the Minnesota Twins hit a solo homer and scored three runs Friday to help the Twins open their home season with an 8-4 victory. It was Minnesota's fourth straight triumph this season over the world champions.

And Hisle, who has had previous unimpressive stints with Philadelphia, Los Angeles and St. Louis in the National League, played an important role in three of them. He has eight hits, three home runs and five runs batted in so far this season against Oakland from his leadoff spot.

Today the A's hope he loses his way to the ballpark before lefty Ken Holtzman (0-1) of Oakland duels Bert Blyleven (1- 1) in the second meeting of the weekend series.

A crowd of 13,040 turned out on a cool and windy day Friday to watch the Twins tee off on starter John Odom and relievers Paul Lindblad and Horacio Pina for eight runs in the first three innings.

Oakland closed the gap on two-run homers by Reggie Jackson in the fourth and Sal Bando in the sixth. But Ray Corbin took over for starter Jim Kaat in the seventh and blanked the A's over the final three innings.

Happy Warriors Ready For Next Playoff Rival

OAKLAND (UPI) — Golden State guard Jim Barnett remembers an elbow from Milwaukee's Bob Dandridge as the turning point in the National Basketball Association playoff series between the two clubs.

But to everyone else, Clyde Lee, the Warriors' soft-spoken 6-10 forward made the difference.

Barnett scored 26 points and Lee snared a game-high 19 rebounds Friday night to power the Warriors to a 100-86 win over the Milwaukee Bucks before a sellout of 13,175 howling fans. That gave the Warriors the playoff series, four games to two, and vaulted them into the Western Conference finals against either the Los Angeles Lakers or Chicago Bulls, who clash Sunday in a seventh and deciding game.

Barnett hit 11 of 18 shots from the field, topped the Warriors with seven assists and plucked seven rebounds as Golden State outrebounded the Bucks, 63-43.

"When Dandridge took that shot (elbow) that decked me in the third game (won 113-93 by Milwaukee). What did we do after that ... win three straight," said Barnett.

"Some people say that was the turning point. I'll take a shot like that anytime if it'll get us going."

Lee scored only eight points but was a demon on defense in helping to guard Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, and the Bucks' all-league center, and in shutting off the inside drives of Milwaukee forwards.

His 19 rebounds gave him 102 for the six-game series, compared to 97 for Jabbar.

Thanks mainly to the glove-like guarding of Thurmond and Lee, Jabbar never once hit his season average of 30 points in the playoffs. He topped the Bucks with 27 points, his high of the series. But still averaged only around 23 points for the six games.

"If you had to single out one guy in this series, it would have to be Lee," said Thurmond. "There's not a forward in this league who can stay with Lee on the boards. When he was playing Jabbar, he kept him outside, out of position and off balance."

The 13,175 Warrior fans apparently knew the value of Lee. They stood for 90 seconds and gave him an ovation when he was introduced before the game.

"I was embarrassed by the cheers," said the usually shy forward. "I really appreciated it, but it would have been terrible if we came out and stunk up the joint."

Stink they didn't.

Jabbar hit a free throw to open the game and that was the only lead Milwaukee enjoyed all night.

With Cazzie Russell coming off the bench and hitting 10 of his 18 points in the first period, the Warriors jumped to a 54-43 halftime lead.

Milwaukee closed the margin to 69-60 on a three-point play by Oscar Robertson with 3:06 to go in the third quarter. In the fourth period, the closest the Bucks got was 79-72 on two free thorws by Robertson with 8:49 remaining.

Then Barnett hit two buckets and Rick Barry swished two 15-footers to put it away.

"We came out and played basketball the way it should be played," said Attles. "I never saw a team ready to play like we were tonight.

"The only thing I told them before the game was if they lost. They'd have to go back to Madison (Wisc.) Sunday."

Regarding Lee, Attles said: "He did fantastic job. It's hard to believe a man can rebound that well."

Bucks coach Larry Costello said the Warriors outhustled his club.

"To win in this league, you've got to run. They ran well." said Costello.

Franklin Mieuli, owner of the Warriors, said his club is now playing the best basketball it has played in years.

"I know some time, somehow, we'd all come together," he said. "Give Attles the credit. He's been trying various combinations at various times and finally everything's beginning to click.

"We'll be ready for either Los Angeles or Chicago."

Pitcher Frey Lifts Redwood

Gene Frey pitched a four-hit shutout — no, this is not a recording — and Redwood High School took advantage of two Terra Linda fielding lapses for a 2-0 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory yesterday in Larkspur.

It was the third straight shutout for the Giant pitching staff and the second of the league season for Frey, and extended the team's consecutive scoreless inning streak to 25 in MCAL play.

The league-leading Giants (6-0) scored in the third inning when Mike Connor tripled over the center fielder's head and came home on a passed ball, and again in the fourth when Gary LaTorre singled and pinch runner Randy Harris took second on a wild pitch, third on a sacrifice by Dave Payne and home during a rundown following Ross Secor's grounder to third.

San Rafael Nine Turns Back Tam

Left-hander John Sims turned back Tamalpais High School on just one hit yesterday as San Rafael High School achieved a 5-3 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory at Albert Field.

The win kept the Bulldogs (5-1) on the heels of Redwood (6-0) in the MCAL race, and dropped Tam to 2-4.

Sims permitted two runs in the fourth inning on two walks, a passed ball, a wild pitch and a sacrifice fly, but didn't yield a hit until Jon Lea's run-scoring single with nobody out in the fifth.

The hit scored David Jones, who had walked, but on the same play John Hanley (who had reached on an error by Sims) was cut down at the plate on a relay from center fielder Craig Saunders to second baseman Joe Giordani to catcher Dave Steele.

San Rafael scored with two out in the first on Kevin Loughlin's RBI single, and added three more runs after two were out in the second, two on passed balls and one on a single by Saunders. Giordani singled in a run in the fourth.

Conklin, Novato Rip Drake In Baseball

Tom Conklin drove in four runs with a home run and a single and Joe Robinson pitched a two-hit shutout yesterday as Novato High School broke a three-game losing streak with a 5-0 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory over host Drake.

Novato (3-3) struck for four runs in the first inning when, with two out and two runners on base via fielder's choices following an error, Dan Metzger singled for one run, and Conklin smashed a three-run homer over the left fielder's head.

Conklin added an RBI single in the sixth, but Novato left-hander Robinson didn't need the run, as he permitted Drake (0-6) only three walks and struck out four.

San Marin's Bowen Stops Wildcat '9'

San Marin High School's Tom Bowen permitted visiting Marin Catholic just one hit yesterday and George Hoberg drove in four runs for the Mustangs as they romped to a 10-0 Marin County Athletic League League baseball victory.

Bowen, a senior right-hander, pitched four perfect innings, walked Layne Cozza leading off the fifth, but kept the no-hitter until Rich Lopez grounded a clean single between shortstop and third base on a 3-2 pitch leading off the seventh.

Hoberg hit a two-run double to right-center in the first inning and a two-run, bases-loaded single in the five-run fourth. Other stars at bat included Rich Villa, with a two-run single in the third.

Terra Linda Tips Redwood In Swimming

Terra Linda High School delayed Redwood's outright clinching of the Marin County Athletic League swimming championship with a 49-46 upset of the visiting Giants yesterday.

The victory improved Terra Linda's record to 9-2 and dropped Redwood, which is already assured of a tie for the crown, to 10-1. The Giants may clinch the undisputed title by beating Novato (4-7) in the season-ending meet April 24.

In other meets yesterday, San Rafael topped Tamalpais, 56-38, and San Marin whipped Drake, 54-20. Novato was idle.

Keith Strange led Terra Linda to victory by winning the 100-yard freestyle in 50.0 and the 100 breaststroke in 1:02.3, both times the best in the MCAL this year, but Redwood's Spencer Eldred also swam MCAL bests in winning the 200 free (1:52.1) and the 100 butterfly (57.6).

Mike Kamler won two events and a relay for San Rafael, while Art Morrill and Dave Milano each took two and a relay for San Marin. Varsity and Class B swimmers from Marin Catholic competed against the San Marin and Drake "B" teams in a triangular meet and won with 58 points

GALLAGHER TRADED

N.L. Starting To Believe In Year Of Young Giants

COMBINED AP & UPI

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco likes to boast that "this is the year of the young Giants" and the rest of the National League is starting to believe it.

It was the young hotshots who led the red-hot Giants to three runs in the eighth inning Friday night for a 5-4 comeback victory over National League king Cincinnati and the team's fifth straight win.

The Giants also showed that this is the year of the youth movement when they swapped disgruntled Al Gallagher, a veteran at age 27, to the California Angels Friday night and brought up still another youngster to take his place on the roster.

Rookie Garry Matthews doubled home pinch-runner Domi Blanco with the winning run Friday after another rookie, Garry Maddix, had singled to score the tying run.

Matthews, a 22-year old outfielder, had three hits after going into the game with a .154 average.

His game-winner was a towering drive to right field that usually-reliable Bobby Tolan badly misjudged. The ball bounced over the fence for a ground rule double.

It was the third straight hit off Cincinnati relief ace Tom Hall who was the loser.

Manager Sparky Anderson of the Reds brought in Hall because he thought it would keep Giants' manager Charlie Fox from sending Willie McCovey to the plate as a pinch-hitter.

But Fox went against the strategy and McCovey made it pay off with a run-scoring single.

"I don't know who ever said I couldn't hit against lefthanded pitchers but I'm tired of it," McCovey said. He didn't start because Fox felt he needed a rest.

The big rally started quietly with Cincinnati starter Ross Grimsley getting the first two batters. Then Chris Speier walked and Dave Kingman singled.

That's when Anderson's strategy, which helped produce a National League championship last year, backfired.

Gallagher was the third baseman for the 1971 pennant-winners but had been platooned with Ed Goodson, Dave Kingman and Jim Hart over the past two seasons.

"It's up to Al Gallagher to prove manager Charlie Fox wrong," Gallagher said. "I'm just thankful for the opportunity to play. All I asked for

Twins' Hisle Continues Batting Assault On A's

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Mention Larry Hisle and the Oakland Athletics seem to roll over and play dead.

The centerfielder of the Minnesota Twins hit a solo homer and scored three runs Friday to help the Twins open their home season with an 8-4 victory. It was Minnesota's fourth straight triumph this season over the world champions.

And Hisle, who has had previous unimpressive stints with Philadelphia, Los Angeles and St. Louis in the National League, played an important role in three of them. He has eight hits, three home runs and five runs batted in so far this season against Oakland from his leadoff spot.

Today the A's hope he loses his way to the ballpark before lefty Ken Holtzman (0-1) of Oakland duels Bert Blyleven (1- 1) in the second meeting of the weekend series.

A crowd of 13,040 turned out on a cool and windy day Friday to watch the Twins tee off on starter John Odom and relievers Paul Lindblad and Horacio Pina for eight runs in the first three innings.

Oakland closed the gap on two-run homers by Reggie Jackson in the fourth and Sal Bando in the sixth. But Ray Corbin took over for starter Jim Kaat in the seventh and blanked the A's over the final three innings.

Red Wings' Coach Wilson 'Could See Ax Coming'

Combined AP & UPI

DETROIT — John Wilson "could see it coming."

Friday the 13th arrived with a bang: Wilson was fired as coach of the Detroit Red Wings.

"I'm not surpirsed," Wilson, 43, said after general manager Ned Harkness of the National Hockey League tea told him his services were no longer wanted. "I could see it coming all winter."

"They're not going to get another coach as good as John Wilson," veteran center Alex Delvecchio of the Red Wings said on learning of the firing. "He got no support form the front office."

No successor was announced but the No. 1 man has to be Ted Gavin, highly sought after coach of the Port Huron Wings in the International Hockey League. Port Huron is Detroit's IHL affiliate.

The Red Wings went to 37-29-12 this past season but were again nudged out of the playoffs, this time by Buffalo, because of a losing two-game road trip to the West Coast.

VANCOUVER — Bail of $25,000 was set yesterday for Vancouver Canucks president, Thomas Scallen.

Scallen was released on bail only hours after he was sentenced to four years in prison for stealing $3 million and filing a false prospectus which raised funds for his National Hockey League franchise.

PRO BASKETBALL

Home Court A Big Plus For Chicago

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

In the Los Angeles-Chicago basketball series, home is where the victory is — in all six games, the win has gone to the team hugging its own hardwood.

Friday night in Chicago it was the Bulls turn to be lousy hosts. They defeated the Lakers 101-93, forcing the seventh game in Los Angeles Sunday night.

In the other National Basketball Association playoff action, Boston stopped Atlanta 121-103 wrapping up that series 4-2 while Golden State also eliminated Milwaukee in six games, winning the finale 100-86.

Before a season-high 18,096 fans, Bulls' guards Norm Van Lier and Jerry Sloan combined for 53 points to pick up the slack after Chet Walker was slowed by a knee injury and Bob Love could produce only five points.

Sloan was shifted to forward after Walker's injury and responded with a game-high 27 points. Walker returned to the game late in the third period and finished with 16.

In Atlanta, the Celtics polished off the Hawks with a 25-2 burst in the final quarter.

Jo Jo White paced the Celtic attack with 33 points while Dave Cowens contributed 27 and John Havlicek had 24.

Lou Hudson accounted for 35 of Atlanta's points, 29 in the first half.

Boston now meets New York in a rematch of last year's semifinal series which the Knicks won. Opening game is Sunday afternoon in Boston.

The Golden State Warriors advanced into the semifinals by shocking favored Milwaukee 4-2.

Jim Barnett scored 26 points to pace the Warriors, who were able to defeat the Bucks only once in six tries during the regular season.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had 27 points for the Bucks.

The American Basketball Association returns to action today as Kentucky, with a 1-0 lead, travels to Carolina for a 2:00 game. Tonight, Utah goes for its second victory as it hosts Indiana in a 9:35 start.

Canadiens Star Frets About Playoff Rival

MONTREAL (UPI) — Frank Mahovlich, the big winger who bagged his 500th career goal this past season, is worried heading into the semifinal series of the Stanley Cup playoffs between the Montreal Canadiens and the Philadelphia Flyers.

"We have to get ourselves together, we almost blew the series in the quarterfinals to the Buffalo Sabres," Mahovlich said. "We were not mentally alert and we can't play that way and expect to beat the Flyers."

"I don't think we're ready, but I know we're going to get together before tonight's opener and we will be well organized to face the Flyers."

Philadelphia qualified for the semifinals for the first time in its six-year history by eliminating the Minnesota North Stars four games to two. It took the Canadiens six games to eliminate Buffalo in their quarterfinal series.

The New York Rangers lead the Chicago Black Hawks, 1-0, in the other semifinal series, which resumes Sunday afternoon at Chicago with a nationally televised game (NBC) at 3 p.m. EST.

Giants Win Series On Casey's Homer

By DAVE BRASE and TIM SIMONS

NEW YORK — A month ago, there was an awesome earthquake in Japan; but at home, things are going well. There is peace, prosperity and a giant new baseball stadium in New York called Yankee Stadium.

Today in that stadium, baseball commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis has announced that 58,000 people are in attendance. This total breaks all existing records for attendance at a World Series game.

It's the first World Series game in the Yankee Stadium but the third straight year that both New York teams will square off in baseball's grand finale.

The John McGraw-led Giants have beaten the Yankees in the two previous series.

Now we're in the top of the ninth and the score is tied. "Bullet" Joe Bush is on the mound for the Yanks. There are two outs and the batter is the veteran outfielder Casey Stengel.

The count is 3-2 on Casey. "Bullet" Joe delivers and Stengel drills a line drive to the hole in left-center. Casey has one bad leg but this should be in for extra bases.

Stengel is really moving as he charges around second base headed for third. He reaches third and without hesitation turns for home! The entire crowd rises to their feet as the strong arm of left fielder Bob Muesel fires the ball to the plate.

Catcher Wally Schang waits as Casey Stengel races desperately to beat the baseball home. Stengel slides. Schang can't make the tag. Casey has done it!

The Giants shut the Yankees out in the bottom of the ninth and win the first game of this 1923 World Series thanks to their colorful, 33 year old outfielder Charles Dillon Stengel.

BOWLING NOTES

Baciocco Has 785 At Country Club

"I'm still in shock. I still can't believe it."

The elated speaker was San Rafael bowler Bob Baciocco and he was discussing his record-shattering 785 series at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael Tuesday night in the 905 Classic.

The 38-year-old Marinite broke the house mark established by Charles Valsecchi of San Rafael who had a 769 in the same league Feb. 6. Baciocco's effort is the best recorded Marin showing of the year.

While Valsecchi deemed his own production as "lucky," Baciocco considered his "shocking. I'm still excited about it." Baciocco bowled games of 288, 256 and 241. In his 288 game, Baciocco surpassed his previous best outing of 277.

"I missed a 300 game this time by leaving the 3-6 on my 11th ball. Just before I rolled that ball, I was trembling. After I left the pins, I said 'I'm glad that's over with.'" He converted the spare and continued his scintillating showing in the next two games.

In the final game, the Marin bowler who carries a 188 average had an open on the third frame. Had he spared that one, Baciocco would have broken the 800 barrier.

Afterwards, he said "that's my best series ever. I've never bowled a sanctioned 700 before."

Baciocco, president of a San Francisco designing firm, then saluted his spectators and bowlers for their support. "They were great. They gave me a lot of encouragement."

Ex-Cager Hightower Files $573,000 Suit

DENVER (UPI) — Former basketball player Wayne Hightower filed a $573,000 lawsuit in U. S. District Court against the American Basketball Association and the Carolina Cougars Friday, charging the contract he signed gave Carolina a monopoly on him.

Hightower, 32, alleged he signed a three-year contract with the Cougars in 1971, guaranteeing him $40,000 the first year, $45,000 the second and $25,000 the third. On Sept. 19, 1972, Hightower was traded to the Denver Rockets with the agreement Denver would pay him $17,500 a year and Carolina would pick up the difference.

Golf Star Blancas Hot As Weather

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — Homero Blancas' golf game heats up with the weather.

The pudgy, good-natured Texan seldom plays well during the winter months, but he had three top 10 finishes last month in Florida and, now that it's April in the Sunshine State, he has a good shot at his first victory of the year.

Blancas went into today's third round of the $150,000 Monsanto Open with a two stroke lead over Frank Beard and the way he played the first two rounds indicated he's on a hot streak.

The 33-year-old Blancas had a 4-under-par 67 Thursday and, with three birdies on the back nine including a 35-foot chip shot, posted a 69 Friday — the only man to shoot in the 60s two days in a row.

Beard, who has not played up his usual standards the past year and a half, came out of the pack Friday "with my best putting in six months" to post a 66 for a 138 total.

Four others, including Aussie Bruce Crampton, who needs at least a third place finish here to vault past Jack Nicklaus and Lee Travino — both of whom skipped this tournament — and take over first place on this year's PGA money list, is one stroke behind Beard.

He was tied at 139 after 36 holes over the Pensacola Country Club course, with its brisk winds and hard, slick greens, with Al Geiberger, two-time champion Doug Sanders and Bob Wynn. Napa's Ron Cerrudo made the cut with a 145.

Friday's round included three holes-in-one, by Mason Rudolph, Tommy Shaw and George Hixon, the most for one round that any Professional Golfers Association official could recall. In fact, there have been only six other aces previously on this year's tour.

Blancas went into Friday's round with only a one-stroke lead over Sanders and was tied with Beard on the leader board, at 4-under, with seven holes to play.

"I knew," said Blancas, who started late in the day, "that my lead was already gone and I sort of kept track whenever I came across a scoreboard out on the course," he said.

around here was a chance, but Charlie never showed any confidence in me.

"Fox told me more than once that I was the worst player in baseball," Gallagher added. "So when I found out about the trade, I went to his office and thanked him for giving me a chance to play somewhere else."

He had said he wanted to play regularly or he traded and Friday was swapped for minor league infielder Bruce Miller, who hit .289 at Tucson last year.

The Giants sent Miller to Phoenix and called up 22-year-old Mike Phillips, a fancy glove man who hit .248 at Phoenix last year.

Ozark Decision On Christenson

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Those people who questioned Philadelphia manager Danny Ozark's decision to keep 19-year-old righthander Larry Christenson on the Phillies' roster this spring should apologize for doubting the wisdom of such a seer.

The youngster has "big leaguer" written all over him. In fact, there are some who feel the Phillies have found themselves another Robin Roberts.

Christenson, who was pitching at Marysville High School in the state of Washington at this time last year, made his major league debut Friday night and tossed a five-hitter against the New York Mets as the Phillies posted a 7-1 triumph. It was the Mets' first loss after four victories.

A 6-foot-4, 215-pounder with a good fastball and a fine curve, Christenson came within one out of posting a shutout when Cleon Jones doubled then scored all the way from second on a passed ball by rookie catcher Bob Boone.

But, except for that lucky break, the Mets were virtually helpless against Christenson. The rookie pitcher was a bit wild, walking six, but the Phillies bailed him out of trouble with three double plays.

Christenson, the Phils' No. 1 choice in the draft last June, pitched last summer at Pulaski of the Appalachian Rookie League and posted a 4-2 record with only two complete games. This spring, however, he impressed Ozark enough to be kept on the roster at the expense of some veteran pitchers.

"It's easier here," said Christenson, comparing the majors to the minors. "The tremendous defense...and the help on offense. The team really did it tonight especially with those doubleplays. I'm disappointed at not getting the shutout but not that much as long as I won.

In other National League games Friday night, St. Louis beat Chicago 6-3, San Diego nipped Houston 5-4, Los Angeles downed Atlanta 6-3 and San Francisco beat Cincinnati 5-4.

Christmas Spirit In Milwaukee

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Christmas was in the air Friday at Milwaukee County Stadium and snow was on the ground but Bill Parsons was the only one who had reason to celebrate.

Parsons and Jerry Bell combined on a one-hitter as the Brewers won their 1973 home opener with a 2-0 victory over the Baltimore Orioles before 13,883 fans who braved the 38-degree weather.

The Brewers' first two home games were postponed after a record 15-inch snowfall hit the city Monday. There was still a foot of snow on the ground as strains of "Oh, Come All the Faithful" could be heard through the Stadium.

Parsons, who pitched only 13 innings in spring training because of shoulder trouble, tired in the eighth inning and needed relief help from Bell.

Mike Cuellar allowed the Brewers only three hits, but two were home runs—one by designated hitter Ollie Brown and the other by Pedro Garcia who also homered against Cuellar last Saturday.

Parsons allowed only Paul Blair's solid single to right in the seventh before tiring in the eighth. He retired Mark Belanger to start the inning but Merv Rettenmund walked and manager Del Crandall brought in Bell, who walked Bobby Grich and Earl Williams to load the bases before retiring the side en route to picking up his first save of the season.

In other games Minnesota whipped Oakland 8-4, Kansas City belted Chicago 12-5, Detroit edged Cleveland 4-3 and Texas defeated California 4-2. New York and Boston were idle.

Amos Otis got four hits, including his second homer of the season, and scored three runs to pace Kansas City past Chicago.

Jerry Johnson, acquired by Cleveland from San Francisco during the winter, walked home Bill Freehan with the winning run in the seventh inning to lead Detroit over Cleveland.

Texas made four hits count for four runs and Mike Paul and Steve Foucault combined on an eight-hitter as the Rangers defeated California.

Marsi Pitches Tomales Past St. Vincent '9'

Sophomore Sam Marsi pitched a one-hitter under threatening skies yesterday to lead the Tomales High School braves to a 6-0 North Central League II baseball victory over host St. Vincent of Petaluma.

Marsi's bid for a no-hitter was broken up with two out in the seventh inning when Dan Tocchini laced a single into right field. Jim Leoni was thrown out trying to go to third on the play for the final out of the game.

The win improves Tomales' NCL II mark to 3-1, putting them into a second-place tie with St. Vincent, one-half game behind Kelseyville.

"Marsi was effective out there," Braves coach Jim Clahan commented after the game. "He really did a fine job." Only two shots were hit off Marsi, besides Tocchini's, as he forced the Mustangs into ground outs and popups. He struck out just three and walked three.

Red Wings' Coach Wilson 'Could See Ax Coming'

Combined AP & UPI

DETROIT — John Wilson "could see it coming."

Friday the 13th arrived with a bang: Wilson was fired as coach of the Detroit Red Wings.

"I'm not surprised," Wilson, 43, said after general manager Ned Harkness of the National Hockey League tea told him his services were no longer wanted. "I could see it coming all winter."

"They're not going to get another coach as good as John Wilson," veteran center Alex Delvecchio of the Red Wings said on learning of the firing. "He got no support form the front office."

No successor was announced but the No. 1 man has to be Ted Gavin, highly sought after coach of the Port Huron Wings in the International Hockey League. Port Huron is Detroit's IHL affiliate.

The Red Wings went to 37-29-12 this past season but were again nudged out of the playoffs, this time by Buffalo, because of a losing two-game road trip to the West Coast.

PRO BASKETBALL

Home Court A Big Plus For Chicago

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

In the Los Angeles-Chicago basketball series, home is where the victory is — in all six games, the win has gone to the team hugging its own hardwood.

Friday night in Chicago it was the Bulls turn to be lousy hosts. They defeated the Lakers 101-93, forcing the seventh game in Los Angeles Sunday night.

In the other National Basketball Association playoff action, Boston stopped Atlanta 121-103 wrapping up that series 4-2 while Golden State also eliminated Milwaukee in six games, winning the finale 100-86.

Before a season-high 18,096 fans, Bulls' guards Norm Van Lier and Jerry Sloan combined for 53 points to pick up the slack after Chet Walker was slowed by a knee injury and Bob Love could produce only five points.

Sloan was shifted to forward after Walker's injury and responded with a game-high 27 points. Walker returned to the game late in the third period and finished with 16.

In Atlanta, the Celtics polished off the Hawks with a 25-2 burst in the final quarter.

Jo Jo White paced the Celtic attack with 33 points while Dave Cowens contributed 27 and John Havlicek had 24.

Lou Hudson accounted for 35 of Atlanta's points, 29 in the first half.

Boston now meets New York in a rematch of last year's semifinal series which the Knicks won. Opening game is Sunday afternoon in Boston.

The Golden State Warriors advanced into the semifinals by shocking favored Milwaukee 4-2.

Jim Barnett scored 26 points to pace the Warriors, who were able to defeat the Bucks only once in six tries during the regular season.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had 27 points for the Bucks.

The American Basketball Association returns to action today as Kentucky, with a 1-0 lead, travels to Carolina for a 2:00 game. Tonight, Utah goes for its second victory as it hosts Indiana in a 9:35 start.

Canadiens Star Frets About Playoff Rival

MONTREAL (UPI) — Frank Mahovlich, the big winger who bagged his 500th career goal this past season, is worried heading into the semifinal series of the Stanley Cup playoffs between the Montreal Canadiens and the Philadelphia Flyers.

"We have to get ourselves together, we almost blew the series in the quarterfinals to the Buffalo Sabres," Mahovlich said. "We were not mentally alert and we can't play that way and expect to beat the Flyers."

"I don't think we're ready, but I know we're going to get together before tonight's opener and we will be well organized to face the Flyers."

Philadelphia qualified for the semifinals for the first time in its six-year history by eliminating the Minnesota North Stars four games to two. It took the Canadiens six games to eliminate Buffalo in their quarterfinal series.

The New York Rangers lead the Chicago Black Hawks, 1-0, in the other semifinal series, which resumes Sunday afternoon at Chicago with a nationally televised game (NBC) at 3 p.m. EST.

Greg Biber was a double winner for Marin in the 120-yard high hurdles (16.1) and the triple jump (43-10) as the Tars won six events but yielded to the superior depth of the Bear Cubs, who are tied for the conference lead at 6-0. Marin is 1-5.

Giants Win Series On Casey's Homer

By DAVE BRASE and TIM SIMONS

NEW YORK — A month ago, there was an awesome earthquake in Japan; but at home, things are going well. There is peace, prosperity and a giant new baseball stadium in New York called Yankee Stadium.

Today in that stadium, baseball commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis has announced that 58,000 people are in attendance. This total breaks all existing records for attendance at a World Series game.

It's the first World Series game in the Yankee Stadium but the third straight year that both New York teams will square off in baseball's grand finale.

The John McGraw-led Giants have beaten the Yankees in the two previous series.

Now we're in the top of the ninth and the score is tied. "Bullet" Joe Bush is on the mound for the Yanks. There are two outs and the batter is the veteran outfielder Casey Stengel.

The count is 3-2 on Casey. "Bullet" Joe delivers and Stengel drills a line drive to the hole in left-center. Casey has one bad leg but this should be in for extra bases.

Stengel is really moving as he charges around second base headed for third. He reaches third and without hesitation turns for home! The entire crowd rises to their feet as the strong arm of left fielder Bob Muesel fires the ball to the plate.

Catcher Wally Schang waits as Casey Stengel races desperately to beat the baseball home. Stengel slides. Schang can't make the tag. Casey has done it!

The Giants shut the Yankees out in the bottom of the ninth and win the first game of this 1923 World Series thanks to their colorful, 33 year old outfielder Charles Dillon Stengel.

BOWLING NOTES

Baciocco Has 785 At Country Club

"I'm still in shock. I still can't believe it."

The elated speaker was San Rafael bowler Bob Baciocco and he was discussing his record-shattering 785 series at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael Tuesday night in the 905 Classic.

The 38-year-old Marinite broke the house mark established by Charles Valsecchi of San Rafael who had a 769 in the same league Feb. 6. Baciocco's effort is the best recorded Marin showing of the year.

While Valsecchi deemed his own production as "lucky," Baciocco considered his "shocking. I'm still excited about it." Baciocco bowled games of 288, 256 and 241. In his 288 game, Baciocco surpassed his previous best outing of 277.

"I missed a 300 game this time by leaving the 3-6 on my 11th ball. Just before I rolled that ball, I was trembling. After I left the pins, I said 'I'm glad that's over with.'" He converted the spare and continued his scintillating showing in the next two games.

In the final game, the Marin bowler who carries a 188 average had an open on the third frame. Had he spared that one, Baciocco would have broken the 800 barrier.

Afterwards, he said "that's my best series ever. I've never bowled a sanctioned 700 before."

Baciocco, president of a San Francisco designing firm, then saluted his spectators and bowlers for their support. "They were great. They gave me a lot of encouragement."

Ex-Cager Hightower Files $573,000 Suit

DENVER (UPI) — Former basketball player Wayne Hightower filed a $573,000 lawsuit in U. S. District Court against the American Basketball Association and the Carolina Cougars Friday, charging the contract he signed gave Carolina a monopoly on him.

Hightower, 32, alleged he signed a three-year contract with the Cougars in 1971, guaranteeing him $40,000 the first year, $45,000 the second and $25,000 the third. On Sept. 19, 1972, Hightower was traded to the Denver Rockets with the agreement Denver would pay him $17,500 a year and Carolina would pick up the difference.

Golf Star Blancas Hot As Weather

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — Homero Blancas' golf game heats up with the weather.

The pudgy, good-natured Texan seldom plays well during the winter months, but he had three top 10 finishes last month in Florida and, now that it's April in the Sunshine State, he has a good shot at his first victory of the year.

Blancas went into today's third round of the $150,000 Monsanto Open with a two stroke lead over Frank Beard and the way he played the first two rounds indicated he's on a hot streak.

The 33-year-old Blancas had a 4-under-par 67 Thursday and, with three birdies on the back nine including a 35-foot chip shot, posted a 69 Friday — the only man to shoot in the 60s two days in a row.

Beard, who has not played up his usual standards the past year and a half, came out of the pack Friday "with my best putting in six months" to post a 66 for a 138 total.

Four others, including Aussie Bruce Crampton, who needs at least a third place finish here to vault past Jack Nicklaus and Lee Travino — both of whom skipped this tournament — and take over first place on this year's PGA money list, is one stroke behind Beard.

He was tied at 139 after 36 holes over the Pensacola Country Club course, with its brisk winds and hard, slick greens, with Al Geiberger, two-time champion Doug Sanders and Bob Wynn. Napa's Ron Cerrudo made the cut with a 145.

Friday's round included three holes-in-one, by Mason Rudolph, Tommy Shaw and George Hixon, the most for one round that any Professional Golfers Association official could recall. In fact, there have been only six other aces previously on this year's tour.

Blancas went into Friday's round with only a one-stroke lead over Sanders and was tied with Beard on the leader board, at 4-under, with seven holes to play.

"I knew," said Blancas, who started late in the day, "that my lead was already gone and I sort of kept track whenever I came across a scoreboard out on the course," he said.

GIANTS

around here was a chance, but Charlie never showed any confidence in me.

"Fox told me more than once that I was the worst player in baseball," Gallagher added. "So when I found out about the trade, I went to his office and thanked him for giving me a chance to play somewhere else."

He had said he wanted to play regularly or he traded and Friday was swapped for minor league infielder Bruce Miller, who hit .289 at Tucson last year.

The Giants sent Miller to Phoenix and called up 22-year-old Mike Phillips, a fancy glove man who hit .248 at Phoenix last year.

Ozark Decision On Christenson

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Those people who questioned Philadelphia manager Danny Ozark's decision to keep 19-year-old righthander Larry Christenson on the Phillies' roster this spring should apologize for doubting the wisdom of such a seer.

The youngster has "big leaguer" written all over him. In fact, there are some who feel the Phillies have found themselves another Robin Roberts.

Christenson, who was pitching at Marysville High School in the state of Washington at this time last year, made his major league debut Friday night and tossed a five-hitter against the New York Mets as the Phillies posted a 7-1 triumph. It was the Mets' first loss after four victories.

A 6-foot-4, 215-pounder with a good fastball and a fine curve, Christenson came within one out of posting a shutout when Cleon Jones doubled then scored all the way from second on a passed ball by rookie catcher Bob Boone.

But, except for that lucky break, the Mets were virtually helpless against Christenson. The rookie pitcher was a bit wild, walking six, but the Phillies bailed him out of trouble with three double plays.

Christenson, the Phils' No. 1 choice in the draft last June, pitched last summer at Pulaski of the Appalachian Rookie League and posted a 4-2 record with only two complete games. This spring, however, he impressed Ozark enough to be kept on the roster at the expense of some veteran pitchers.

"It's easier here," said Christenson, comparing the majors to the minors. "The tremendous defense...and the help on offense. The team really did it tonight especially with those doubleplays. I'm disappointed at not getting the shutout but not that much as long as I won.

In other National League games Friday night, St. Louis beat Chicago 6-3, San Diego nipped Houston 5-4, Los Angeles downed Atlanta 6-3 and San Francisco beat Cincinnati 5-4.

Christmas Spirit In Milwaukee

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Christmas was in the air Friday at Milwaukee County Stadium and snow was on the ground but Bill Parsons was the only one who had reason to celebrate.

Parsons and Jerry Bell combined on a one-hitter as the Brewers won their 1973 home opener with a 2-0 victory over the Baltimore Orioles before 13,883 fans who braved the 38-degree weather.

The Brewers' first two home games were postponed after a record 15-inch snowfall hit the city Monday. There was still a foot of snow on the ground as strains of "Oh, Come All the Faithful" could be heard through the Stadium.

Parsons, who pitched only 13 innings in spring training because of shoulder trouble, tired in the eighth inning and needed relief help from Bell.

Mike Cuellar allowed the Brewers only three hits, but two were home runs—one by designated hitter Ollie Brown and the other by Pedro Garcia who also homered against Cuellar last Saturday.

Parsons allowed only Paul Blair's solid single to right in the seventh before tiring in the eighth. He retired Mark Belanger to start the inning but Merv Rettenmund walked and manager Del Crandall brought in Bell, who walked Bobby Grich and Earl Williams to load the bases before retiring the side en route to picking up his first save of the season.

In other games Minnesota whipped Oakland 8-4, Kansas City belted Chicago 12-5, Detroit edged Cleveland 4-3 and Texas defeated California 4-2. New York and Boston were idle.

Amos Otis got four hits, including his second homer of the season, and scored three runs to pace Kansas City past Chicago.

Jerry Johnson, acquired by Cleveland from San Francisco during the winter, walked home Bill Freehan with the winning run in the seventh inning to lead Detroit over Cleveland.

Texas made four hits count for four runs and Mike Paul and Steve Foucault combined on an eight-hitter as the Rangers defeated California.

Marsi Pitches Tomales Past St. Vincent '9'

Sophomore Sam Marsi pitched a one-hitter under threatening skies yesterday to lead the Tomales High School braves to a 6-0 North Central League II baseball victory over host St. Vincent of Petaluma.

Marsi's bid for a no-hitter was broken up with two out in the seventh inning when Dan Tocchini laced a single into right field. Jim Leoni was thrown out trying to go to third on the play for the final out of the game.

The win improves Tomales' NCL II mark to 3-1, putting them into a second-place tie with St. Vincent, one-half game behind Kelseyville.

"Marsi was effective out there," Braves coach Jim Clahan commented after the game. "He really did a fine job." Only two shots were hit off Marsi, besides Tocchini's, as he forced the Mustangs into ground outs and popups. He struck out just three and walked three.

STUDENTS KEEP BAY WATCH

Members of San Rafael High School marine biology classes checked water conditions in San Rafael Canal yesterday as part of a 12-school bay study project. Called MER, Marine Ecology Research, it is sponsored by the Contra Costa County Department of Education to keep watch on changes in San Francisco Bay waters. About 60 students in three classes are involved in the study of pollution and silt levels, salinity, and condition of marine organisms, said teacher Larry Lack (standing in middle boat). The data also is passed to the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce for information on the effects of dredging and sewer overflow in the canal. (Independent-Journal photo)

Park Area Workshops Announced

A series of lectures and workshops aimed at helping Bay Area citizens play a planning role for the Golden Gate National Recreation Area will be sponsored by the University of California Extension in San Francisco next month.

A day-long series of lectures May 12 on "National Parks and Urban America" will feature conservationists, environment writers, urban project officials and federal state and local parks officials, including Pierre W. Joske, Marin County Director of Parks and Recreation.

Evening workshops May 14 through 17 will explore desirable uses of the huge recreation area in Marin and San Francisco counties for conservation, recreation and performing arts.

Information and registration forms are available from the University Extension, 2223 Fulton Street, Berkeley 94720.

Two Easter Egg Hunts Announced

Two Easter egg hunts in San Rafael — one at Albert Park and the other at the Terra Linda Recreation Center — will begin at 10 a.m. April 21 for children through age 8.

The event is sponsored by the San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department, the San Rafael Police Officers Association and the San Rafael Jaycees, according to Andrew J. Snyder, parks and recreation director.

Dates Changed For Dominican Musical Events

Performance dates for two concerts scheduled by Dominican College in San Rafael this spring have been changed.

A faculty recital by Willard Tressel, violin, and Ted Blair, piano, has been postponed from April 29 to May 6 at 7:30 p.m. in Angelico Hall. The program will include the music of Beethoven, Saint-Saens and Leon Kirchner.

The final concert of the Music Associates Chamber Music Series likewise has been postponed from May 6 to May 20 at 7:30 p.m. in Caleruega Hall.

This program will be presented by twin pianists William Corbett-Jones and Sylvia Jenkins. A trio originally scheduled to perform May 6 has canceled because of illness of one of the members.

Basic Canoeing Course Is Set

A six-week course in basic canoeing, sponsored by the Marin Chapter, American National Red Cross, will be taught by Richard Brown of Novato beginning May 3.

The course will conclude with a day-long river outing.

Students must provide canoes, paddles and lifejackets. Registration and information are available at the chapter headquarters, 712 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael.

Vote Tuesday For Your School Trustees

By ERIK INGRAM

Voters in 15 Marin County school districts will select Tuesday from a large field of candidates vying for 43 board seats up for grabs this year.

In all, some 95 candidates will be in the running when the polls open at 7 a.m. The polls will close at 8 p.m.

The largest turnout of candidates is in the tiny Bolinas-Stinson Beach School District where eight hopefuls are competing for three four-year seats and three others are battling for the unexpired term of Trustee John G. Barrow.

Bolinas-Stinson Beach voters also will consider a proposal that the school district's general purpose operating tax rate be increased from its present $2.05 to a new $2.55 per $100 assessed valuation.

Originally, 110 persons filed for some 57 trustee positions in 21 Marin districts, but the field has narrowed because of dropouts and "no contest" elections. There is a contest for one county board of education position.

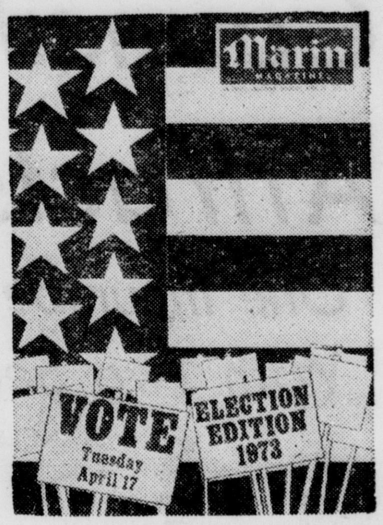
Six districts, including the usually volatile Sausalito School District, failed to draw fields larger than the number of seats up for election.

Other "no contest" districts include the Laguna, Lincoln, Nicasio, Shoreline Unified and Union school districts.

In Southern Sonoma County, the Cotati-Rohnert Park School District and the Adobe School District are also without trustee contests. In the former, Maurice C. Fredericks, Anthony Carbone and Gloria A. Garrett are unopposed for three positions. In the latter incumbents Margaret Kullberg and William V. Youngs, and Donald C. Bennett have no opposition.

Residents of the Cotati-Rohnert Park School District, however, will vote on a one-and-a-half million dollar bond issue for school construction purposes.

In other elections around Marin, voters in Novato will consider a four and a half million dollar bond measure for flood control, voters in Fairfax a $300,000 bond measure for a new fire station, among other things, and voters in San Anselmo a $500,000 bond measure for open space. San Rafael voters will elect councilmen as well as school board members, and decide the fate of several city charter change proposals.



THE COVER

ON TUESDAY, voters of Marin County will go to the polls to perform one of their most important civic obligations and opportunities — to help select their school board members. In several Marin and Sonoma County areas, special elections have also been scheduled in conjunction with the school election. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. To assist the voters in their decisions, this issue of the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine is a special edition devoted to the election — the candidates, their qualifications, their stands upon what they consider to be the most pressing issues of their respective districts.

The Special Elections: Bonds And Director

A heated race in the Fourth Division of the Marin Municipal Water District heads the list of special elections set for Tuesday.

In other special elections, voters in Novato will consider a four and a half million dollar bond measure for flood control work, voters in San Anselmo will decide a $500,000 bond measure for open space, and voters in Fairfax will ponder a $300,000 bond measure for a new fire station, among other things.

A two-thirds majority of votes cast is needed to pass bond issues.

The polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

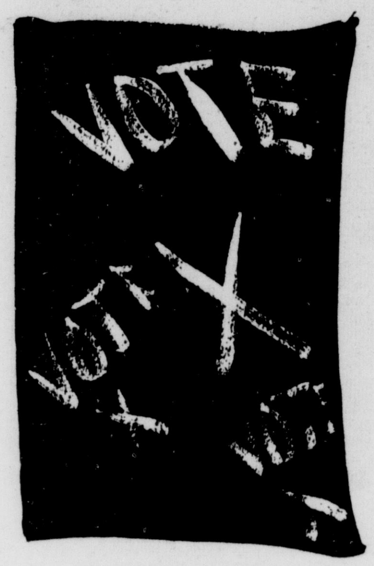
IN THE WATER district's Fourth Division (Mill Valley and parts of Kentfield), voters will choose from three candidates — Jerome Hauke, Dr. L. Martin Griffin and Ross Shade.

The three are vying for the unexpired term of Eugene A. Miller and the race has broken down into a battle between those who would limit water to restrict population growth and those who wouldn't.

VOTERS IN THE Novato Flood Control Zone, where waters rampaged out of creeks and into homes this past winter, will vote on the bond measure to finance a Novato Creek Flood Control Project.

The zone, 44 square miles, from Big Rock Ridge to Gnoss Field and from San Pablo Bay to within a mile of the Petaluma-Point Reyes Road, contains 16,770 registered voters.

The type of project to be undertaken isn't specified in the measure, but the work would consist of enlarging Novato Creek channel from Highway 101 to San Pablo Bay, control of Novato Creek from Diablo Avenue to Stafford Lake, and cleaning and enlarging of Warner Creek and the lower portion of Arroyo Avicchi Creek, according to Citizens for Creek Protection and Enhancement.



There isn't any written argument against the measure, but some local conservationists are worried about the potential for a concrete channel.

The choices, according to the district's consultants, are a local-federal (Army Corps of Engineers) project which would include a concrete channel along Warner Creek, a modification of the local-federal project, and leaving creeks in their natural state.

Proponents said along with flood control, the work would include enhancement of creek areas, including recreational amenities, and that public hearings will be held before any project is approved, giving people in the area the chance to reject it.

SAN ANSELMO residents will vote on a $500,000 bond issue to preserve as open space portions of 226 acres of undeveloped land in the city.

The measure at the outset would cost taxpayers 10.8 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, with the levy gradually decreasing over a 25-year period as the city's assessed valuation increases. The cost to the owner of a $40,000 home would be $11 the first year, according to city officials.

Some 7,608 registered voters are eligible to cast ballots.

FAIRFAX RESIDENTS on Tuesday will vote on a $300,000 bond issue for construction of a new firehouse and remodeling of police facilities on the current site at Bolinas Road and Park Street.

The measure at the outset would cost taxpayers 12.1 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, with the levy gradually decreasing over a 25-year period as the city's assessed valuation increases. The cost to the owner of a $30,000 home would be $6 the first year, according to city estimates.

Some 4,313 registered voters are eligible to cast ballots.

VOTERS IN THE Bolinas-Stinson School District will be asked to approve a 50c increase in the district's tax rate when they go to the polls Tuesday.

The tax hike would bring the district's total levy to $2.25 per $100 of assessed valuation.

The school district board agreed to ask for the additional money in January, saying it was needed to make up for revenues lost by creation of the Point Reyes National Seashore and Golden Gate National Recreation Area.

School officials say local income is down more than $10,000 from last year and will fall even lower when land losses from the recreational are calculated fully.

An additional reason for the tax election is the new state tax shift law which will compute future income for the small West Marin district on the basis of current, reduced revenues.

Officials contend that the district cannot expect much more than the current $240,000 annual income in future years.

District residents appear to be split on the tax proposal. Some favor it, saying that unless the district gets the additional money, programs will have to be cut and the quality of education will suffer.

Others contend that all the ramifications of the tax shift measure are not yet known and say the district should not ask for the increase until it knows for certain if more money — and just how much — will be needed.

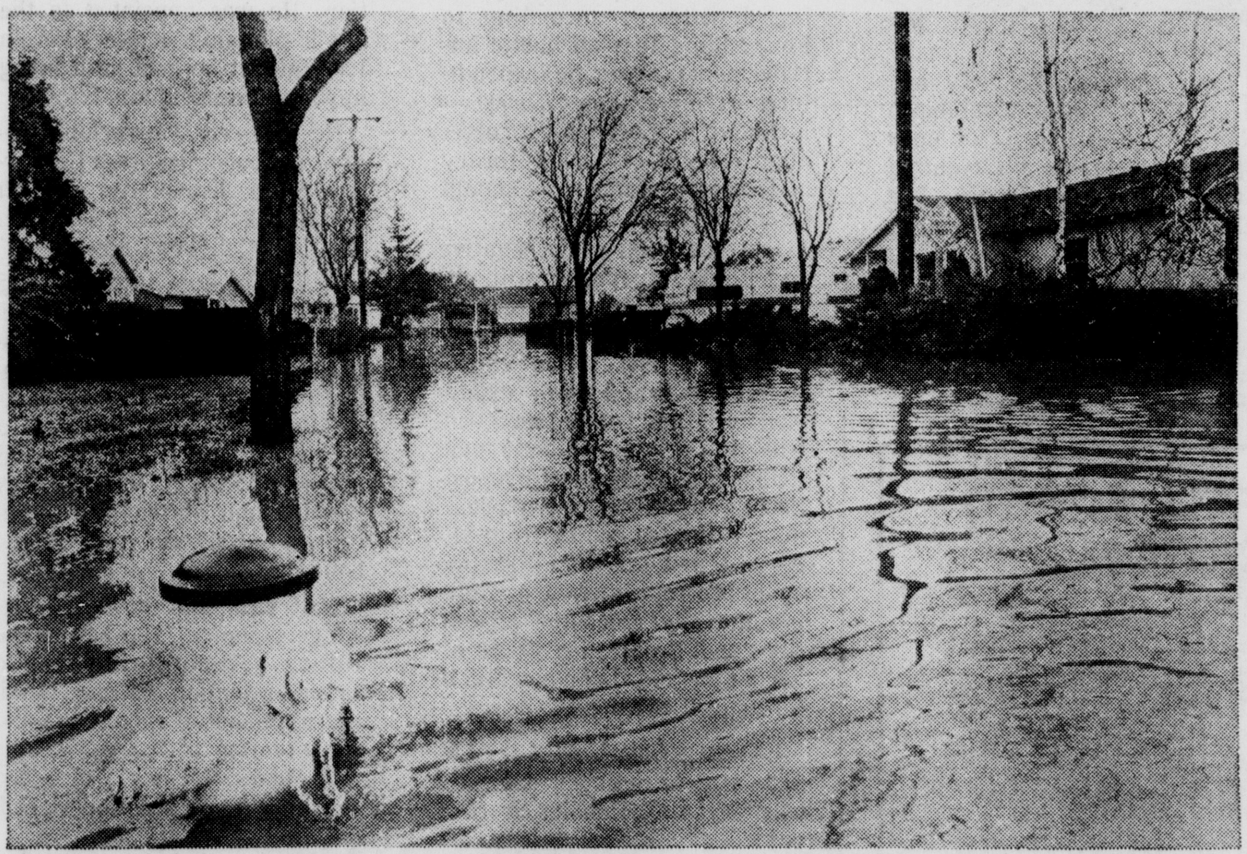
A simple majority is needed to pass the tax measure.

There are 1,259 registered voters in the district.

VOTERS IN THE Cotati-Rohnert Park School District in southern Sonoma County will decide on a million and a half dollar school building bond issue Tuesday.

The funds together with state assistance will be used to build a 15-classroom school in the Holiday Park area to accommodate new growth there.

The Sonoma County assessor's office estimates the bonds would add 23 cents per $100 assessed valuation on the district tax rate. For the first year the bonds would add $17.25 to the taxes of the owner of a home with a $30,000 market value.



WITH VIVID MEMORIES of the scenes, such as this one that they have witnessed and experienced this winter, voters of the Novato Flood Control Zone will go to the polls Tuesday to approve or disapprove a four-and-half-million-dollar flood control bond issue. Enlargement of the Novato Creek Channel, cleaning and enlargement of Warner Creek and enhancement of the creek areas are proposed for the project. The bonds require a two-thirds vote of approval. The photograph above was taken by Independent-Journal staff photographer Alfred M. Arn in January at Garden Court off South Novato Boulevard, after Novato Creek had rampaged over its banks.

Six candidates are vying for two seats in the San Rafael City Council election on Tuesday.

The council contenders are Carl J. (Red) Brown, athletic director of Sir Francis Drake High School; Richard C. Fox, a research chemist; incumbent councilman Lawrence E. Mulryan; Jack G. Nixon, chairman of the county planning commission; Thomas R. O'Toole, chairman of the city planning commission, and Leo Tinkler, a San Rafael real estate broker.

Expiring on Tuesday are the terms of Mulryan and the late Harry A. Barbier, whose death last fall has left the council split on a number of issues.

Though candidates have offered varying shades of opinion, there has been general endorsement of the city's redevelopment plans, local control of planning, the city's formation of a new general plan and open space acquisition.

Questions concerning the city's past performance in planning matters, the city's sign ordinance and eight proposed charter amendments that will appear on Tuesday's ballot have provided a wider spectrum of opinion.

CARL J. BROWN, athletic director at Sir Francis Drake High School in San Anselmo since 1958, served on the city's park and recreation commission for six years, and was a member of the San Rafael Board of Education from 1963 to 1971. He served as chairman of the board for two years.

The 57-year-old Brown, who lives at 47 Longwood Drive, received a degree in physical education, as well as a teaching credential, from California State University, San Francisco. He was a member of the Civilian Conservation Corps, once worked as a pipefitter and is the former owner of a San Rafael tavern.

Brown has stressed the need for "new blood on an old council" and has declared that he has the ability to take an objective look at crucial issues "unlike others who follow the whims of their council buddies."

He has pledged to "tune my ear to the people of the community" if elected, and has said the city council should work more closely with the San Rafael Board of Education. "I support the idea that change can come from outside the council level," he said, adding he pushed for parks when on the parks commission "but the council wouldn't respond."

He has said that the city has been guilty of poor planning in the past and has urged that the city's general plan be "open-ended" to "take care of all concepts."

The three most important unmet needs of the city, according to Brown, are support for law enforcement, correction of drainage problems and flood control, and free parking downtown. Public improvements needed, he believes, in order of priority, include a recreation center, expanded library and central firehouse, Brown said.

Brown opposes Propositions H, J, and K, which would allow the council to set the size of the fire commission, parks commission and library board. "I think the citizens should decide," he said. Brown also opposes Proposition C, which would make the city treasurer an appointive post.

RICHARD C. FOX, a research chemist for Chevron Co., is a member of the city's citizen advisory committee on the general plan. He is a 17-year resident of San Rafael and lives at 127 Humboldt Street.

The 45-year-old Fox received his Bachelor's Degree in chemistry from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and won doctorate honors from the University of Illinois.

Fox, who describes himself as a conservative conservationist, has stressed that there is no incompatibility between ecology and economic health "since people come to San Rafael because of its beauty and business follows them. Destroy that beauty and you destroy San Rafael."

Fox, claiming the city has been guilty of poor planning in the past, has urged that open space dedications be required of all developments. He has also urged creation of a park and recreational area in the Canal district.

Fox has suggested stronger leash laws and a program whereby dog owners who repeatedly violate the law be sent to dog obedience school.

The three most important unmet needs of the city, according to Fox, are "beautification in its downtown, Canal and Francisco areas," more citizen participation, and "less special interest thinking and more good old-fashioned civic spirit and togetherness." Public improvements needed include parks downtown, beautification and trees downtown, and free parking downtown, according to Fox, adding that all public improvements involving expenditures of more than $250,000 — including proposals for a recreation center, expanded library and central firehouse — should be submitted to the voters.

Fox has been most negative regarding proposed amendments to the city charter. He called the wording of Propositions H, J and K too vague, saying he would favor expansion of the commissions involved to seven members each. He is uncertain about Proposition F, or increasing city promotion expenses ceiling from $1,000 to a new $15,000 lid. And he opposes Proposition C, or making the city treasurer appointive, and Proposition G, or allowing the board of education to fill its own vacancies.

LAWRENCE E. MULRYAN, appointed to the council in 1970 when Fred C. Robbins Jr. was named city attorney, is an attorney for a San Francisco insurance firm. He is the city's representative on the City-County Planning Council and the Association of Bay Area Governments.

He was recently elected by the Marin Council of Mayors and Councilmen to sit as a member of the Marin Local Agency Formation Commission.

The 35-year-old Mulryan, who lives at 74 Upper Oak Drive, founded and became first president of the Mont Marin Homeowners Association, served for a year on the Dixie School District financial committee, and is a former vice president of the Oak View School Association. He was appointed to the city's planning commission in 1969, a post he held until being appointed councilman.

He received a Bachelor's Degree in economics from California State University at San Diego and a law degree from Hastings College of Law.

Mulryan has stressed the need for citizen participation in city affairs, and pledged support of the Town Meeting Association, citizens advisory committee and formation of a committee on open space bond money allocation. Mulryan was co-chairman of the city's successful $2,250,000 open space bond campaign.

Mulryan has called long-range planning "the key to the future of San Rafael," and urged retention of the maximum amount of open space and preservation of the city's hills and ridges. He has also urged preservation of the Robert Dollar Estate.

He has called the city's sign ordinance — which he was "instrumental in drafting and approving" — as the best in the county, and has said the "Standard Brands" sign in the Mon-

LAWRENCE E. MULRYAN, appointed to the council in 1970 when Fred C. Robbins Jr. was named city attorney, is an attorney for a San Francisco insurance firm. He is the city's representative on the City-County Planning Council and the Association of Bay Area Governments.

He was recently elected by the Marin Council of Mayors and Councilmen to sit as a member of the Marin Local Agency Formation Commission.

The 35-year-old Mulryan, who lives at 74 Upper Oak Drive, founded and became first president of the Mont Marin Homeowners Association, served for a year on the Dixie School District financial committee, and is a former vice president of the Oak View School Association. He was appointed to the city's planning commission in 1969, a post he held until being appointed councilman.

He received a Bachelor's Degree in economics from California State University at San Diego and a law degree from Hastings College of Law.

Mulryan has stressed the need for citizen participation in city affairs, and pledged support of the Town Meeting Association, citizens advisory committee and formation of a committee on open space bond money allocation. Mulryan was co-chairman of the city's successful $2,250,000 open space bond campaign.

Mulryan has called long-range planning "the key to the future of San Rafael," and urged retention of the maximum amount of open space and preservation of the city's hills and ridges. He has also urged preservation of the Robert Dollar Estate.

He has called the city's sign ordinance — which he was "instrumental in drafting and approving" — as the best in the county, and has said the "Standard Brands" sign in the Mon-

The three most important unmet needs of the city, according to Mulryan, are to "enhance our cultural resources and preserve our historical heritage," reverse the trend of the Canal area toward overcrowding and improve recreation in the area, and the creation of moderate income housing in San Rafael.

He supports all proposed charter amendments.

JACK G. NIXON, appointed to the county planning commission in 1969 and its chairman since June, 1971, has served as a director of the Marinwood Community Services District, president of the United Homeowners Association of Greater San Rafael and as president of Marin Association of Life Underwriters. He received a Bachelors Degree from the University of Missouri and won Master's honors from the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

Nixon has said that long-range planning is the major task facing the city. "If we don't start to define where we want to be, it's a sure bet that we'll never get there."

The foremost issue is land use planning, according to Nixon, who has said that the city has done a poor job of planning in the past.

Nixon has listed the city's crime rate as another concern, saying police liaison officers should be sent into local neighborhoods to teach methods of burglary prevention to residents. Nixon has also urged maintenance of the current housing mix in the city, saying safety personnel who serve the community are hard pressed to find adequate housing.

He has called for preservation of the city's hills and ridges and has lauded the city's sign ordinance.

The three most important unfulfilled needs of the city, according to Nixon, are recreation facilities, the need to eliminate visual pollution and unattractiveness of some areas as the entrance to San Rafael, and the need for a general plan that reflects the views of the majority of city residents.

A recreation center, central firehouse and improved library — perhaps a Terra Linda branch — are needed public improvements, he said, adding improved parking downtown is also important.

Nixon has opposed Proposition F, the charter measure which would hike the city's lid on promotional spending from $1,000 to a $15,000 maximum.

THOMAS R. O'TOOLE, appointed to the San Rafael Planning Commission in 1962 and recently elected as its chairman, is a member of the Senior Citizens Coordinating Council and the city's chamber of commerce. He is co-owner of Milani's Garage in downtown San Rafael.

The 49-year-old O'Toole, who lives at 66 Junipero Serra, was defeated in a bid for election to the council in 1971. He polled 3,341 votes to 3,527 for incumbent John A. Miskimen and 3,515 for incumbent Fred E. Jensen.

O'Toole, a graduate of San Rafael High School, has described himself as a native son always available to discuss problems with citizens since he works downtown. He has advocated stable "income producing growth" and has stressed the need for moderate-priced housing to accompany such growth.

O'Toole has said that while open space preservation is important, each hill and ridge will have to "stand by itself" for acquisition consideration after the city's general plan is completed.

He has urged more police community relations work to stem the rising tide of burglaries in the city and suggested that the city tighten its mutual aid agreement ith the county because "our equipment is rolling when it shouldn't be." He has also suggested creation of a paramedic team in the city's fire department.

O'Toole has praised city efforts at planning, saying "we really haven't been dragging our heels at planning," and has backed the city's sign ordinance, although expressing uncertainty over size restrictions on signs allowed merchants with large frontages.

The three most important unmet needs of the city, according to O'Toole, are redevelopment downtown, an improved Canal area and more moderate priced housing. Public improvements needed, in order of priority, include library expansion — perhaps a Terra Linda branch — a recreation center and a central firehouse, O'Toole said, adding Canal area improvements and city entrance improvements are also needed.

Six Hopefuls Give Stands On Issues Facing The City

O'Toole supports all proposed charter amendments.

LEO TINKLER, a San Rafael real estate broker, is the head of Leo Real Estate Co. and Marin County Rentals on Fourth Street. He is president of the Tamalpais Toastmasters Club and has been active in the Little League program in Terra Linda.

The 48-year-old Tinkler, who lives at 749 Bamboo Terrace, attended the University of California at Berkeley and obtained an Associate of Arts Degree. He has taken various courses, enabling him to receive credentials as a licensed real estate broker, a licensed real estate agent, a licensed general insurance broker and a licensed registered representative of the National Association of Security Dealers.

Tinkler has stressed tax relief for property owners through thrift in city government, his independence as a result of a lack of any "favors owed to anyone" and his concern with the shortage of "decent housing" in San Rafael.

Talking about open space preservation is meaningless when a housing shortage prevents people from living in the city and enjoying it, according to Tinkler.

Tinkler, however, has also called for environmental balance and selective building after balanced planning — "No more indiscriminate gobbling up of open space for anyone's purely personal financial profit."

Tinkler, who describes himself as a consumer advocate, has said that he is always available to discuss problems with citizens, since he works downtown.

Tinkler has also blasted city-county squabbling and said that the city is plagued by dirty sidewalks, loose dogs and an "oppressive" sign ordinance that is "harmful" to merchants.

Tinkler did not respond to an I-J questionnaire that asked for viewpoints on city needs and proposed charter amendments. Tinkler, in a letter to the editor, said his views on charter amendments "should not influence any voter one way or another" in the city council election because "I happen to be just one of the voters who will cast his ballot, and I feel I have the choice of keeping it secret."

CHARTER AMENDMENTS ARE UP FOR DECISION

Eight proposed amendments to the San Rafael City Charter — ranging from a proposal to make the post of city treasurer appointive rather than elective to expanding the size of three city boards — will appear on the San Rafael ballot Tuesday.

The proposed amendments are:

PROPOSITION C would make the post of city treasurer appointive rather than elective.

PROPOSITION D would reduce from three years to one year the residency requirement which candidates for elective office must meet, bringing the city charter in conformity with a state Supreme Court ruling that residency requirements of more than one year are unconstitutional.

PROPOSITION E would raise from $2,500 to $3,500 the amount of money the city may spend before being required to call for bids.

PROPOSITION F would increase the present $1,000 limit to a $15,000 maximum the amount of money the city can spend on municipal advertising and promotional purposes.

PROPOSITION G would permit the San Rafael Board of Education to fill its own board vacancies. The board is now allowed to fill its own vacancies only if the city council fails to do so within 60 days. Proposition G also provides that the term of any appointment or election in a special election will expire at the next regular municipal election. This applies to all elective offices, including the council.

PROPOSITION H would allow the city council to set by ordinance the size of the fire commission, now limited to five members. Proposition H would allow city fathers to expand, decrease or abolish the body at will.

PROPOSITION J would allow the city council to set by ordinance the size of the park and recreation commission, now limited to five members. Proposition J would allow city fathers to expand, decrease or abolish the body at will.

PROPOSITION K would allow the city council to set by ordinance the size of the library board, now limited to five members. Proposition K would allow city fathers to expand, decrease or abolish the body at will.

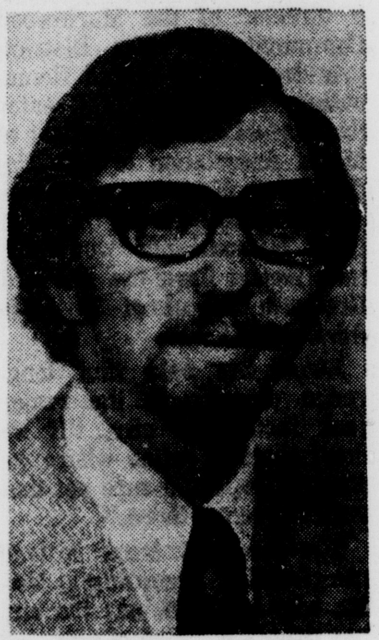
A Critical Time For The College

New Indian Valley Campus In Forefront In Election



GEORGE A. MAGID
Public accountant

By PATRICIA PERRY

This year's trustee election comes at a historic time for the Marin Community College District as it embarks on building a companion campus to the 47 year old College of Marin.

Construction of Indian Valley Colleges in a wooded valley in Ignacio is scheduled to begin this summer. The cluster-style campus is expected to eventually relieve the overcrowding that has plagued the College of Marin campus in Kentfield in recent years.

The Kentfield campus is designed to house 5,000 full-time day students — this fall enrollment zoomed to around 7,000. The North Marin campus, when complete, will serve 5,000 students.

In common with all California's community colleges, the Marin district faces increasing financing difficulties in the coming years as state funding is expected to decline. However the state tax-shift school-finance law, Senate Bill 90, which has drastically affected elementary and high school district's revenues, does not apply to community colleges.

There are six candidates for three seats on the board, as the terms of office of Trustees Theodore C. Wellman, Robert E. Oliver and Donald K. Felt expire. Wellman and Oliver have decided not to seek reelection.

Originally eight candidates filed for election, but since filing Alvin Buckelew and Anne B. Saltonstall have withdrawn from the race for personal reasons. Their names will still appear on the ballot, however.

JAMES KIMO CAMPBELL is a senior history major at the University of California at Berkeley. He works part time at the College of Marin as a reader, and does freelance writing for local newspapers.

He has been active in College of Marin affairs since coming to the mainland from Honolulu in 1966. He is a former student body president at College of Marin and was editor of the campus newspaper, The Times. He has served on several college committees and was a member of the original student-faculty advisory committee for Indian Valley Colleges.

Campbell, 26, lives with his wife, Nancy, at 2 Oak Ave., San Rafael.

Stating that the college district is facing a money crisis with declining federal and state support and increased enrollment, Campbell said the district needs trustees who care more about what happens in the classroom than about administrative bureaucracy.

Instead of cutting back on student services and the hiring of new faculty, he advocates a moratorium on hiring administrators.

Indian Valley College will be a chance to build a "beautiful exciting facility that will not duplicate the kinds of mistakes that are seen on the Kentfield campus," he stated, decrying "monolithic" poorly-designed buildings that cost millions.

The trend in increased enrollment at College of Marin is due to more women, veterans and olders students, he noted, and the college is obligated to accept the "incredible burden" as expenses force more and more students away from four-year colleges.

ELIZABETH M. DEEDY was a trustee on the college board from 1958 to 1971, when she decided not to run for reelection.

She and her husband Daniel are the parents of six children, and live at 1 Garden Road, Ross.

Mrs. Deedy, 59, said she decided to seek election to the college board after a two year absence because she is "keenly interested in and aware of the problems facing College of Marin and the new Indian Valley Colleges." She believes her 13 years of expereince as a trustee will be of special value as the board faces challenges ahead.

She feels the opening of the North Marin campus will relieve the overcrowding at College of Marin, and thinks serious study should be made on the idea of offering Saturday classes to part-time students seeking a degree while they're working.

She also favors offering as many adult non-credit classes as possible in locations throughout Marin County which also would help congestion on the Kentfield campus.

Concerned with the overcrowded classrooms and traffic congestion at College of Marin, he advocates development of the Indian Valley Colleges campus, adding "being aware of what it means in terms of taxes, it should be built on an increment basis. As a board member I would make certain the campus would not be overbuilt."

He supports a divisional rather than the existing departmental structure at the college, and "an approach which will keep the administration in touch with all students."

He believes his training and experience would enable him to make a valuable contribution as a trustee and asserts that local control is the essence of the state's community college system.

Felt, 38, lives with his wife Priscilla and three children at 150 Greenwood Way, Mill Valley.

In a college setting, Felt believes that the board should establish the general outline for the curriculum but that structuring of specific courses should be the primary responsibility of the faculty and administration, subject to board review.

He considers that problems with teacher tenure laws relate primarily to the probationary staff, and believes that the board should have absolute discretion not to rehire for the first three years "at a minimum."

While noting that in practice most educational decisions at the college level are best left to the staff, he feels it is important for the board to retain its powers of approval over such matters.

Only One County Board Trustee Contest

Trio Of Candidates Seek The Nod To Represent New Area Three

Although there are three seats vacant on the Marin County Board of Education after June 30, there will be an election in only one trustee area on Tuesday.

Incumbent Glen B. Robinson was the only candidate to file for Trustee Area 6 (The Mill Valley and Sausalito school districts.)

Two entirely new trustee areas were created this year under redistricting of the county board's constituencies, and one new area - 5 — the Larkspur and Reed school districts plus the Strawberry area - attracted only one candidate, Marilyn C. Steinau.

Thus Robinson and Mrs. Steinau have already been named to the board and will assume office in July.

The other entirely new trustee area has drawn three candidates. It's Area 3, and includes all the Dixie School District, plus Santa Venetia, Los Ranchitos and the northern portion of the San Rafael School District.

The county board of education oversees the activities of the county schools office — headquartered in Corte Madera — which operates special education programs all over the county. These include schools for the physically and mentally handicapped, children's centers, and schools at juvenile hall and at San Quentin prison. In addition the county schools office provides services to local school districts.

DOROTHY C. BROWN has been a member of the Dixie School District board since 1957, where her present term expires in June.

She was a member of the Marin County Committee on School District Organization. She is a past chairman of the legislative committee of the Marin County School Boards Association, and a delegate to the California School Boards Association.

Mrs. Brown lives at 1069 Las Gallinas Avenue, San Rafael. A native of Montana, she and her husband Rulon have lived in Marin County since 1954. They have two children, Bonnie, a commercial artist, and Craig, an architect.

Mrs. Brown considers a county board member's primary job to be the budget and policy-making decisions, noting that members must be kept aware of all aspects of educational decisions, because these affect the budget.

The immediate problem facing all school districts is that of finance and the restrictions imposed under Senate Bill 90, Mrs. Brown has stated, "along with militant teacher organizations." The finance legislation, she said, is in the right direction.

She considers teachers' salaries to be "quite adequate compared with other professions and days worked per year" and would like to see the California tenure law which she considers gives teachers all the advantages, treated realistically so the three-year probationary period could be used to weed out weak teachers."

She would also encourage greater use by local districts of county schools office personnel and services.

PRISCILLA E. PHILLIPS is a state registered social worker and until August last year worked for the Marin County Department of Public Social Services.

A native of Tennessee, she gained her Bachelor of Arts degree in sociology and psychology at Winthrop College, S.C. and her Masters Degree in social welfare at University of California at Berkeley.

She and her husband Stephen live at 1048D Los Gamos Road, San Rafael, and have two sons.

She is a member of Aldersgate Methodist Church, Terra Linda, where she is on the executive board of the Women's Society, and has served on the administrative board for three years.

She belongs to Pixie Parents, Marin Art and Garden Center, American Association of University Women (Marin Chapter), and is on the executive board of the Marin Chapter of the National Association of Social Workers.

Mrs. Phillips considers it essential for a county schools board member to be aware of all the special education programs offered throughout Marin County, by visiting each program.

She endorses the new concept of school finance limits under Senate Bill 90, but is concerned that it may curtail funds for new programs, or the improvement of underdeveloped ones.

She has stated that all county schools' programs should be "educationally sound, efficient, economical and meet the needs of the entire county."

EDWARD ALAN TIBBETTS, the district engineer for the Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District, is making his first try for public office in this election.

A native of Massachusetts, he gained his Bachelor of Science degree in civil engineering from Northeastern University, and is presently working on a Masters Degree in public administration at Golden Gate University.

He and his wife Cynthia live at 102 Los Gamos Road, San Rafael, and have three sons.

He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and belongs to Aldersgate Methodist Church, Terra Linda.

Tibbetts, who decided to run for office because he was concerned that not enough candidates for the new trustee area had emerged, considers that local districts generally "do a very adequate job."

He suggests that the county could contribute some of its federal revenue-sharing funds to keep the county schools operated children's centers, threatened with closure by federal funding cuts, open.

He sees fiscal responsibility as a board member's prime concern and suggests line by line analysis of budgets so that "historical" items don't get funded year after year without evaluation.

Saying that 70 per cent of the College of Marin's teachers are earning $16,000 a year or more, he adds that their fringe benefits are good. He does not advocate firing long-tenured teachers, but advocates "more conscientious effort to evaluate the probationary teachers."

He graduated from California State University (Northridge) and returned to Marin County six months ago after working in the Virgin Islands for a year.

He is a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, California Society of Certified Public Accountants, Credit Grantors Committee of the San Francisco chapter of the CPAs, Boy Scouts of America Sea Exploring program, and the Professional Association of Diving Instructors.

Magid, 30, lives with his wife Sara and two children at 49 Canyon Road, San Anselmo.

He feels that the future expansion of the college district, including the building of the Indian Valley campus, adult education and the child care center, are areas to which the board must continue to give close attention.

He also sees other areas needing immediate analysis and review as the long and short-term operating and capital improvement budgets of the district.

He considers himself qualified to clearly assess a situation and separate the necessary requirements from the inessentials of operating institutions of higher learning, citing experience as a consultant for governmental educational agencies at the county, state and federal levels.

Low-Key Campaign In Fairfax District

Five Candidates Covet Three Openings On The School Board

By JEFF GREER

In a relatively low-key campaign, five candidates are competing for three seats open on the Fairfax School District Board.

Three are incumbents — Chairman Dr. George C. Stone, a veteran of nine years on the board; Jane S. Durr, on the board since 1967, and Lawrence G. Hermann, who has served 12 years.

Challenger Joann R. Walla is making her third try for election, and Richard K. Chinlund his first.

THE CANDIDATES and Fairfax citizens have raised a number of campaign issues. The various candidates are stressing different issues as the most important.

Among them are low accomplishment by Fairfax students on state tests, the proposal to close Central School and consolidate its classes with other plant, the need for a multipurpose building at White Hill School, to cost about $400,000, and the turfing of a playground at Deer Park School.

Porteous Avenue residents have opposed the turfing — on grounds it would create too much traffic to and from the school. The incumbents defended the move, saying the community needs the playground.

The student test results have sparked only brief, cautious debate, over whether students should be graded or would be discouraged by grading's competitive aspects.

All the candidates have said the curriculum decisions should be made cooperatively by trustees, administrators, faculty and to some extent students. They've also agreed that trustees should personally visit all district schools each year, that students should not win automatic promotion, and that teacher salaries in the district are "about right."

All five candidates have been more or less critical of teacher tenure laws, but differ on the worth of Senate Bill 90 tax reform law. Chinlund favored its limitation of spending per pupil; Stone opposed it, and others implied "there's nothing we can do."

RICHARD KEITH CHINLUND, 32, of 204 Forrest Avenue, is a first-time candidate.

He is a certified public accountant with a San Francisco firm. He and his wife Donna Mary have two daughters.

Chinlund was born in Illinois and earned a Bachelor's Degree from Carthage College in Kenosha, Wis. He has lived in Marin County five years and in Fairfax almost two years.

He is treasurer of the Street Ministry of Southern Marin, and a member of the Sierra Club, American Civil Liberties Union, PLAN and other groups.

In his campaign, Chinlund has stressed the need for "communication" between all involved in school district functions and favored construction of a multipurpose building useful both to the students and the community.

He has said the board should make more efforts to make the budget understandable to the citizens, and has called for increased athletic programs and other efforts to give youngsters more pride in their school. He also favors "new approaches" in the classroom, explaining that one of his daughters is in a private Montessori school and "I've been very impressed."

JANE S. DURR, 46, has been a Fairfax trustee since 1967, when she was appointed to fill a vacant seat shortly after missing election by only one vote.

She has been reelected to one full term since.

Mrs. Durr, her husband, Milo H. Durr, and their four children live at 470 Cascade Drive. She was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, and earned a Bachelor's Degree in chemistry at the University of Cincinnati. She worked as a laboratory technologist for four years.

A past president of the Deer Park Parent-Teacher Association, she holds an honorary life membership in the California P-TA, and has served on educational committees for the Fairfax schools and Sir Francis Drake High School. She is a member of the Commonwealth Club, Marin County Industry and Education Council, and other organizations.

"I'm going to stand on my record," she told a recent candidates' night audience. She favors a variety of educational environments to serve the varied needs of Fairfax youngsters. She also favors selling Central School, to provide greater efficiency.

She pointed out that she had voted for a 10-cent cut in the tax rate, after the district was reassessed last year.

LAWRENCE G. HERMANN, 45, of 220 Marinda Drive, has been a member of the board since he was first elected in 1961.

He moved to Fairfax in 1956, and was co-chairman for three district tax campaigns before becoming a trustee.

He and his wife, Helen, have three daughters at home. He was born in Olympia, Wash., graduated from the University of Puget Sound and served four years in the Navy. He is engineering supervisor for the Transamerica Insurance Co. in San Francisco.

He has been president and director of the Marin County School Boards Association.

Hermann has stressed that his experience can be valuable in decision the future board must make about selling Central School, building a multipurpose facility, taking over more curriculum responsibility under new state law. He said he is neither a rigid traditionalist nor "wholly wide open" to innovations in education.

He called for greater parent participation in evaluation of the whole school system, in terms of student learning, teacher efficiency and district operation.

GEORGE C. STONE first was appointed a Fairfax trustee in 1964 for a short term, and twice won reelection since.

The 49-year-old research psychologist at Langley Porter Institute in San Francisco, lives at 801 Bolinas Road with his wife Hannah. They have two children at home and two grown ones living elsewhere.

Stone was born in Los Angeles, and earned his bachelor's, master's and doctorate at the University of California in Berkeley. He has written many scientific and professional articles.

He served as chairman of a Fairfax school bond campaign before joining the board.

"The education we offer is improving, but I'm not sure it's improving fast enough," he told a recent candidates' night audience. He cited the mushrooming total of organized knowledge, which is rapidly making obsolete even the training of recent graduates, he said.

Dr. Stone said the way for the district to improve lies more in use of "human resources ... not financial" through in-service training, diversity of curricula for children with varied interests, and "establishing for every child a sense of competence."

JOANN R. WALLA, 38, of 665 Cascade Drive, campaigned unsuccessfully in 1970 and 1971 for a board seat.

She is president and owner of Wallabs Inc., a cytodiagnostic laboratory in San Rafael that specializes in diagnosis of cancer cells. Her husband, Joseph, is western division manager for Universal Transport Corp. in San Francisco. They have one daughter.

Mrs. Walla was born and educated in Wisconsin, graduating from the University of Wisconsin in Madison in 1958 with an advanced degree in technology. Her mother is a long-time teacher, her father a retired clergyman.

Mrs. Walla is chairman of the Fairfax Park and Recreation Commission and a member of the year-around school Committee and of the education Committee of the Marin Unit of the American Cancer Society, and a member of professional associations.

In her campaign, Mrs. Walla is stressing "basic educational rudiments," and declaring "recent surveys show that our children can neither read, spell or solve problems." She has been critical of "educational experimentation" and "promises of educators" that "led us to falsely equate large budgets, class size and peripheral curricula with better education."

She has called for attention to grading and evaluation. "If you can't tell what a child has learned, what good is it to try to teach new things?" she said.

A Lively Campaign In The Tam District

Nine Seek 3 Spots On Board

Of all the school districts in Marin County, the Tamalpais High School District has experienced the most controversy during the last year, thus generating an exciting election.

The district, operates three high schools, Sir Francis Drake in San Anselmo, Tamalpais in Mill Valley and Redwood in Larkspur, plus two "alternative" schools, San Andreas and Mewah Mountain.

It has a budget of $10,902,863 this year, and forecasts one of $11,468,864 for the 1973-74 fiscal year. Revenue limits imposed under Senate Bill 90 promise to be a source of concern for the district in future years as it already has the highest administrative and second highest student costs in the entire state.

There are three seats on the board up for election, with the expiration of terms of incumbents Jerrold M. Ladar, Robert W. Corlett and David D. Ring. Ring resigned last month and will not seek reelection. The other two incumbents are running in a field of nine candidates.

MAURINE BALLARD was an English teacher, department head and supervisor for 18 years at Tamalpais and Redwood high schools, retiring in 1971.

She graduated from the University of Kansas and received an M.A. in English from Columbia University. She has been a teacher in Idaho, Washington and California, starting in a one-room Idaho school and later working for seven years on the staffs of two West Coast junior colleges.

She is currently the volunteer editor of the Marin County probation department's newsletter, takes part in the county library's outreach program, and the Redwood International Student Exchange program.

Miss Ballard, 62, lives at 122 Marion, Mill Valley.

She considers educational goals, curricular content instructional methodology and programming to be current concerns. A board whose focus is primarily managerial neglects the heart of education — what happens in the classroom —, she has stated.

The most pressing problems facing the district are to bridge distances between educators, students and parents, she states. It is also important to avoid pressures for "systems control" because a school is not a factory producing tangible objects.

Miss Ballard says a board most needs inner harmony and unity to aid efficient operation and to avoid mistrust and anxiety both in the school and the community.

She believes her understanding of the instructional program and of the complexities involved in creating programs would be an asset as a trustee.

DAVID A. BRINKHAUS, 30, born in Colorado, is an accountant who attended the University of Colorado. He was formerly active in the Young Republicans of Colorado and lived in Los Angeles for eight years before moving to the Bay Area three years ago.

He is treasurer of the Marin Chapter of the National Organization for Women.

Single, he resides at 10 Milland Drive, Apartment B13, Mill Valley.

Brinkhaus says: "The board must work together as a unit with an open mind, and make fair decisions after hearing all sides. The trustees must work with students, teachers and parents, with the education of the students foremost in their minds.

"No board member should make a statement regarding any item that may come before it for a policy decision without first hearing all sides."

"In budgeting monies, the board must only make cuts in the field of teaching after all other fields have been cut to the bare bones," he believes.

And he adds: "I believe it is the board's responsibility to see that any position that opens is open to all people, regardless of sex, race or color, and all should be invited to apply. The hiring should be based on merit alone."

He promises, if elected, to visit each school in the district at least once a month, and to make himself always available to those concerned with the schools.

ELAINE S. BROCKBANK has been involved in Redwood High School and Tam district activities since coming to Marin county in 1963. She is on the district citizens' advisory committee where she is chairman of the subcommittee on alternative education. She has been active in Parent Teacher Associations, the district's discipline study committee and the Redwood School-Community Committee.

Mrs. Brockbank was raised and educated in Utah, where she attended the state university.

She and her husband Reed live at 109 Crown Road, Kentfield, and have four children.

She considers the most pressing problems facing the district are the efficient use of the more restricted funding, and the development of effective and beneficial evaluation processes for teachers and administrators.

Mrs. Brockbank would like to see a wider variety of class structure to meet the diverse needs of parents and students, and the development of more efficient "articulation" between junior high schools and colleges so that students may move more effectively forward in their educational development.

She would like to see career instruction for the non-college bound student expanded, and the wider use of volunteer personnel to augment the smaller budget.

Mrs. Brockbank has said that after 10 years of working in the district she feels she could bring a widely representative and non-partisan position to the board.

ROBERT W. CORLETT was elected to the Tam board in 1969 after 12 years as a trustee of the San Anselmo School Board.

An attorney, he has been president of the Marin County School Boards Association, and active in the United Crusade, the Family Service Agency and Camp Fire Girls. Last year he was president of the Marin County Bar Association.

A graduate of Minnesota Law School in 1947, he worked for the Standard Oil Co. of California before entering private practice in 1953.

He and his wife Kay, are the parents of a son, and live at 14

Nine Candidates Vie For Three Tamalpais Trustee Jobs

Communication Has Loomed Large As Issue In Lively High School District Campaign

Carolina Avenue., San Anselmo.

Corlett has stated that he sees three problem areas facing the district: finance, curriculum and enrollment.

He believes the board must constantly strive to provide courses that have meaning and validity to students, and feels that the Tamalpais District, with its rich resources of talent among students, administration and faculty presents a unique opportunity.

Acknowledging that enrollment in the district's schools will decrease in the coming years, he said it will have a definite financial impact on the district's income under Senate Bill 90 legislation, combined with cut-backs in federal government supported programs.

FRED C. HANNAHS, a stock broker, has been a member of the Tiburon Fire District board since 1959, and served one term on the Tiburon City Council.

He received his B.A. Degree from Macalester College, and is a native of Kenosha, Wis. A Marin County resident for 25 years, he has been active in Boy Scouts and Little League.

He and his wife Casey live at 440 Ridge Road, Tiburon, and have three teen-age children.

Hannahs, 52, questions whether the Tam District knows how to communicate with parents, and states his first suggestion would be to attempt a "vocabulary deflation" adding that the quality of communication seems to deteriorate in direct ratio to the use of overworked cliches.

He has said the board should recognize that a significant number of students and parents are seeking an educational alternative that provides a structured and well-grounded academic education.

Hannahs considers that the tax limitations of Senate Bill 90 may have the desirable effect of forcing the board to consider priorities with more care than it has exercised in the past.

On the question of alternative schools, he states that only the extremely gifted teacher can maintain direction and discipline in a completely unstructured environment, and as a trustee he would make this a specific field of interest and inquiry.

ROBERT ALLEN KARLSRUD is a history professor at Sonoma State College, and previously taught in the Los Angeles city schools.

He received his Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Berkeley, and his master's and Ph. D from the University of California at Los Angeles.

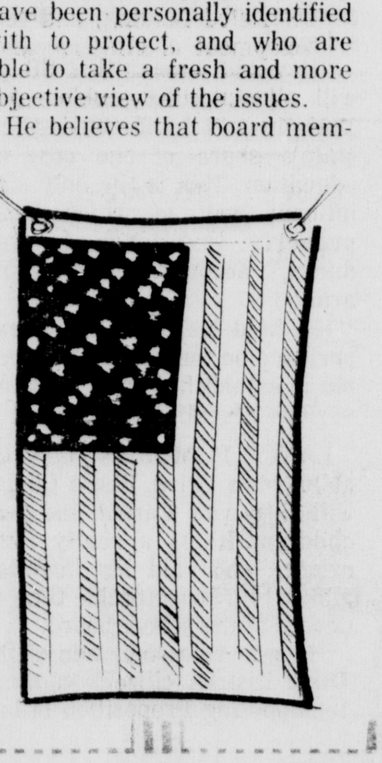
Karlsrud, 35, and his wife Joanne live at 178 Carson Road, Woodacre.

He is active in Red Cross affairs in Marin County, is a volunteer teacher at a San Anselmo private school, and belongs to the Marin Industry-Education Council and the California State Employees Association.

Karlsrud considers the Tam District needs a responsive board to combat a loss of confidence in the educational system pervading all levels. He has stated that board members must work to create policy before crises ensue, not after a full-blown educational explosion occurs.

He believes the board needs new members who do not have vested interests programs they have been personally identified with to protect, and who are able to take a fresh and more objective view of the issues.

He believes that board members must make classroom visits to analyse existing programs in order to perceive potential problem areas, and feels his familiarity with education would be an asset.



JERROLD M. LADAR was elected to the Tamalpais District board in 1970 to fill out the term of Gloria Melbostad. An attorney in private practice in San Francisco, he was previously an assistant United States Attorney.

Ladar, 39, is a native of San Francisco, and graduated from the University of Washington after receiving his law degree from Boalt Hall, University of California.

He is a member of Temple Emanu-El, and is currently on the advisory board to the 14th Parent-Teacher Association District of Marin and Sonoma counties.

He and his wife Joyce and two sons live at 30 Keats Drive, Mill Valley.

Ladar is most concerned about the communication gaps in the district and feels the administrators are not open enough to constructive criticism. He believes teachers' salaries are about right, and teachers' fringe benefits already excellent.

He supports the concepts of "on location" and "alternative" schools when there are specific goals and when careful evaluation ensues, adding that the Tam District is a richly diverse community. He is concerned that courses be accurately labeled so students and parents know what to expect from a course.

He sees the Tam District as faced with reduced income next year due to Senate Bill 90, declining enrollment and loss of federal funds, while the personnel force will remain constant, adding that the challenge will be where to make budget cuts while trying to improve the quality of programs.

BRICE PACE was formerly dean of academics of the San Rafael Military Academy and is now a mathematics instructor at the St. Rose Academy in San Francisco.

He retired from the Army in 1959 as a colonel, having served on Dwight Eisenhower and Maxwell Taylor's general staffs.

A native of New York City, he earned his B.S. in geology at New York University and a Master's Degree in education from Dominican College.

He and his wife Doris are parents of three grown children and live at 283 Oak Manor Drive, Fairfax.

Pace, 57, strongly advocates greater concern for the public's money, saying that in most cases it represents 75 per cent of the tax dollar for all levels of education. He adds that money is not the sole criteria, more important is better utilization of existing resources. He considers educators, for the most part, to be inadequately trained in fiscal management.

He considers a board should restrict itself to broad policy, embracing finance, housing, housekeeping and educational decisions.

Pace considers recent disagreements on the Tam board to be "literally appalling and a great disservice to the public and to the student."

He has repeatedly stated that he is not willing to commit himself on all issues as he wishes to reserve the opportunity to observe, judge and decide when facts are made know to him as an incumbent.

LOTTE SCHILLER, trained as a teacher and directed her own nursery school. She has been active in Tamalpais High School Parent-Teacher Association affairs for many years and served as a community representative on the district curriculum council.

A charter member of the New Voter Education Research Foundation, she has organized voter registration drives in Marin.

Born in Germany, Mrs. Schiller, 52, attended schools there and in Israel.

She and her husband Hans and three children live at 22 Madrone Park Circle, Mill Valley.

Mrs. Schiller considers the district's most pressing problems in the next four years to be constant reevaluation of educational and budgetary priorities, finding balance between student freedom and adherence to rules needed for the proper functioning of any institution, and restoration of trust by the community in the schools, by the board in its personnel, and by students in their teachers.

As someone who has been involved in the district as a parent and an interested citizen for many years, Mrs. Schiller has said she is deeply disturbed by the increasing lack of trust in the school community.

She states that "no student should leave our schools without the basic tools to grow into a self fulfilled adult, an aware citizen and useful member of the community of man."

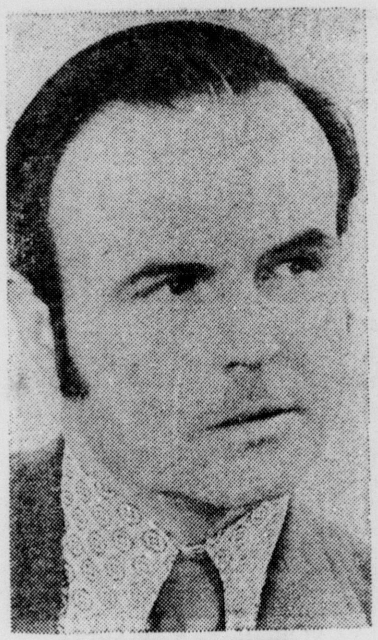
Seven Candidates In Dixie District: Three Can Win

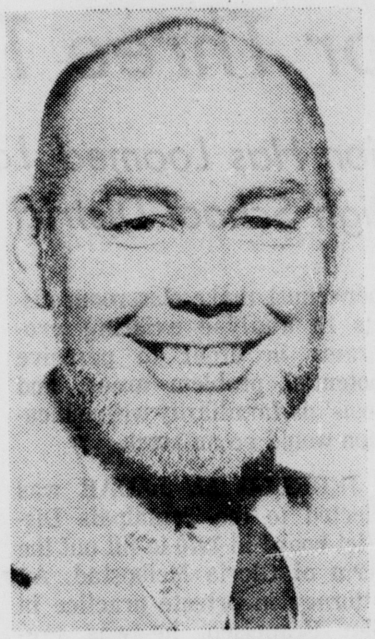
Only One Incumbent In Race Lacking In Dramatic Issues

CORAL KAY BECKMAN
Home economist



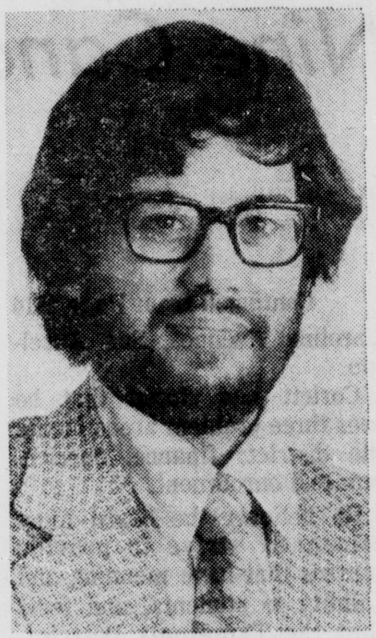
WAYNE E. CLIFF
Vice President

JOSEPH DOYLE
U.S. statistician



DONAL A. McENHILL
A dentist

THOMAS NEAL McNAMARA
An attorney



LANCE P. MORAN
Realty firm owner

JANICE W. PECHAUER
A housewife

In the Dixie School District, where seven candidates including one incumbent are vying for three seats on the board of trustees, there is no dramatic issue dividing the community.

Rather, each candidate has a slightly different educational outlook and a slightly different answer as to how to cope with decreasing enrollment and tight money.

The district, which serves Terra Linda, Marinwood and Lucas Valley and adjoining lands, has a long history of high parental concern and equally high student performance on testing.

Thomas Neal McNamara is the only incumbent running. Trustees Dorothy Brown, running for the Marin County Board of Education, and John A. Starkweather, did not seek reelection.

Here are the backgrounds and some of the views of the candidates:

CORAL KAY BECKMAN, 46-year-old housewife and free-lance home economist, has lived in Marinwood 16 years with her husband, Bink, and three sons.

Two of the sons attend elementary schools in the district and the third is in high school.

Mrs. Beckman has been involved in 4-H activities, Cub Scouts and Little League and has been a teacher's aide for years. She and her husband have served as Dixie District Coordinating Council representatives for Mary Silveira School.

Mrs. Beckman has a B.S. Degree in institution management from Washington State University and has held various positions in the home economics field.

In addition to school and youth activities, Mrs. Beckman has worked many years on the Marin County Heart Fund campaign, serving one year as co-chairman for Northern Marin County, and also has been a member of the Marinwood Guild of Sunny Hills, American Association of University Women and League of Women Voters. She is a past president of Marin County Home Economists in Homemaking and Alpha Phi in Marin County.

Mrs. Beckman believes that Dixie is "one of the outstanding school districts in the state," but she also recognizes that school taxes have been very high in this district.

"This has been partly because the homeowners themselves have carried the tax burden in the absence of much industry. . . .Senate Bill 90 will relieve them of some of the tax load. Another method of tax relief might be if a broader base were used for school taxation. . . ."

Mrs. Beckman told a candidates' night audience that she believes in "teaching useful knowledge" and that she advocates "as much utilization as possible of parents" in assisting teachers.

WAYNE E. CLIFF, a 39-year-old resident of 425 Quietwood Drive in the Terra Linda section of San Rafael, is vice president of BankAmerica Realty Services Inc. in San Francisco.

He holds a Bachelor's Degree from Dartmouth College and a master's in business administration from Amos Tuck School.

He and his wife, Margot, and their three children moved to Marin County 10 years ago. Two of the children attend schools in the Dixie District and the third is at Terra Linda High School.

"The Dixie School District is the only reason we live where we do," Cliff told the Independent-Journal earlier this year.

He said he thinks the Dixie District has made efficient use of the "taxpayer's dollar" during past years, and "while having far from the highest expenditure per pupil, the district is considered one of the best in the state."

Cliff has consistently linked the quality of the school district with the continued high value of homes in the area.

"One need only look at the classified ads for houses for sale which stress the location within the Dixie District to see evidence of this value," Cliff said.

He added that "any tax relief that would jeopardize this quality would be false economy which could well reduce the value of all homes within the district."

JOSEPH DOYLE, 41, has lived with his wife Sada, and two children in the Dixie School District for the past five years. The family home is at 552 Appleberry Drive in Lucas Valley.

Doyle, a statistician for the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare in San Francisco, has been a member of the Dixie District's citizens advisory committee and Boy Scout Troop 64 committee.

Doyle has said he has no objection to innovation in education but believes that children are sometimes used as guinea pigs in experiments which exploit them for "psuedo science."

He cited a recent reading study in the district which he said involved 90 children for three months "for nothing" since "the study was done so badly no conclusion could be reached from it."

Doyle is a strong believer in evaluating school programs and believes in a "literal interpretation" of the Stull Act, which sets standards for teaching performance.

Doyle has also said that, even with declining enrollment, quality can be maintained in the district but advocates "fiscal responsibility to the taxpayer."

Doyle holds a Bachelor's Degree in business and economics from Oklahoma State University in his home state.

DONAL A. McENHILL, 43-year-old dentist who practices in San Francisco, lives at 22 Mount Foraker Drive in Lucas Valley, with his wife Mildred, and four children.

He ran unsuccessfully for the Dixie board in 1971, finishing third in a field of seven candidates. He has served on the Marin County Committee on School District Organization, Dixie Parents Club and Dixie Finance Advisory Committee and is a member of conservation groups and dental societies as well as the California Academy of Science.

He is a graduate of the University of San Francisco and the University of the Pacific Dental School.

He has said that if he is elected he will encourage "a joint effort by parents, teachers and administrators to translate district goals into laymen's language. . ."

McEnhill has said he thinks it is possible to continue current school programs even under state financing restrictions and that he believes in local control of education.

He has cited his regular attendance at district board meetings for the past three years as valuable experience.

THOMAS NEAL McNAMARA, 42, a lawyer with Pillsbury, Madison and Sutro in San Francisco, has served on the Dixie board since 1965.

He and his wife, Mary Elizabeth, and their three children live at 2200 Lucas Valley Road.

He is a graduate of Duke University and received his law degree at George Washington University.

In addition to two terms on the school board, he has been legal adviser to the Marin Foundation and the Lucas Valley Homeowners Association.

McNamara has said he sees a "great challenge" to the district in maintaining quality education for the present 4,000 pupils in the Dixie District (down from a high of 5,000) under new legislation which limits taxation.

He said while Dixie school taxes are the highest in Marin, there has been a "desire of the parents in Dixie to maintain a quality educational program regardless of the cost to themselves."

"It would appear that SB 90 will alleviate the problem for Dixie in part by increasing the state's share of the cost of education. This is the only significant way in which local property taxes can be reduced," according to McNamara.

He cited his eight years' experience on the board as valuable in establishing priorities for various education programs.

LANCE P. MORAN, 32, lives at 1063 Lea Drive, Terra Linda, with his wife Carole and two children. He is a realty firm owner, who said his business allows him considerable time to devote to the school board.

He was vice chairman of the Dixie District citizens committee opposing Proposition 14 last year and has worked as a teacher's aide at Don Timoteo School.

He is a graduate of San Rafael High School and San Francisco State College.

Moran has decried lack of communication between the board and teachers and called "innovation the heart" of the school system. He has said the reason the district ranks so high academically is in part due to new but "highly controlled programs."

He also has said that with his business background, he believes he can determine how to live with new expense limits without harming the district's programs.

In the Dixie School District, where seven candidates including one incumbent are vying for three seats on the board of trustees, there is no dramatic issue dividing the community.

Rather, each candidate has a slightly different educational outlook and a slightly different answer as to how to cope with decreasing enrollment and tight money.

The district, which serves Terra Linda, Marinwood and Lucas Valley and adjoining lands, has a long history of high parental concern and equally high student performance on testing.

Thomas Neal McNamara is the only incumbent running. Trustees Dorothy Brown, running for the Marin County Board of Education, and John A. Starkweather, did not seek reelection.

Here are the backgrounds and some of the views of the candidates:

CORAL KAY BECKMAN, 46-year-old housewife and freelance home economist, has lived in Marinwood 16 years with her husband, Bink, and three sons.

Two of the sons attend elementary schools in the district and the third is in high school.

Mrs. Beckman has been involved in 4-H activities, Cub Scouts and Little League and has been a teacher's aide for years. She and her husband have served as Dixie District Coordinating Council representatives for Mary Silveira School.

Mrs. Beckman has a B.S. Degree in institution management from Washington State University and has held various positions in the home economics field.

In addition to school and youth activities, Mrs. Beckman has worked many years on the Marin County Heart Fund campaign, serving one year as cochairman for Northern Marin County, and also has been a member of the Marinwood Guild of Sunny Hills, American Association of University Women and League of Women Voters. She is a past president of Marin County Home Economists in Homemaking and Alpha Phi in Marin County.

Mrs. Beckman believes that Dixie is "one of the outstanding school districts in the state," but she also recognizes that school taxes have been very high in this district.

"This has been partly because the homeowners themselves have carried the tax burden in the absence of much industry. . . .Senate Bill 90 will relieve them of some of the tax load. Another method of tax relief might be if a broader base were used for school taxation. . . ."

Mrs. Beckman told a candidates' night audience that she believes in "teaching useful knowledge" and that she advocates "as much utilization as possible of parents" in assisting teachers.

WAYNE E. CLIFF, a 39-year-old resident of 425 Quietwood Drive in the Terra Linda section of San Rafael, is vice president of BankAmerica Realty Services Inc. in San Francisco.

He holds a Bachelor's Degree from Dartmouth College and a master's in business administration from Amos Tuck School.

He and his wife, Margot, and their three children moved to Marin County 10 years ago. Two of the children attend schools in the Dixie District and the third is at Terra Linda High School.

"The Dixie School District is the only reason we live where we do," Cliff told the Independent-Journal earlier this year.

He said he thinks the Dixie District has made efficient use of the "taxpayer's dollar" during past years, and "while having far from the highest expenditure per pupil, the district is considered one of the best in the state."

Cliff has consistently linked the quality of the school district with the continued high value of homes in the area.

"One need only look at the classified ads for houses for sale which stress the location within the Dixie District to see evidence of this value," Cliff said.

He added that "any tax relief that would jeopardize this quality would be false economy which could well reduce the value of all homes within the district."

JOSEPH DOYLE, 41, has lived with his wife Sada, and two children in the Dixie School District for the past five years. The family home is at 552 Appleberry Drive in Lucas Valley.

Doyle, a statistician for the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare in San Francisco, has been a member of the Dixie District's citizens advisory committee and Boy Scout Troop 64 committee.

Doyle has said he has no objection to innovation in education but believes that children are sometimes used as guinea pigs in experiments which exploit them for "psuedo science."

He cited a recent reading study in the district which he said involved 90 children for three months "for nothing" since "the study was done so badly no conclusion could be reached from it."

Doyle is a strong believer in evaluating school programs and believes in a "literal interpretation" of the Stull Act, which sets standards for teaching performance.

Doyle has also said that, even with declining enrollment, quality can be maintained in the district but advocates "fiscal responsibility to the taxpayer."

Doyle holds a Bachelor's Degree in business and economics from Oklahoma State University in his home state.

DONAL A. McENHILL, 43-year-old dentist who practices in San Francisco, lives at 22 Mount Foraker Drive in Lucas Valley, with his wife Mildred, and four children.

He ran unsuccessfully for the Dixie board in 1971, finishing third in a field of seven candidates. He has served on the Marin County Committee on School District Organization, Dixie Parents Club and Dixie Finance Advisory Committee and is a member of conservation groups and dental societies as well as the California Academy of Science.

He is a graduate of the University of San Francisco and the University of the Pacific Dental School.

He has said that if he is elected he will encourage "a joint effort by parents, teachers and administrators to translate district goals into laymen's language. . ."

McEnhill has said he thinks it is possible to continue current school programs even under state financing restrictions and that he believes in local control of education.

He has cited his regular attendance at district board meetings for the past three years as valuable experience.

THOMAS NEAL McNAMARA, 42, a lawyer with Pillsbury, Madison and Sutro in San Francisco, has served on the Dixie board since 1965.

He and his wife, Mary Elizabeth, and their three children live at 2200 Lucas Valley Road.

He is a graduate of Duke University and received his law degree at George Washington University.

In addition to two terms on the school board, he has been legal adviser to the Marin Foundation and the Lucas Valley Homeowners Association.

McNamara has said he sees a "great challenge" to the district in maintaining quality education for the present 4,000 pupils in the Dixie District (down from a high of 5,000) under new legislation which limits taxation.

He said while Dixie school taxes are the highest in Marin, there has been a "desire of the parents in Dixie to maintain a quality educational program regardless of the cost to themselves."

"It would appear that SB 90 will alleviate the problem for Dixie in part by increasing the state's share of the cost of education. This is the only significant way in which local property taxes can be reduced," according to McNamara.

He cited his eight years' experience on the board as valuable in establishing priorities for various education programs.

LANCE P. MORAN, 32, lives at 1063 Lea Drive, Terra Linda, with his wife Carole and two children. He is a realty firm owner, who said his business allows him considerable time to devote to the school board.

He was vice chairman of the Dixie District citizens committee opposing Proposition 14 last year and has worked as a teacher's aide at Don Timoteo School.

He is a graduate of San Rafael High School and San Francisco State College.

With four of the five seats up for grabs Tuesday, a large field of eight candidates has emerged to battle for votes in the Larkspur School District board contest.

Trustee Shirley A. Walker is the lone board holdover as the terms of Leon Persson, John W. Boyd and Howard C. Harvey are expiring and colleague Curtis P. Kamai has decided to step down after a long board service.

Persson, Boyd and Harvey are running, joined by challengers James A. Laviletta, W. Don Pack and James P. McDonough. Anthony J. Moreno and Charles E. Newman seek to fill Kamai's unexpired term.

Oliver B. Larson Jr. of Corte Madera also was in the race for Kamai's seat, but dropped out last month because of business commitments.

A total of 7,533 voters is eligible to go to the polls.

A rundown on the candidates in alphabetical order:

JOHN W. BOYD, 78, general agent for the Franklin Life Insurance Co., has been a district trustee for 20 years. A resident of Larkspur, he was voted that community's outstanding citizen in 1971 by the chamber of commerce. Last year the new multimedia library at Larkspur-Corte Madera School was named in his honor.

Boyd, answering an Independent-Journal questionnaire, said in response to one query that he is opposed to teacher tenure laws. "Good teachers do not need it and poor teachers hide behind it," he said.

He also criticized the state's new tax shift, school finance legislation: "SB 90 does not help our district in any way and the Legislature has not met its obligation to finance education in the State of California."

HOWARD C. HARVEY, a 51-year-old officer with the Homestake Mining Co., first was elected to the board in 1965. A Corte Madera resident, he is president of the Mariner Cove Improvement Association, a member of the Corte Madera General Plan Study Committee and chairman of the group's subcommittee on housing.

In his response to I-J questions, Harvey generally agreed with Boyd's position on teacher tenure laws and said he didn't endorse SB 90 either because "it will tend to weaken the financial stability of the district.

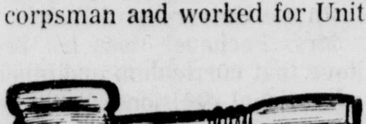
"State funds from other tax sources will be needed to maintain and improve the educational capabilities of the district in future years," he added.

JAMES A. LAVILETTA, also of Corte Madera, is a 40-year-old civil engineer with the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare in San Francisco. He is a Marine veteran, a member of the Elks Club and institutional representative for a Marin Scout troop.

The candidate, criticizing the state of parent communication with board members and district administrative staff, recommended compilation of a newsletter that would include highlights of board meetings. He also advocated rotating board meetings among the district's four schools and hoped to encourage more parent and student participation in formation of policies.

Laviletta didn't believe that board members should help review applications for teacher openings. "The superintendent, through his staff, should be the one to select teaching staff. However, for management positions, I feel the board should have a hand in making selections."

JAMES P. McDONOUGH, 38-year-old Larkspur resident, is principal of Homestead School in the Mill Valley School District, the lone educator among the eight hopefuls. The Salt Lake City-born McDonough formerly served as a Navy corpsman and worked for United Air Lines before beginning a career in education.



In his questionnaire responses, McDonough believed that the Stull Bill, requiring local guidelines to evaluate teachers, "addressed itself" to the teacher tenure question. "Teachers should be commended for a job well done, assisted in areas of weaknesses, and dismissed for legitimate cause."

He also said "there is always a need for better communication between the parents, staff and board. Parents should be involved in committees and workshops before decisions are made."

ANTHONY J. MORENO, 39, is a general contractor who lives in Corte Madera. He is a captain in the community's volunteer fire department, and a former past president of the group. He is active in sports groups.

Moreno believed tenure laws "too much in favor of teachers," and endorsed more local control in teacher dismissals.

He endorsed the idea of rotating board meetings in an effort to boost communication with the community, and said newsletters might also help.

CHARLES E. NEWSMAN, 51, has been a Corte Madera policeman for 15 years, and the department's juvenile officer for nine. He is a member officer of numerous civic and fraternal groups, has been active in Scouting and other youth work and formerly served on the Corte Madera Parks and Recreation Commission.

Newman, while not returning an I-J questionnaire, said he planned to continue regular visits to district schools.

W. DON PACK, a 41-year-old dentist, is scoutmaster of Troop 88 in Greenbrae, works with young people at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints in Greenbrae and has been a dental school instructor for five years. He lives in Larkspur.

Pack, like Boyd and Harvey, expresses concern over the effect on the school district of SB 90. Worrying that per-pupil spending increases permitted under the legislation won't keep pace with inflation, the candidate said, "Quality is inalterably tied up with cost in some degree and I hate to see the high standard of education in our community slide."

On the communication issue, he said: "Parents in our district feel the board and administration are not listening with interest and respect." He suggested parents regularly poll citizens to keep abreast of community feelings.

LEON PERSSON, 43, has been a trustee since his appointment in 1968, and currently serves on the executive board of the Marin County School Boards Association. He is manager of a chemical and industrial raw materials firm in Emeryville, and belongs to a number of trade and social organizations. He is a Corte Madera resident.

Persson, citing SB 90 shortcomings, advocated "more local option" to school finance "such as the availability of some override taxes."

And he said in his completed questionnaire, "I feel that the current tenure laws are wrong . . . One should be able to fire a teacher for poor performance."

It's A Wide Open Election For Novato

Eight Candidates, But No Incumbents, Are On The School District Ballot

No matter what the outcome at the polls Tuesday, the Novato Unified School District will have three new trutees from a field of eight candidates.

The race became wide open when the three incumbents, Carolyn M. Crabtree, Marret B. Boissevain and William G. Schneeflock decided not to seek reelection.

Polling places will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. the district covering northeast Marin contains 16,773 registered voters.

The candidates are:

JAMES ERNEST CASASSA, a head counselor and dean at Herbert Hoover Junior High School in San Francisco, first runnerup in 1971, is making his second try at a seat on the seven-member board.

Casassa, a member of the steering committee of the Novato Citizens Task Force for Education, has urged an upgrading of the basic skills program, continuing evaluation of programs and a start toward selecting a superintendent to succeed James G. Bunker, who will retire at the end of the 1974-75 school year.

The prime responsibility of an educational program is the maximum intellectual development of young people, he asserts.

One of the major tasks facing the board is the allocation of funds provided through Senate Bill 90, increased revenues which could be allocated to teacher salaries, new educational programs or restoring items that have been cut such as janitorial services and field trips, he said.

Casassa is a member of the Tamalpais Conservation Club, the Highland-Oaks Improvement Association and several professional organizations.

He is a graduate of the University of San Francisco and was charter president of the Alpha Delta Gamma fraternity there.

Casassa, his wife, Catherine, and three children, live at 11 Nina Drive. He has been a resident of Novato for about five years.

THOMAS J. CLEARY, 40, manager of distribution order services, Del Monte Corp., is president of the Rancho School Parent-Teacher Association.

Cleary said, "The citizens as a whole must ultimately decide the tax rate. As a school board member it is my duty to see, whatever the tax rate, that every dollar is spent efficiently to the student's benefit."

Cleary has advocated that the school board be geographically balanced, containing members from as many neighborhoods in Novato as possible.

He said he believes in teaching basics, reading, mathematics and writing, and believes there should be student participation on the school board to give the board "feedback" on programs and student needs.

Cleary is a native of San Francisco and a graduate of City College of San Francisco. He, his wife, Madeline, and three sons, live at 41 Taft Court. He has been a resident of Novato for four-and-a-half years.

He served in the Navy, 1952-54, and is former chairman of the Southern California Food Distribution Warehouse Association.

MABEL CROUGHAN, 53, a microbiologist with the Marin County Public Health Laboratory, said her "orientation will be toward human values."

Mrs. Croughan is a member of the American Association of University women and a former Parent-Teacher Association president and district PT-A officer.

She said all schools should have equal facilities and the schools should serve as community centers. "In our mobile society, families really need a place of belonging and acceptance," Mrs. Croughan said.

She advocated greater effort in career education, saying, "Every child should be prepared to earn his living by the time he gets out of high school, specifically girls in fields other than cosmetology and business."

Trustees should operate as a policy-setting body and should represent children from throughout the district, rather than from a specific neighborhood, she said. "The board also must have a larger concept of state and federal involvement in schools, particularly because of state and federal funding.

One goal she said is "to recapture the joy in learning for the teacher and the pupil.

Mrs. Croughan, mother of six children, ranging in age from 12 to 30, lives at 8 Haverhill Court. She has been a resident of Novato for 12 years.

M. GORDON GADDY, 36, a vice president of Firemen's Fund Insurance Co., is past copresident of the San Ramon parent-faculty-student Club.

Gaddy said, "The school system should be judged by what it does with the raw material it receives," and, "The board must work together effectively."

Schools should expand youngsters' understanding so they can act in the interests of society, find a vocation, fulfill their responsibility as citizens and engage in good personal relationships, he said.

Gaddy is a graduate of Georgia State University and has been a resident of Novato for four-and-a-half years.

He and his wife Sue and three children live at 2473 Vineyard Road.

JAMES HARRINGTON JR., 49, director of personnel and management development, Kaiser Steel Corp., believes the major goal of education is to prepare the "individual for living a meaningful and fulfilling life."

"To reach this goal one concern to which the board needs to address itself is that of providing significant career counseling for Novato students," he said.

Harrington was an executive counselor at the University of Georgia and Southern Methodist University and served on the accreditation study committee at San Marin High School.

He said high school students should serve on the board in "an advisory capacity," and urged a program to increase student awareness of the responsibility of adult status, which they reach at 18.

Harrington also advocates a broader athletic program which would increase participation through "less publicized sports."

Harrington is a native of New York City and a graduate of New York University. He holds a Master's Degree from Southern Methodist University.

He, his wife, Betty Jean, and two children live at 194 Maestro Road. He has been a resident of Novato for 13 years.

DR. JOHN D. KASSENBROCK, 46, a dentist, has served on the Novato Parks and Recreation Commission and is a founding board member of the Novato Civic Foundation.

Kassenbrock believes "any educational system has to be based on individual differences" and must provide basic knowledge.

Course and career counseling has been "one of the most neglected areas and as much attention should be paid to students preparing for a trade as those going to universities," he said.

Special program should be available for the gifted students as well as the educationally handicapped and a combination of innovative and time tested programs "must be worked out."

He said one of the district problems is "the weakened credibility in the eyes of many especially in regard to financial matters," and that teacher morale is low.

Dr. Kassenbrock, a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley and Washington University in St. Louis, is a native of Chicago.

He served as a lieutenant junior grade in the Navy Air Corps during World War II.

Dr. Kassenbrock, his wife, Mary Ann, and six children live at 35 Eames Court. He has been a resident of Novato for nine years.

WILLIAM A. LEHIGH, supervisor of administrative services, Chevron Chemical Co., Richmond, was a member of the district's educational goals committee, 1970-71.

Lehigh believes school board members should participate in all decisions affecting the education of children, with administrative detail delegated to the staff.

He said the tenure system for teachers needs a thorough review and believes there is need for communication between parents and school board, parents and administration and particularly between parents and faculty members.

"I do believe that our schools should exist to bring about the optimum development of the individual, thereby enabling him to attain his full potential to function effectively within his environment and society, "Lehigh said.

He has called for continuing review of the school system, and described the board's function as "coping with various sons at 130 Esmeyer Drive, San Rafael. They moved from Hawaii last September.

In Hawaii she and her husband were researchers for the Hawaii English Program and she testified before the House Education Committee last year.

She also published a community newsletter dealing with schools and other activities.

Mrs. Pechauer holds a Bachelor's Degree in communications from the University of Illinois.

Mrs. Pechauer does not believe that curriculum and other educational decisions should be left entirely to the professional staff and thinks that the board should do its own gathering of facts.

Mrs. Pechauer also advocates "early diagnosis of learning problems" rather than passing unqualified children from one grade to another, an emphasis on basic skills and a setting of goals for children's progress in schools.

She has said she endorses any "concept that really works," but that her own experience with an open classroom program led her to believe it "was an inflexible program, (which) decreased educational levels and was disastrous for the child who needed direction."

Mrs. Pechauer said she believes she has had enough time to get acquainted with Dixie schools and that her experience in Hawaii in school matters qualifies her for the job.

He served in the Navy, 1952-54, and is former chairman of the Southern California Food Distribution Warehouse Association.

MABEL CROUGHAN, 53, a microbiologist with the Marin County Public Health Laboratory, said her "orientation will be toward human values."

Mrs. Croughan is a member of the American Association of University women and a former Parent-Teacher Association president and district PT-A officer.

She said all schools should have equal facilities and the schools should serve as community centers. "In our mobile society, families really need a place of belonging and acceptance," Mrs. Croughan said.

She advocated greater effort in career education, saying, "Every child should be prepared to earn his living by the time he gets out of high school, specifically girls in fields other than cosmetology and business."

Trustees should operate as a policy-setting body and should represent children from throughout the district, rather than from a specific neighborhood, she said. "The board also must have a larger concept of state and federal involvement in schools, particularly because of state and federal funding.

One goal she said is "to recapture the joy in learning for the teacher and the pupil.

Mrs. Croughan, mother of six children, ranging in age from 12 to 30, lives at 8 Haverhill Court. She has been a resident of Novato for 12 years.

M. GORDON GADDY, 36, a vice president of Firemen's Fund Insurance Co., is past co-president of the San Ramon parent-faculty-student Club.

Gaddy said, "The school system should be judged by what it does with the raw material it receives," and, "The board must work together effectively."

Schools should expand youngsters' understanding so they can act in the interests of society, find a vocation, fulfill their responsibility as citizens and engage in good personal relationships, he said.

Gaddy is a graduate of Georgia State University and has been a resident of Novato for four-and-a-half years.

He and his wife Sue and three children live at 2473 Vineyard Road.

JAMES HARRINGTON JR., 49, director of personnel and management development, Kaiser Steel Corp., believes the major goal of education is to prepare the "individual for living a meaningful and fulfilling life."

"To reach this goal one concern to which the board needs to address itself is that of providing significant career counseling for Novato students," he said.

Harrington was an executive counselor at the University of Georgia and Southern Methodist University and served on the accreditation study committee at San Marin High School.

He said high school students should serve on the board in "an advisory capacity," and urged a program to increase student awareness of the responsibility of adult status, which they reach at 18.

Harrington also advocates a broader athletic program which would increase participation through "less publicized sports."

Harrington is a native of New York City and a graduate of New York University. He holds a Master's Degree from Southern Methodist University.

He, his wife, Betty Jean, and two children live at 194 Maestro Road. He has been a resident of Novato for 13 years.

DR. JOHN D. KASSENBROCK, 46, a dentist, has served on the Novato Parks and Recreation Commission and is a founding board member of the Novato Civic Foundation.

Kassenbrock believes "any educational system has to be based on individual differences" and must provide basic knowledge.

Course and career counseling has been "one of the most neglected areas and as much attention should be paid to students preparing for a trade as those going to universities," he said.

Special program should be available for the gifted students as well as the educationally handicapped and a combination of innovative and time tested programs "must be worked out."

He said one of the district problems is "the weakened credibility in the eyes of many especially in regard to financial matters," and that teacher morale is low.

Dr. Kassenbrock, a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley and Washington University in St. Louis, is a native of Chicago.

He served as a lieutenant junior grade in the Navy Air Corps during World War II.

Dr. Kassenbrock, his wife, Mary Ann, and six children live at 35 Eames Court. He has been a resident of Novato for nine years.

WILLIAM A. LEHIGH, supervisor of administrative services, Chevron Chemical Co., Richmond, was a member of the district's educational goals committee, 1970-71.

Lehigh believes school board members should participate in all decisions affecting the education of children, with administrative detail delegated to the staff.

He said the tenure system for teachers needs a thorough review and believes there is need for communication between parents and school board, parents and administration and particularly between parents and faculty members.

"I do believe that our schools should exist to bring about the optimum development of the individual, thereby enabling him to attain his full potential to function effectively within his environment and society, "Lehigh said.

He has called for continuing review of the school system, and described the board's function as "coping with various sons at 130 Esmeyer Drive, San Rafael. They moved from Hawaii last September.

In Hawaii she and her husband were researchers for the Hawaii English Program and she testified before the House Education Committee last year.

She also published a community newsletter dealing with schools and other activities.

Mrs. Pechauer holds a Bachelor's Degree in communications from the University of Illinois.

Mrs. Pechauer does not believe that curriculum and other educational decisions should be left entirely to the professional staff and thinks that the board should do its own gathering of facts.

Mrs. Pechauer also advocates "early diagnosis of learning problems" rather than passing unqualified children from one grade to another, an emphasis on basic skills and a setting of goals for children's progress in schools.

She has said she endorses any "concept that really works," but that her own experience with an open classroom program led her to believe it "was an inflexible program, (which) decreased educational levels and was disastrous for the child who needed direction."

Mrs. Pechauer said she believes she has had enough time to get acquainted with Dixie schools and that her experience in Hawaii in school matters qualifies her for the job.

BETTY MACHADO, 48, a housewife, has been active in many civic groups and was named a "founding father" of Novato when the city was incorporated in 1960 for her incorporation efforts.

"If you want a trustee who will rubber stamp the administrators' recommendations, I am not your candidate," Mrs. Machado said at the first candidates night session.

"The attitude of the board has not been one of the best to deal with over the years," she said.

Mrs. Machado has opposed plans to rent space for administrators' offices, and board breakfast meetings with the Novato City Council, held at a time, she said, when most of the public couldn't attend.

On the potential closing of Pacheco School, she said she would rather "see the empty classrooms used, instead of closing the school."

Mrs. Machado said there is a lack of communication in the district and approved of having two students on the school board as non-voting members.

Mrs. Machado was a charter member of the Rancho School Parent-Teacher Association and the Novato Federated Women's Clubs and is a former member of the Novato Parks and Recreation Commission and a member of numerous organizations and committees.

LAGUNITAS DISTRICT

Diverse Life Styles Spawn Choice Of School Programs

By PAUL LIBERATORE

Launitas School District voters will be confronted with a double-barreled ballot when they vote Tuesday for members of the district's governing board.

Six candidates are competing for three full-term seats on the board.

And four of those six candidates are also contesting for a special term on the board that runs only until June 30 — a vacancy created by the resignation of Gary Giacomini when he was elected to the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

CANDIDATES IN the regular election are Lee DiVincenzo, Allan J. Kirchem, Marilyn C. Marioni, incumbent Richard C. Sloan, Harry R. Smith and Patricia White.

Competing for Giacomini's unfinished term are Mrs. DiVincenzo, Kirchem, Smith and Mrs. White.

The primary issue in the district in the past few years has been the institution of alternative education programs. Groups of parents have pressed for programs that they thought expressed their philosophies of education for their children and reflected their life styles.

One result during the last year and one half has been the establishment of the Open Classroom and Advanced Basic Capabilities programs (ABC), supplementing the existing more traditional program of basic subjects plus electives.

With that all behind it, the district now is faced with providing guidance and evaluating the progress of the new alternatives.

All candidates agree that the three educational program choices should remain and be developed. Incumbent Sloan, Marioni and Smith have conducted a cooperative campaign, stressing the need for the school to carry education past the walls of the classroom and into the community, the independence of children and bringing up ecological issues in the San Geronimo Valley.

The other three candidates, DiVincenzo, White and Kirchem, have emphasized that frictions resulting from differences in philosophies among residents must be eased, and have called for board objectivity.

The 500 students in the district are distributed in two schools: San Geronimo School, kindergarten through sixth grade, and Lagunitas School, first through eighth grade. The district has 2,091 registered voters.

LEE DiVINCENZO, a former full-time teacher in Fountain Valley in Southern California, has been a subsitute teacher in the Lagunitas district for the past two years.

Substantial community growth in the San Geronimo Valley, she said, has brought with it "a great diversification of interest and ideology," creating a need for diversification in the school system. And with growth, she added, also has come division and polarity in the community.

She said the school board "should not be used as a political or ideological territory" to divide the community or promote individual political viewpoints.

She has called for a breaking up of the polarization in order to free residents to work in the school system as individuals and to put the district in a position "to receive a larger field of talent and ideas without a larger financial output."

"We must create a framework in our school for receiving input from the total community so that no one member will have to experience intimidation," she said. "We must create a framework for positive communication within the school so that no one instructor, child or staff member will feel boxed in and unable to share special talents and attitudes."

She said she offers her objectivity to all three programs offered in the district, her eight years experience as an instructor and parent, and her refusal to divide her attitudes politically.

Mrs. DiVincenzo, 30, of 320 Cintura Ave., and her husband, Joseph, have lived in the community five years and have two children.

She is a graduate of California Western University in San Diego.

HARRY R. SMITH, 30, a clerk in the Fairfax Post Office, has lived in the San Geronimo Valley for three and a half years with his wife, Diane, and two children.

He cites a vast change in the Lagunitas District in the past few years as the outcome of a push by parents, in which he was active, to set up new programs in the schools to accommodate differences in values and life styles among students and parents.

The results of these new programs, he said, "have been spectacular."

He said the best aspect of these new programs is that large numbers of parents are now actively involved in the education of their children — in designing the programs, hiring the teachers and determining the underlying values of each.

He calls now for an evaluation of existing programs and staff.

"There must be yearly individual teacher evaluation, yearly program evaluation, yearly district evaluation and yearly board evaluation," he said.

As problems to be dealth with in the district he lists "school buses that dictate school schedules, overcrowded classrooms, a poor physical education program, the possibility of collective bargaining, a board commitment to lower the student-teacher ratio, and early childhood education."

Smith, of 15 Corona Ave., Lagunitas, served as president of the San Geronimo Art Center in 1972 and is its vice president this year.

He attended Indiana University and Indiana Institute of Technology.

MARILYN MARIONI, 37, a first-time candidate for the Lagunitas board, lives in Forest Knolls and is the mother of three sons, all of primary and elementary school age.

She is a classroom volunteer, organizing the student newspaper Right On News at San Geronimo School, and has lived in the district two and one-half years.

Mrs. Marioni said she is a candidate because she wants to see the existing wide choice of educational programs in the district continue and because she is concerned "for the rights of children."

"They must have a say in their choice of learning style and must be listened to," she said. "Children belong to no one. They should not be chattel to their parents or society.

"Learning is taking place outside — walking in the woods, sitting on the hills, or following the creeks. I feel a board member should raise questions and issues regarding open space, preserving the hills, wildlife and rural atmosphere versus pouring concrete over White's Hill, urbanizing the valley."

She also said she seeks a lower teacher-student ratio and would like to see more communication between youngsters in the various programs offered within the district.

Mrs. Marioni, of 130 Montezuma Road, worked as a newspaper reporter in New Jersey for two years and as a personnel counselor in San Francisco for six years until 1967. She studied at Farleigh Dickinson University and Columbia University.

She is active in the Telegraph Hill and San Geronimo Valley pre-schools. Her husband, Thomas, is director of a San Francisco art museum.

RICHARD C. SLOAN, 37, elected to the Lagunitas board last year after running unsuccessfully in 1971, is a carpenter and resident of Woodacre.

He is a former San Quentin correctional officer, Marin County juvenile probation officer and an Army intelligence officer from 1961 to 1963.

Slaon said his candidacy is committed to parental involvement in the decision-making process of the school.

He said the two new educational programs in the district, Open Classroom and Advanced Basic Capabilities, instituted during his 18 months on the board, reflect the life style of the community and its educational goals.

He said that because of these programs people in the community are better able to accept each other's differences, and no longer feel threatened by opposing ideologies so that they have been able to work together on programs for the whole school.

"I am concerned with maximizing communication between the staffs of the three programs and also communication between staff, administrators and the board so as to break down rigid roles and authoritarian hierarchy," he said. "Decision-making should be a product of a consensus between board, parents, administration and students. In this way, people will participate in the decisions that affect them, rather than criticize the process from the outside."

He listed parental involvement in hiring for the ABC and Open Classroom programs, Open Classroom program evaluation and board rap sessions with classified as well as certificated staff as examples of shared decision-making.

Sloan, the father of two preschool age children, is the board representative to the San Geronimo Valley Planning Committee, a member of the steering committee of Marin Alternative, a board member of the American Civil Liberties Union and chairman for the Committee for Prisoner Humanity and Justice.

He was a delegate to the 1972 Democratic National Convention, an organizer for the Lagunitas school tax election and has been involved in various political campaigns.

He has a Bachelor's Degree in psychology from the University of California at Berkeley.

currently president of the Lagunitas Parent-Teacher Association.

She said her past two years in the P-TA, first as vice president and then as president, have brought her close to parents, teachers and students in the district.

She said she seeks to further the "one-schol concept" in the district, a path she has pursued in her P-TA work.

"One of the assets of the district is the wealth of diverse backgrounds, interests, talents and abilities on the part of its citizens. This is reflected by our school with its three programs," she said. "We are now at a point where these diversities can either work to our advantage or isolate us from one another. A respect for each other's views is imperative if any one of the programs is to grow... I do not in any way favor one program over another, and I feel for a board member to do so would be a violation of his trust."

She said she feels that success of the program depends on objectivity of the board, and considers herself objective. She added she "strongly objects" to using the board as a stepping stone to other political office.

Mrs. White, of 45 Spring Road, Lagunitas, is the mother of two sons, aged 9 and 4. She attended the University of Minnesota and the University of California at San Diego.

She is vice president of St. Cecilia's Women's Club and a member of the San Geronimo Art Center.

She has had eight years experience as a legal secretary and during that time was an active member of the National Association of Legal Secretaries.

Her husband, William C. White, is in the land investment business.

ALLAN J. KIRCHEM, 42, a civil engineer with the electric branch of the California Public Utilities Commission, is a resident of Woodacre running for the first time for the Lagunitas School Board.

Kirchem cited the three educational programs in the district as its unique feature, and said he favors "their continuance and evolution" with the guidance and study of the school board.

"The Open Classroom program and other alternatives should be available as educational choice within the limits of the resources of the district," he said. "I endorse the three philosophies used here. The balance gives the widest possible choice to pupils, parents and teachers.

"Decisions about curriculum should be made jointly by the school board, superintendent, teachers and students. The final vote on policy and guidelines is, by law, the school board's, with the benefit of the student as the criterion."

He said he disagrees with the automatic promotion of students and suggests that teachers evaluate students and confer with parents several times during the year. He also favors setting up a teacher evaluation process in accordance with the Stull Bill.

He said he approves of Senate Bill 90 and believes increased revenues from it will help the district.

Kirchem, of 36 Madrone Ave., is the father of two children, aged 8 and 5. His wife, Ann Marie, is a registered nurse.

He spent 10 years with the California Division of Highways before his employment with the PUC and is a graduate of Oregon State University.

O'TOOLE believes Awareness Is Essential for Councilman

Thomas O'Toole believes that a responsible city councilman must be aware of the needs of every part of San Rafael. O'Toole cannot be a one issue candidate. His opponents seem to think the only issue is the campaign fund. O'Toole believes there are more important elements.

During a morning coffee in the Terra Linda home of Eleanor and Donald Langendorf, he cited the following areas of concern:

1. Establishment of a crime prevention unit to help reduce home burglaries.
2. Creation of a paramedic program to assist accident victims.
3. Expansion of recreational facilites.
4. Improved housing for the elderly.
5. Beautiication of major roads.
6. Redevelopment of the downtown area.
7. Open space acquisition.
8. Taxes

O'Toole, a native of San Rafael, reminded the guests that he is the candidate who has been and will continue to be readily accessible to all the citizens of San Rafael.

O'Toole has been a businessman and taxpayer in San Rafael for nearly 30 years. He has been a public servant for 11 years and deserves to be your San Rafael City Councilman.

I do not in any way favor one program over another, and I feel for a board member to do so would be a violation of his trust."

She said she feels that success of the program depends on objectivity of the board, and considers herself objective. She added she "strongly objects" to using the board as a stepping stone to other political office.

Mrs. White, of 45 Spring Road, Lagunitas, is the mother of two sons, aged 9 and 4. She attended the University of Minnesota and the University of California at San Diego.

She is vice president of St. Cecilia's Women's Club and a member of the San Geronimo Art Center.

She has had eight years experience as a legal secretary and during that time was an active member of the National Association of Legal Secretaries.

Her husband, William C. White, is in the land investment business.

ALLAN J. KIRCHEM, 42, a civil engineer with the electric branch of the California Public Utilities Commission, is a resident of Woodacre running for the first time for the Lagunitas School Board.

Kirchem cited the three educational programs in the district as its unique feature, and said he favors "their continuance and evolution" with the guidance and study of the school board.

"The Open Classroom program and other alternatives should be available as educational choice within the limits of the resources of the district," he said. "I endorse the three philosophies used here. The balance gives the widest possible choice to pupils, parents and teachers.

"Decisions about curriculum should be made jointly by the school board, superintendent, teachers and students. The final vote on policy and guidelines is, by law, the school board's, with the benefit of the student as the criterion."

He said he disagrees with the automatic promotion of students and suggests that teachers evaluate students and confer with parents several times during the year. He also favors setting up a teacher evaluation process in accordance with the Stull Bill.

He said he approves of Senate Bill 90 and believes increased revenues from it will help the district.

Kirchem, of 36 Madrone Ave., is the father of two children, aged 8 and 5. His wife, Ann Marie, is a registered nurse.

He spent 10 years with the California Division of Highways before his employment with the PUC and is a graduate of Oregon State University.

He is a member of St. Cecilia's Church and the San Geronimo Valley Lions Club as well as being a 4-H Club leader, teaching an automotive class.

O'TOOLE believes Awareness Is Essential for Councilman

Thomas O'Toole believes that a responsible city councilman must be aware of the needs of every part of San Rafael. O'Toole cannot be a one issue candidate. His opponents seem to think the only issue is the campaign fund. O'Toole believes there are more important elements.

During a morning coffee in the Terra Linda home of Eleanor and Donald Langendorf, he cited the following areas of concern:

1. Establishment of a crime prevention unit to help reduce home burglaries.
2. Creation of a paramedic program to assist accident victims.
3. Expansion of recreational facilites.
4. Improved housing for the elderly.
5. Beautiication of major roads.
6. Redevelopment of the downtown area.
7. Open space acquisition.
8. Taxes

O'Toole, a native of San Rafael, reminded the guests that he is the candidate who has been and will continue to be readily accessible to all the citizens of San Rafael.

O'Toole has been a businessman and taxpayer in San Rafael for nearly 30 years. He has been a public servant for 11 years and deserves to be your San Rafael City Councilman.

Kentfield District Issue Is Money

New Board Must Wrestle With Problems Of A Finance Squeeze

With five hopefuls vying for three seats, the Kentfield School District board race focuses on one issue: money.

The district, which has 7,057 registered voters and an enrollment of 1,282, is faced with a financial squeeze because of SB 90, the state's new tax-shift, school-finance law, and declining student population which affects state assistance.

Most of the discussion during the campaign, which will end at the polls Tuesday, has dealt with wiping out a projected 1973-74 budget deficit of $80,000 brought about by the financial squeeze.

THE CANDIDATES are incumbent Gloria Riccardi and challengers Bruce Koppe, an attorney and bank official; Winifred Setrakian, active in school affairs; Neil M. Park, an attorney, and Joan Brownstein, president of the Wolfe Grade Parent-Teacher Association. All the challengers either serve or have served on the citizens advisory council to the district board.

Besides Mrs. Riccardi's position, seats being contested are those of J. Richard Ellis and DeWitt K. MacDonald Jr., both of whom are leaving the board after long service.

The district's dilemma is this: trustees last year dipped into budget reserves to keep the tax rate down to $2.96 per $100 of assessed valuation, a procedure called deficit spending. Then along came SB 90, which not only halted deficit spending but clamped a lid on spending per pupil by all school districts and required school boards to ask voter approval of certain overrides.

Thus, combined with an annual average drop of 45 in student population the past four years, the district is confronted next fiscal year with the prospect that expenses will exceed revenues by $80,000 and with no way of wiping out the deficit except by budget cuts.

Views on what and how much to cut vary among the candidates, with all expressing a desire at the same time to maintain the best educational program possible.

The situation, in the words of candidate Winifred Setrakian, has forced a "hard look at reality."

Meanwhile, district officials are hoping legislation in Sacramento will point a way out of the dilemma for Kentfield.

GLORIA RICCARDI, the incumbent trustee, has taken part in some cost-cutting already undertaken by the board in preparation for next fiscal year. Trustees have notified four teachers that they might be laid off and cut six aide positions, among other things.

Mrs. Riccardi hopes to avert the layoffs. "We'll be trying very hard to keep those teachers," she said.

With the help of staff and the citizens advisory council, she said, "the board is in the process of setting priorities on programs." She raised the possibility of elimination of the Spanish program, which she described as "fragmented."

"From the list of priorities, we'll make some decisions," said Mrs. Riccardi, 45, seeking her second full term on the board.

The incumbent, married and the mother of three children, lives at 39 Corte Gracitas, Greenbrae.

BRUCE KOPPE, 39-year-old vice president and tax manager with the Bank of America in San Francisco, supports elimination of low priority programs as set by the citizens advisory council, although he adds some or all might be integrated with basic classroom instruction.

"At the same time, the entire budget must be reviewed to eliminate all deferable or superfluous expenses," said Koppe, who lives with his wife and four children at 54 Paseo Way, Greenbrae.

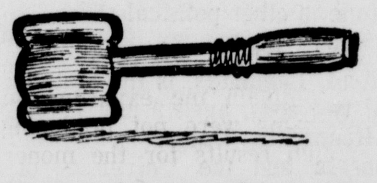
That done, he said, the "only alternative" will be to examine staffing cuts if a deficit still exists.

WINIFRED SETRAKIAN, active in citizens advisory council and Parent-Teacher Association work, believed the district should strive to eliminate teaching positions through resignation, retirement or staffing combinations, rather than layoffs. The 43-year-old mother of four children, who lives at 21 Turnagain Road, Kent Woodlands, said: "It is becoming increasingly clear that a reduction in teaching staff is unavoidable."

Mrs. Setrakian, stressing that long-range considerations also are involved in the fiscal dilemma, saw possibly an expanded role for Parent-Teacher Association members in helping to pick up some of the district's transportation costs.

NEIL M. PARK, of 105 McAllister Avenue, Kentfield, also looks to parents picking up costs of special programs in which their children are involved, such as the $1,000 outdoor education project. But he also supports investigating cuts in junior high school bus transportation and new equipment purchases.

And, like most of the other candidates, Park raised the specter of personnel cuts, noting that 85 per cent of the budget goes toward staff salaries and benefits.



The 30-year-old Park, in private law practice in San Francisco, is the attorney representing the Kentfield Gardens Homeowners Association in its fight against a condominium project behind Marin Catholic High School. He is married and the father of two children.

JOAN BROWNSTEIN, 40, of 25 Wolfe Glen Way, Kentfield, hoped that in addition to trims in areas such as transportation and furnishing of towels to students — "all of these things add up" — teachers would be "conservative" in their 1973-74 salary requests.

Mrs. Brownstein, mother of four who holds a teaching credential from the University of Southern California, also called for scrutiny of the $45,880 capital outlay budget. "Special services which are non-instructional or extra-curricular need assessment," she said.

BEYOND FISCAL consideration, the new board will have to get acquainted with a new superintendent, Eugene C. Peters, named last month to replace the late Anthony G. Bacich.

Peters, now administrative assistant to the superintendent of the San Diego County Department of Education, will take office with the new board in July.

AN UNEASY PEACE

Reconciliation High On Lists Of Reed District Candidates

By GEORGE NEVIN

A rift between two camps in the Reed School Distirct — bridged for the last two years but not eliminated — looms large in the minds of four candidates for three board seats.

Although the district has been relatively quiet since the last board election in 1971, with no new outbreaks of the controversies which regularly rocked Reed during previous years, the potential for new hostilities still exists.

All four candidates — incumbents John J. Osborn and Charles V. Patterson and newcomers Robert K. Ockner and Donald Furlong — mentioned reconciliation of splinter groups as high on his list of priorities if elected.

The third of the three seats vacant is held by Kenneth G. Wells, who decided not to run for another term. The district has 7,619 registered voters.

THE DISAGREEMENT in Reed goes back several years before 1969. During the late 1960s, Reed began experimenting with new types and methods of education and began deemphasizing the traditional skills taught in school in favor of a more loosely structured program — too untraditional, some argued.

As costs skyrocketed — from $469 per pupil in 1960 to $1,019 in 1969 — some parents began to complain the experimental programs were not producing enough results for the money spent.

In 1969, three trustees were elected on platforms pledging opposition to a scheduled 50-cent tax rate increase. They also promised to fight "innovation for innovation's sake" and experimental programs which they said were not working.

The three — Gordon C. Wright, James B. Richwagen and Wells — formed the board majority for a time, but Wright eventually was recalled in a bitter election in 1971 and Richwagen resigned when he moved out of the district.

The 1971 election — which not only involved Wright's recall but also two other board seats — saw the candidates many considered the educational liberals regain control of the board. Osborn replaced Wright and joined Leo Souza, who won reelection, and Margaret E. Jones to tip the balance away from the conservatives.

Things have been calmer in th district since th.n, but it is safe to say the parents and others who elected Wright, Richwagen and Wells and who voted against Wright's recall haven't gone away.

It is these parents and their views on education that most concern the four candidates running for the board April 17.

Other controversies which could crop up again include a dispute over graded report cards versus ungraded ones; votes of "no confidence" in the board by district teachers, and squabbles over educational goals and achievements, spending of foundation grants and charges that teacher morale and effectiveness suffered from board actions.

The candidates, their backgrounds and their views on issues in the election are:

DR. JOHN J. OSBORN is one of two incumbents running for reelection. A San Francisco research physician, Osborn was elected to the board in 1971 and was its president during his first year in office.

He and his wife, Anne Mary, live at 2960 Paradise Drive, Tiburon, with the last of their seven children. Osborn, 55, is a native of Detroit who has lived in the district 20 years. He is a graduate of Princeton University and Johns Hopkins Medical School.

The major problem facing Reed, he said, "is to let the district settle down and get some work done after the upheavals of two years ago."

"The whole debate of then was very useful and both sides have contributed constructive components" to the district, he said.

Two years ago, he explained, "a group of parents, sometimes labeled the conservatives, wanted more accountability and evaluation of programs. The other parents, called by some the liberals, wanted innovative and flexible education."

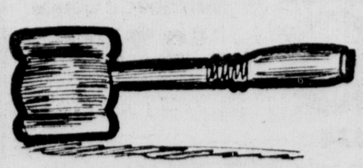
Both groups, he said, "had very important and constructive things to say and both should be listened to."

One goal of the board, he said, should be to return much of the detailed day-to-day work in the district to the administration. "The board took over too much work two years ago. I'm convinced administration is the job of administrators, not of the board."

With "all sorts of different ways of teaching," Osborn said it is "important to keep enough flexibility and variety in teaching to match the child to the teaching method." Parents, he said, should have voice in which type of program their children enter. "Educators tend to forget it, but often parents have pretty good idea which whqch type of education is right for their children."

CHARLES V. PATTERSON, 41, is the other incumbent in the race. A native of California, Patterson was elected to the board in a special election in June to fill the unexpired term of James R. Richwagen, who moved out of the district.

Patterson, an attorney with offices in Tiburon, was a member of the Reed board in 1969, when he was appointed to fill an unexpired term, but failed in his bid for election to the post, running fourth in a field of six candidates and losing out to Richwagen by 41 votes.



Patterson is a graduate of the University of California at Los Angeles and of Hastings College of Law. He and his wife and three children live at 20 Peninsula Road, Belvedere.

"The two most important things a board members must address himself to are economics and curricula," he said. It is the duty of the board to "make sure the taxpayer is getting a fair break. The board has the obligation to see that district programs are in line with the money available."

The district "should be willing to explore new approaches in methodology in education," he said. "In a small district such as ours it's vital to evaluate the potential of any program before it is implemented, and to constantly evaluate and follow up programs after they begin."

If they are unsuccessful, there should be "willingness to admit it."

While board members are "not professional educators and must rely on the professionals to supply information," that is no reason for trustees to agree with everything the administration suggests, Patterson said.

In Reed are "a great number of varying opinions," he said, "and we must try to understand them all. Each opinion probably has merit and there's no reason we can't exchange ideas and opinions as long as we don't become emotional about them."

Patterson stated his philosophy on board intervention in day-to-day district operations: "The board is not an administrative body but a policy-making body. There's no way a board can administer a district when it is meeting twice a month."

As an attorney, Patterson said he could help the district by exploring the implications of various pieces of legislation that affect schools in California.

DR. ROBERT K. OCKNER, 36, was born in Pennsylvania and grew up in Los Angeles. He is a graduate of Pomona College and Harvard Medical School and is a member of the faculty of the University of California Medical School in San Francisco.

Ockner has lived in the Reed District four years, currently residing at 1 Corte Palos Verdes with his wife, Patricia, and three boys. Two of them attend Bel Aire School.

The district, said Ockner, needs "a continuation of the unity and stability that has characterized it for the past two years. One of the major responsibilities of the board is to foster an atmosphere that is conducive to good education."

The district has a ood superintendent in Ralph D. Giovanniello, said Ockner, and "we should allow him as much authority as is consistent with good education."

If elected, Ockner said he would strive to "increase the degree of articulation between our district and the (Tamalpais) high school district as a means of better enabling us to prepare our students and better enabling the students to select their own programs" as they approach high school age.

Also needed in the district, he said, is "a high level of input by the community in the operation of schools. Community interest and involvement have been one of our principal assets and that should continue."

DONALD FURLONG, 56, is a Bechtel Corp. executive. A graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy and holder of a Master's Degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he has been with Bechtel since 1962 and is manager of the firm's research and development operations.

He is a veteran of World War II and the Korean War, and a retired U.S. Navy captain.

He and his wife, Patricia, who was reared in Sausalito, reside at 4 Eucalyptus Road, Belvedere. Their two children, Thomas and Patricia, attend Belvedere School.

Furlong says he sees no critical issues confronting the Reed District at present, and that he feels "the district is in good hands, with a good staff and a good board." However, he believes, his presence on the board would make it a better balanced board, and that his experience with business and technology — especially such matters as environmental preservation, the energy crisis, the effects of technology on mankind, etc. — would be particularly beneficial to the district in effecting the budgeting and teacher evaluation changes provided for by new state laws.

"My background has made me aware of the fact that our children are going to need the very best preparation for a complex future," he says. "I want to contribute my time and experience to that end."

If they are unsuccessful, there should be "willingness to admit it."

While board members are "not professional educators and must rely on the professionals to supply information," that is no reason for trustees to agree with everything the administration suggests, Patterson said.

In Reed are "a great number of varying opinions," he said, "and we must try to understand them all. Each opinion probably has merit and there's no reason we can't exchange ideas and opinions as long as we don't become emotional about them."

Patterson stated his philosophy on board intervention in day-to-day district operations: "The board is not an administrative body but a policy-making body. There's no way a board can administer a district when it is meeting twice a month."

As an attorney, Patterson said he could help the district by exploring the implications of various pieces of legislation that affect schools in California.

DR. ROBERT K. OCKNER, 36, was born in Pennsylvania and grew up in Los Angeles. He is a graduate of Pomona College and Harvard Medical School and is a member of the faculty of the University of California Medical School in San Francisco.

Ockner has lived in the Reed District four years, currently residing at 1 Corte Palos Verdes with his wife, Patricia, and three boys. Two of them attend Bel Aire School.

The district, said Ockner, needs "a continuation of the unity and stability that has characterized it for the past two years. One of the major responsibilities of the board is to foster an atmosphere that is conducive to good education."

The district has a ood superintendent in Ralph D. Giovanniello, said Ockner, and "we should allow him as much authority as is consistent with good education."

If elected, Ockner said he would strive to "increase the degree of articulation between our district and the (Tamalpais) high school district as a means of better enabling us to prepare our students and better enabling the students to select their own programs" as they approach high school age.

Also needed in the district, he said, is "a high level of input by the community in the operation of schools. Community interest and involvement have been one of our principal assets and that should continue."

DONALD FURLONG, 56, is a Bechtel Corp. executive. A graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy and holder of a Master's Degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he has been with Bechtel since 1962 and is manager of the firm's research and development operations.

He is a veteran of World War II and the Korean War, and a retired U.S. Navy captain.

He and his wife, Patricia, who was reared in Sausalito, reside at 4 Eucalyptus Road, Belvedere. Their two children, Thomas and Patricia, attend Belvedere School.

Furlong says he sees no critical issues confronting the Reed District at present, and that he feels "the district is in good hands, with a good staff and a good board." However, he believes, his presence on the board would make it a better balanced board, and that his experience with business and technology — especially such matters as environmental preservation, the energy crisis, the effects of technology on mankind, etc. — would be particularly beneficial to the district in effecting the budgeting and teacher evaluation changes provided for by new state laws.

"My background has made me aware of the fact that our children are going to need the very best preparation for a complex future," he says. "I want to contribute my time and experience to that end."

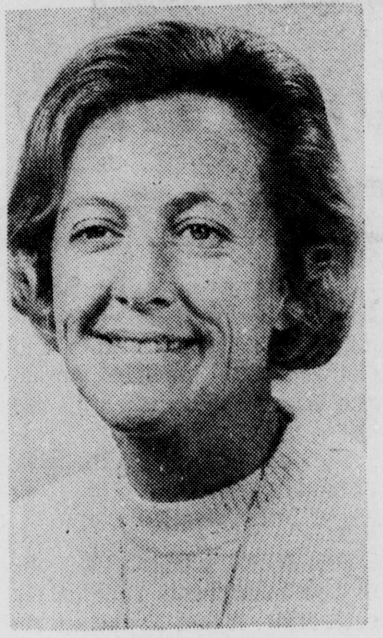
Four Bid For Ross School Positions

Three Openings On The Board

THOMAS A. GUERIN
Accounting partner

DAVID A. DIXON
Corporation officer



ELIZABETH F. WAY
Board incumbent

SALLY ANN RAKOW
Veteran trustee

Four candidates are contesting for three seats on the Ross School District Board of Trustees in Tuesday's election.

They are incumbents Sally Ann Rakow and Elizabeth F. Way, Thomas A. Guerin and David A. Dixon.

The district has one school, Ross School, with 510 students in kindergarten through eighth grade. There are 1,835 registered voters in the district.

The district faces implementation of the new state tax-shift school financing law, Senate Bill 90, which could restrict its tax rate. Voters, however, approved a higher tax ceiling in June, 1970, the unused portion of which could be added to the amount mandated by the new state law.

Known for quality education and high scores on statewide tests, the district also must deal with decisions regarding open classroom and other innovative educational programs being implemented in other districts.

THOMAS A. GUERIN, 45, a partner in a certified public accountant firm in San Francisco, is running for the Ross School District Board for the first time.

He said that implementation of Senate Bill 90 is the most important task facing the district.

"This comprehensive bill contains new procedures concerning taxation and school financing that will make careful budgeting of even greater consequence in years to come," he said. "I feel that my business experience will be helpful to the school board in this area."

One of his particular goals would be to increase student awareness of career opportunities.

"I would like to call upon the men and women of our community to explain the interesting aspects of their work to seventh and eighth grade students at five or 10 meetings during the school year. This would encourage youngsters to think about careers at an early age and broaden their knowledge of the opportunities open to them."

Guerin said he favors select open board sessions where parents and students could pass along their views on educational needs directly to principals and board members.

He also said he would seek through liaison representatives closer association with other organizations in the community, including the PTA, Recreation Committee and Town Council.

Guerin said he does not endorse the open classroom concept, "although I understand it has been tried and found effective in many areas." He said he does not believe that alternative school ideas apply to the Ross District.

Guerin, of 11 Ames Avenue, Ross, and his wife, Janice, have five children, aged 8 to 18, all of whom have attended or are attending Ross School.

He received a degree in business administration from the University of Santa Clara and served in the Army in Korea from 1946 to 1947 and from 1951 to 1952.

Guerin, a resident of Marin County for 18 years, the past seven in Ross, has coached Little League baseball and girls soccer at Ross School as well as Catholic Youth Organization basketball teams at St. Anselm's Church.

DAVID A. DIXON, 42, is a corporation officer and director of several companies allied with trucking, race horses, fresh food and vegetable export and insurance. He is seeking his first term as a Ross School District trustee.

"I think that curriculum (educational) decisions should be made through the joint effort of board members, school administrators and the certified staff," he said. "This requires very good communication between the three groups, with neither the board nor the school management allowing a feeling of fear or intimidation to exist in the minds of the teaching staff regarding what they are teaching, what changes they would like to see, or even what salaries are fair."

Dixon said he endorses the new concept of school finance as required by last year's Senate Bill 90.

"Something like this was long overdue," he said, "in spite of the U.S. Supreme Court saying that the right to an equal education is not a right guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

"It just means that our wealthy districts are going to have to be more critical of how they spend their money. And, of course, there remains the override provision whereby district residents can vote more money for their schools in the future."

Dixon said he does not at this time endorse the open classroom concept.

"I think that changes and improvements in classroom teaching are certainly possible and desirable, but only after they have proven successful in other similar teaching situations in other schools. At the elementary level, we have no need for alternative schools, nor do we have much need for career education."

Dixon and his wife, Edith Ann, live at 1 Arroyo Drive in the Del Mesa section of Kentfield, which is part of the Ross School District. They have three sons, all of whom attend the district's lone school.

He has a degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Illinois and has done graduate work in business administration at the University of Southern California. He is a former regional manager for Union Carbide and a division vice president for Occidental Petroleum Corp.

Dixon, a member of the San Francisco Commonwealth Club, holds most of the world's patents covering preservation of perishable foodstuffs using low oxygen atmospheres.

ELIZABETH F. WAY, 40, is seeking re-election to a full term as Ross School District trustee.

She was the only candidate to file for the vacancy on the five-member board created by the resignation of H. Jack Wyman last year.

Mrs. Way was graduated from the University of Iowa and Skidmore College with a degree in economics.

"I'm interested in the financial end of school operations and in maintaining the high standards of the school district," she said.

"With recent legislative limits upon school spending, it becomes increasingly difficult for school boards to maintain and improve programs while meeting increasing costs of operation. Economizing within the school will necessitate careful and thorough review of all areas of spending.

"Imaginative development of all available resources must be an important objective of the Ross School Board, so our students may be given every opportunity to progress academically."

Mrs. Way and her husband, Dr. Walter L. Way, live on Shady Lane in Ross with their three children — two in high school and one in Ross Elementary School. They have lived in the district 12 years.

She has been active in the school's Parent-Teacher Association, Sunnyhills Junior Auxiliary, Northgate Group, Ross Guild of the Boyd Museum, and the doctors' wives group at the University of California at San Francisco.

SALLY ANN RAKOW is seeking her fifth term on the Ross School District board.

Mrs. Rakow, first elected to the board in 1969, said she is running for reelection because "I think I can provide continuity and experience to the board."

She said she believes that one of the primary responsibilities of the board is to set "the general character of the educational program and to approve policies to carry out this program," rejecting the idea that educational decisions be left to district staff while the board concentrates on finance, housing and housekeeping.

"Staff should have the opportunity to develop new curriculum approaches that should be reviewed by the superintendent. The superintendent is responsible for presenting to the board a clear rationale for curriculum changes, including built in evaluation procedures."

She indicated that student interest has prompted several elective courses in the seventh and eighth grade program, but that final decision on new courses is the board's responsibility.

She said she endorses the concept of Senate Bill 90 as meeting the purposes of the Serrano-Priest decision.

"Sb 90 will eventually raise the expenditures of the lower wealth districts statewide, which I feel is right," she said.

Regarding Open Classroom and other programs, she said she would support them if they are what the community wants, within the financial and other limitations of the district.

"If the community wanted an educational choice, both an open and contained classroom situation, I believe we could provide it at Ross and still maintain our academic standards."

Mrs. Rakow lives with her husband, Jack, and two children at 59 Winship Ave. in Ross. She is a graduate of Dominican College in San Rafael.

She has served as chairman of the Ross board and is currently Marin's delegate to the California School Boards Association. She is also a member of the State Scholarship and Loan Commission and the Marin County Committee on School District Organization, and was appointed this year to the Republican State Central Committee.

This is the fifth council seat.

There is something you should know about it.

The man who wins this seat in April will break a dead lock. He can make the difference between one way decisions and a council that operates as it should. He must have one main quality: the ability to be fair and rational in the face of pressure. He must have one special interest: you and the quality of San Rafael's future.

No matter what your concerns and feelings, if you want them equally and fairly considered; vote JACK NIXON to the fifth council seat.

Six On School Board Ballots In San Rafael

The Quality Of Education, Alternative School Debated

SUZANNE L. BEITTEL
P-TA Leader

GALE B. FISHER
In-class volunteer

PAUL K. McMULLEN
Board incumbent

Six candidates vying for two seats on the San Rafael Board of Education have discussed a number of subjects during their campaigns, but have offered the widest spectrum of views on two issues: proposals to cut school costs, and alternative schools.

Candidates for the board are Suzanne L. Beittel, co-president of the Terra Linda Parent-Teacher Association; Gale B. Fisher, a member of the San Pedro Parent-Teacher Association board; incumbent Paul K. McMullen, a public relations director for Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co.; Lewis S. Pollock, a sales engineer for an air conditioning firm; Marie J. Sessi, legislative chairman of the Terra Linda and San Rafael Parent-Teacher Association councils, and Jeff D. Yarbrough, a senior at San Rafael High School.

McMullen, appointed to the board last year, is making his first bid for a full term. Board president Lawrence I. Kramer is not running for reelection.

The names of Joan Lisetor and Clarence W. Koop will also appear on the ballot, since they did not drop out of the race early enough to eliminate their names from the ballot listing.

MOST CANDIDATES generally agree that selection of a new superintendent is the major task facing the school system, and there has been little debate that the selection process should involve community input.

(Supt. John F. Plank will resign his post as of June 30 to accept a similar position with the Singapore-American School in Singapore.)

The San Rafael School System, which has 29,926 registered voters and an enrollment of about 8,500, embraces 12 elementary schools, two middle schools and two high schools.

Like other school districts, the San Rafael School System is faced with a financial squeeze in the wake of declining enrollment - especially in the elementary district where a current enrollment of 4,300 pupils is expected to dip by about 200 next year. Most candidates have endorsed cautiously SB 90, the state's new tax shift school financing law, and have offered a wide range of proposals for belt-tightening.

Candidates have also provided a wide spectrum of opinion on the issue of alternative school programs and the quality of education in the San Rafael School System.

Most candidates have agreed the lottery system is unfair, and that state tenure law needs revision. All oppose automatic promotion of students.

SUZANNE L. BEITTEL, of 675 Barberry Lane, is a member of the education committee of the Marin Association for Mental Health, the conservation committee of the Marin Audubon Society, Marin Conservation League, Marin Alternative and the San Rafael Citizens Advisory Committee on the General Plan.

Mrs. Beittel, 45, a volunteer in outdoor education at Santa Margarita School, is past president of the Dixie Coordinating Council and holds a Bachelor's Degree in chemistry from Antioch College. Her three children are enrolled in Terra Linda High School.

Throughout her campaign she has stressed her various activities in the Dixie School District, saying the San Rafael school board needs a Dixie representative since local children graduate into the San Rafael School System. "I feel that I bring representation and input from the Dixie District where I have lived 12 years and have been active in schools and the community."

She has urged a "close look at the budget" and consideration of the possibility of closing one or two of the elementary district's small neighborhood schools in an effort to cut costs.

Mrs. Beittel has said she has "positive feelings" about the San Rafael School System and endorses "a variety of educational techniques," including traditional and alternative programs.

"I would do almost anything" to spark student motivation, she said, adding students need a wide variety of educational programs. "I am pleased with the alternative schools in San Rafael."

School boards should be continually "tuned in" to the kinds of things going on in all district classrooms, she said.

GALE B. FISHER, of 7 Dunfries Terrace, has held board positions with the Womens Agricultural League of Northern California and the Peacock Gap Garden Club. She has been a stewardess, a union representative for a national airline, and a fashion representative for a number of women's publications. She has acted as an "in class" volunteer in the San Rafael School System.

She holds an agricultural degree from the University of Illinois and has lived in the district for 9 years. Her four sons are enrolled in San Pedro School.

Mrs. Fisher, 42, is also a member of the Children's Home Society and a den leader for Cub Scout Pack 55. She is an area chairman for the Republican Party and is on the board of the U.S. Resin and Onyx Corp.

Mrs. Fisher has stressed the need for a "yardstick of judgment," or an "outline in writing as to the learning in a particular year or class. Parents will then be able to better judge if a child is getting the proper instruction to enable him to go to the next school level." She has also proposed that all students be given an aptitude test in their sophomore year and that the school system "follow up on what happens to students after they leave school."

She has urged improvement of the quality of education in the district high schools, saying that many students flunk entrance English exams at the College of Marin.

Mrs. Fisher said the district's spending program can be cut by using Golden Gate Bridge District buses for transporting students, assigning one principal to two schools and by "being thrifty."

She has declared that there would be less call for alternative schools if good teachers were placed in the "mainstream schools." She advocates grade penalties for tardiness and absenteeism and more vocational alternative programs.

PAUL K. McMULLEN, of 248 Knight Drive, has served on the board since last April when he was appointed to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Paul L. Jones. He is chairman of the San Rafael High School Human Relations Committee, former chairman of the school board's citizen advisory committee, past president of the Glenwood Parent-Teacher Association and a past member of the San Rafael High School Parent-Teacher Association.

McMullen, 41, holds a bachelors Degree from Whitman College and also attended Stanford University and the University of Oregon. He is a member of the board of the Golden Gate Chapter of the American Red Cross.

He has lived in the district for eight years and has two children, one enrolled in Davidson School and the other enrolled in San Rafael High School.

McMullen has stressed the teaching of basic skills, equipping students for the responsibilities of citizenship and offering them a wide spectrum of career opportunities. He has suggested that "career exploration opportunities" be offered to students at the elementary level and that local professional people be made available to show students what careers are like.

McMullen has proposed instructional aid cutbacks and an end to duplication in elementary and high school busing services and consideration of the possibility of closing one or two of the elementary district's small neighborhood schools in an effort to cut costs.

McMullen supports alternative schools "as long as they have clear-cut educational goals" and has proposed an alternative program based on career education. "But alternatives should not be permitted where the goals are poorly defined, or not consistent with the broad objectives laid down by the district."

LEWIS S. POLLOCK, of 9 Knoll Way, is a member of the San Rafael School System's citizen's advisory committee and was the committee's first chairman. He is a member of the Santa Venetia School and Terra Linda High School parent-teachers association and president of the American Society of Heating, Refrigeration and Air Conditioning Engineers.

Pollock, 43, holds a Bachelor's Degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Pittsburgh and is past president of the Nova Albion Parent-Teacher Association and the Los Ranchitos Home Improvement Association.

He has two daughters enrolled in Terra Linda High School and three sons enrolled in Santa Venetia School. He has lived in the district 10 years.

Pollock has expressed concern that the San Rafael school board is "gradually loosing the depth of experience" needed to evaluate school matters. He

Board incumbent

Six candidates vying for two seats on the San Rafael Board of Education have discussed a number of subjects during their campaigns, but have offered the widest spectrum of views on two issues: proposals to cut school costs, and alternative schools.

Candidates for the board are Suzanne L. Beittel, co-president of the Terra Linda Parent-Teacher Association; Gale B. Fisher, a member of the San Pedro Parent-Teacher Association board; incumbent Paul K. McMullen, a public relations director for Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co.; Lewis S. Pollock, a sales engineer for an air conditioning firm; Marie J. Sessi, legislative chairman of the Terra Linda and San Rafael Parent-Teacher Association councils, and Jeff D. Yarbrough, a senior at San Rafael High School.

McMullen, appointed to the board last year, is making his first bid for a full term. Board president Lawrence I. Kramer is not running for reelection.

The names of Joan Lisetor and Clarence W. Koop will also appear on the ballot, since they did not drop out of the race early enough to eliminate their names from the ballot listing.

MOST CANDIDATES generally agree that selection of a new superintendent is the major task facing the school system, and there has been little debate that the selection process should involve community input.

(Supt. John F. Plank will resign his post as of June 30 to accept a similar position with the Singapore-American School in Singapore.)

The San Rafael School System, which has 29,926 registered voters and an enrollment of about 8,500, embraces 12 elementary schools, two middle schools and two high schools.

Like other school districts, the San Rafael School System is faced with a financial squeeze in the wake of declining enrollment - especially in the elementary district where a current enrollment of 4,300 pupils is expected to dip by about 200 next year. Most candidates have endorsed cautiously SB 90, the state's new tax shift school financing law, and have offered a wide range of proposals for belt-tightening.

Candidates have also provided a wide spectrum of opinion on the issue of alternative school programs and the quality of education in the San Rafael School System.

Most candidates have agreed the lottery system is unfair, and that state tenure law needs revision. All oppose automatic promotion of students.

SUZANNE L. BEITTEL, of 675 Barberry Lane, is a member of the education committee of the Marin Association for Mental Health, the conservation committee of the Marin Audubon Society, Marin Conservation League, Marin Alternative and the San Rafael Citizens Advisory Committee on the General Plan.

Mrs. Beittel, 45, a volunteer in outdoor education at Santa Margarita School, is past president of the Dixie Coordinating Council and holds a Bachelor's Degree in chemistry from Antioch College. Her three children are enrolled in Terra Linda High School.

Throughout her campaign she has stressed her various activities in the Dixie School District, saying the San Rafael school board needs a Dixie representative since local children graduate into the San Rafael School System. "I feel that I bring representation and input from the Dixie District where I have lived 12 years and have been active in schools and the community."

She has urged a "close look at the budget" and consideration of the possibility of closing one or two of the elementary district's small neighborhood schools in an effort to cut costs.

Mrs. Beittel has said she has "positive feelings" about the San Rafael School System and endorses "a variety of educational techniques," including traditional and alternative programs.

"I would do almost anything" to spark student motivation, she said, adding students need a wide variety of educational programs. "I am pleased with the alternative schools in San Rafael."

School boards should be continually "tuned in" to the kinds of things going on in all district classrooms, she said.

GALE B. FISHER, of 7 Dunfries Terrace, has held board positions with the Womens Agricultural League of Northern California and the Peacock Gap Garden Club. She has been a stewardess, a union representative for a national airline, and a fashion representative for a number of women's publications. She has acted as an "in class" volunteer in the San Rafael School System.

She holds an agricultural degree from the University of Illinois and has lived in the district for 9 years. Her four sons are enrolled in San Pedro School.

Mrs. Fisher, 42, is also a member of the Children's Home Society and a den leader for Cub Scout Pack 55. She is an area chairman for the Republican Party and is on the board of the U.S. Resin and Onyx Corp.

Mrs. Fisher has stressed the need for a "yardstick of judgment," or an "outline in writing as to the learning in a particular year or class. Parents will then be able to better judge if a child is getting the proper instruction to enable him to go to the next school level." She has also proposed that all students be given an aptitude test in their sophomore year and that the school system "follow up on what happens to students after they leave school."

She has urged improvement of the quality of education in the district high schools, saying that many students flunk entrance English exams at the College of Marin.

Mrs. Fisher said the district's spending program can be cut by using Golden Gate Bridge District buses for transporting students, assigning one principal to two schools and by "being thrifty."

She has declared that there would be less call for alternative schools if good teachers were placed in the "mainstream schools." She advocates grade penalties for tardiness and absenteeism and more vocational alternative programs.

PAUL K. McMULLEN, of 248 Knight Drive, has served on the board since last April when he was appointed to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Paul L. Jones. He is chairman of the San Rafael High School Human Relations Committee, former chairman of the school board's citizen advisory committee, past president of the Glenwood Parent-Teacher Association and a past member of the San Rafael High School Parent-Teacher Association.

McMullen, 41, holds a bachelors Degree from Whitman College and also attended Stanford University and the University of Oregon. He is a member of the board of the Golden Gate Chapter of the American Red Cross.

He has lived in the district for eight years and has two children, one enrolled in Davidson School and the other enrolled in San Rafael High School.

McMullen has stressed the teaching of basic skills, equipping students for the responsibilities of citizenship and offering them a wide spectrum of career opportunities. He has suggested that "career exploration opportunities" be offered to students at the elementary level and that local professional people be made available to show students what careers are like.

McMullen has proposed instructional aid cutbacks and an end to duplication in elementary and high school busing services and consideration of the possibility of closing one or two of the elementary district's small neighborhood schools in an effort to cut costs.

McMullen supports alternative schools "as long as they have clear-cut educational goals" and has proposed an alternative program based on career education. "But alternatives should not be permitted where the goals are poorly defined, or not consistent with the broad objectives laid down by the district."

LEWIS S. POLLOCK, of 9 Knoll Way, is a member of the San Rafael School System's citizen's advisory committee and was the committee's first chairman. He is a member of the Santa Venetia School and Terra Linda High School parent-teachers association and president of the American Society of Heating, Refrigeration and Air Conditioning Engineers.

Pollock, 43, holds a Bachelor's Degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Pittsburgh and is past president of the Nova Albion Parent-Teacher Association and the Los Ranchitos Home Improvement Association.

He has two daughters enrolled in Terra Linda High School and three sons enrolled in Santa Venetia School. He has lived in the district 10 years.

Pollock has expressed concern that the San Rafael school board is "gradually loosing the depth of experience" needed to evaluate school matters. He said he can provide such experience since he has attended 85 per cent of all school board meetings over the past five years.

Pollock has urged better public relations between the school system and community, saying big flaps in the press sometimes overshadow the good things being done in the schools.

Pollock has proposed consideration of the possibility of closing one or two of the elementary district's small neighborhood schools as a means of belt-tightening, but feels that major budget cuts are not needed because the "situation is manageable."

He has expressed support of the alternative school concept, saying "we have to make sure our district is able to provide a flexible environment for the kids to learn in." He has called for "improved ways to evaluate the end product" of both traditional and alternative programs.

MARIE J. SESSI, of 195 Circle Road, is co-chairman of Girls State for the American Legion Auxiliary, vice president of the Blessed Sacrament Womens Guild, treasurer of the Las Gallinas Valley Master Plan Committee, a member of the Los Ranchitos Improvement Association and a room mother at Hartzell School.

Mrs. Sessi, 45, is part president of the Santa Venetia Parent-Teacher Association and has served in various capacities with the Red Cross, Gallinas Valley Little League and Childrens Home Society.

She is a graduate of Hadley Technical High School and has attended a number of night school courses. She has six children, enrolled in the College of Marin, Terra Linda High School, and Santa Venetia and Hartzell schools. She has lived in the district 20 years.

Mrs. Sessi has urged that students be tested at the beginning and end of each school year using national examinations. She has suggested that teachers "weed out" colleagues not doing their jobs and proposed that students grade teachers as a means of relevant feedback.

She has proposed that various administrative departments within the school system - such as custodial and grounds services - be merged to help cut costs.

Some alternative programs appear inadequate, according to Mrs. Sessi, because of loose scheduling and lack of discipline. She has urged that regular high school sites, and not off-campus locations, be used for alternative schools and has proposed that more vocational education aimed at "saleable skills" be established.

"What I endorse is education results. We are continually trying various innovations. I could only endorse these when it is shown to me that results have been equal or better than previous methods."

JEFF D. YARBROUGH, of 11 El Cerrito Avenue, helped found and is an active member of San Rafael High School's "new voter" program. He is an assistant manager of McDonald's restaurant in San Rafael.

Yarbrough, 18, has attended schools in Sacramento, is a graduate of Davidson School, and plans to attend college and law school after graduation from San Rafael High School.

He is a member of the school's marching band.

Yarbrough was forced to obtain a court order to place his name on the ballot since he had been ruled ineligible under the city charter to run for the board because he has lived in the city for only two years. The charter requires that candidates for elective office meet a three year residency requirement, though a proposal to amend the requirement to a one-year stipulation, as required by the courts, will appear on the April 17 ballot.

Yarbrough has stressed the need for student representation on the board during his campaign. "We need more young people in politics," he said, adding he can relate to fellow students and businessmen.

Yarbrough has proposed a program whereby high schools would become three-year facilities, including grades 10, 11 and 12. Such a program, according to Yarbrough, might help cut district costs, raise educational standards and allow teachers to relate to students on a high level.

He has suggested that the school system "cut back on most everything" in an across-the-board axing aimed at trimming fat from the budget.

Yarbrough has strongly supported the alternative school program, saying it "is crucial," and has declared that test grades don't necessarily reflect student abilities.

In Mill Valley, It Is Tradition Vs. Experimentation

JOHN G. ELIOT
An attorney

JOHN H. CUTLER

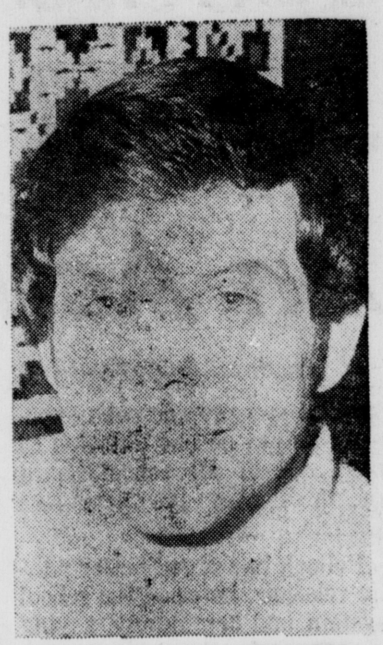
HAROLD A. DROB
Business manager



DR. THOMAS D. SPENCER
Psychology professor

Voters in the Mill Valley School District will be faced with clear choices when they go to the polls Tuesday to elect three trustees.

Three of the candidates — incumbents John G. Eliot and John H. Cutler and newcomer Cate Bauer — support present board policies regarding the amount of experimentation in the district versus the teaching of the three Rs.

Two of the remaining three hopefuls — Dr. Thomas D. Spencer and Eileen Bach-y-Rita — have contended the district fails to teach academic fundamentals and does not offer alternatives to parents who want their children to learn traditional skills. The sixth candidate, Harold A. Drob, falls somewhere in between.

Spencer and Mrs. Bach-y-Rita were two of about 1,300 persons who signed a petition in the fall of 1971 asking the board for a return to emphasis on traditional skills. Both spoke at a series of board meetings called to air the complaints.

TO BE FILLED in the election are seats held by Eliot and Cutler and a third board member, William P. Everts Jr., who decided not to run again. There are 15,675 registered voters in the district.

Facing the district in the years ahead is the consideration of merging the Mill Valley and Sausalito school districts. A small step toward that end was taken recently when the Mill Valley board voted to allow up to 40 students from Sausalito's Martin Luther King School to attend the Mill Valley Middle School next year.

Despite the future importance of the proposed merger, the most talked about issue in the race is the one involving experimentation versus tradition.

Candidates questioned by the Independent-Journal for the most part said it was important to offer a variety in education so that parents could place their children in the kinds of programs they wish. Mrs. Bach-y-Rita and Dr. Spencer, however, emphasized that point more strongly than did the other candidates.

The hopefuls, their backgrounds and some of their views are:

JOHN G. ELIOT, 41, was born in California and has lived 11 years in the Mill Valley district. He was graduated from Yale University with a Bachelor's Degree and received his law degree from Boalt Hall at the University of California.

Eliot, an attorney, lives at 21 Monte Vista Ave. with his wife, Merieo, and two children, one of whom attends Mill Valley public schools.

He was elected to his first term on the board four years ago and chosen chairman last July.

"I'm firmly committed to the idea that public schools exist to serve all children, not just particular types of children. Public education, along with parents, the community and peers, plays a role in the total learning process of the child. Hopefully, as a result of the total process, in which schools play an important part, our schools will turn out people who will become successful human beings."

More than anything else, Eliot said he would like to see "reconciliation between those who see schools simply as factories for instilling proficiency in certain academic skills and those who see the schools as playing a much larger role in the learning process."

Schools should do both, he said, "and I think our district does both well on the whole. I'm convinced that a lot of the apparent disagreement is more a matter of not fully understanding the other point of view rather than being any fundamental philosophical difference."

JOHN H. CUTLER, 38, is the other incumbent seeking reelection. He was elected to the board in 1969.

Cutler, of 186 Corte Madera Avenue, was born in New York and was graduated from Brown University in Providence, R.I., and from Harvard Law School. He also was a Fulbright Scholar at the University of Edinburgh.

He and his wife, Marge, have lived 10 years in the district and have four children, three of them attending district schools. He is a partner in a San Francisco law firm.

As a board member, he said, "I have worked hard to exercise fiscal diligence and objective judgment and to act as trustee for all the children in the district, rather than as a champion of special interest groups."

"There are many challenges which the next school board will face," he said. "The financial difficulties to the district inherent in the recently enacted SB 90 is certainly one of them. Others include the reconciliation of different factions in school community and our relations with neighboring school districts."

"In the past," he said, "our community has occasionally been preoccupied with educational jargon and abels, and arguments as to which of the various methods of instruction are preferable. I hope the entire school community has learned a lesson of tolerance from our past conflicts, and that different points of view (and teaching methods) will be tolerated by all."

CATE BAUER

It has been the district's policy "to encourage the individualization of instruction — focussing on the unique strengths, weaknesses and motivations of each child — while stressing the basic academics," said Cutler. "I believe this should continue to be our goal."

AROLD A. DROB, 50, was born in New York. He received a bachelor's degree in economics at the City College of New York and has done graduate work in business management and accounting there as well.

Drob is business manager of the Learning Resources Center at the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco. He and his wife, Pearl, an artist, live at 599 Marin Avenue, Tamalpais Valley, and have two daughters, both of whom attend schools in Mill Valley district. They have lived in the district 12 years.

The school board and school staff working with the community, can bring about "a significant improvement of learning in our Mill Valley Schools," Drob said.

"The board must provide the leadership that will bring us together in developing, carrying out and evaluating long-range educational programs employing all available resources to bring about more effective instruction."

"The overall system must allow for alternative approaches, with the relationship between teachers, parents and students of utmost importance. They must be working together toward common goals which can be identified and communicated if the child is to be most receptive to learning and the teacher able to alter the course of instruction to meet the individual child's needs."

If this is done, he said, "we can develop programs making the most effective use of available funds. We can make money work for quality, instead of being in a constant state of financial crisis and emergency.

Such planning and coordination "can only be effective in an atmosphere of trust based on open communication and information," he said. He suggested a weekly newspaper column and rotating school board meetings through district schools as ways to "begin improving communications and the exchange of information."

Drob said he has extra time to devote to school matters because he works a four-day week.

DR. THOMAS D. SPENCER, 36, is an associate professor of psychology at California State University, San Francisco, and director of the Child Study Center there.

Spencer holds a Bachelor's Degree from the University of Illinois and graduate degrees from Hollins College in Virginia and the Institute of Child Behavoir and Development, University of Iowa.

He and his wife, Gloria, have lived five years in the district and now reside at 429 Live Oak Drive, Tamalpais Valley. They have two daughters in district schools.

"With two daughters in the Mill Valley Schools, I have a strong personal as well as professional commitment to education," he said.

"In a diverse community such as Mill Valley, the school board must assure that all points of view are heard and given equal consideration. Overburdened taxpayers have the right and responsibility to insist that schools provide the best educational programs possible with available funds."

"Too much importance has been placed on the methods and techniques of teaching rather than on the ability, skill and enthusiasm of the teacher," he said. "The district must hire and retain teachers who will challenge children academically, expect excellence in the basic skills and assume the responsibility of teaching children respect for the rights and property of others as well as to be independent and socially responsive."

School board trustees, Spencer said, "must guide the district's programs in directions that will strengthen the trust and support of the entire community."

He said he is a candidate because "I feel the present board has focused too much emphasis on 'innovation' and in the process lost sight of those parents and teachers who place higher priorities on strong academic curricula, systematic evaluation of programs and personnel and establishment of behavioral standards aimed at teaching children respect for the rights and property of others. A more representative board could restore a balance in educational programs and gain the trust and support of the entire community."

EILEEN BACH-y-RITA, 31, is a housewife who lives at 208 Richardson Drive, Strawberry. She has lived in the school district 10 years, and has worked in the school system for seven years as a volunteer.

She and her husband, Paul, a San Francisco physician engaged in vision research, have two children, both of them attending Mill Valley Schools.

He and his wife, Marge, have lived 10 years in the district and have four children, three of them attending district schools. He is a partner in a San Francisco law firm.

As a board member, he said, "I have worked hard to exercise fiscal diligence and objective judgment and to act as trustee for all the children in the district, rather than as a champion of special interest groups."

"There are many challenges which the next school board will face," he said. "The financial difficulties to the district inherent in the recently enacted SB 90 is certainly one of them. Others include the reconciliation of different factions in school community and our relations with neighboring school districts."

"In the past," he said, "our community has occasionally been preoccupied with educational jargon and abels, and arguments as to which of the various methods of instruction are preferable. I hope the entire school community has learned a lesson of tolerance from our past conflicts, and that different points of view (and teaching methods) will be tolerated by all."

It has been the district's policy "to encourage the individualization of instruction — focussing on the unique strengths, weaknesses and motivations of each child — while stressing the basic academics," said Cutler. "I believe this should continue to be our goal."

AROLD A. DROB, 50, was born in New York. He received a bachelor's degree in economics at the City College of New York and has done graduate work in business management and accounting there as well.

Drob is business manager of the Learning Resources Center at the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco. He and his wife, Pearl, an artist, live at 599 Marin Avenue, Tamalpais Valley, and have two daughters, both of whom attend schools in Mill Valley district. They have lived in the district 12 years.

The school board and school staff working with the community, can bring about "a significant improvement of learning in our Mill Valley Schools," Drob said.

"The board must provide the leadership that will bring us together in developing, carrying out and evaluating long-range educational programs employing all available resources to bring about more effective instruction."

"The overall system must allow for alternative approaches, with the relationship between teachers, parents and students of utmost importance. They must be working together toward common goals which can be identified and communicated if the child is to be most receptive to learning and the teacher able to alter the course of instruction to meet the individual child's needs."

If this is done, he said, "we can develop programs making the most effective use of available funds. We can make money work for quality, instead of being in a constant state of financial crisis and emergency.

Such planning and coordination "can only be effective in an atmosphere of trust based on open communication and information," he said. He suggested a weekly newspaper column and rotating school board meetings through district schools as ways to "begin improving communications and the exchange of information."

Drob said he has extra time to devote to school matters because he works a four-day week.

DR. THOMAS D. SPENCER, 36, is an associate professor of psychology at California State University, San Francisco, and director of the Child Study Center there.

Spencer holds a Bachelor's Degree from the University of Illinois and graduate degrees from Hollins College in Virginia and the Institute of Child Behavoir and Development, University of Iowa.

He and his wife, Gloria, have lived five years in the district and now reside at 429 Live Oak Drive, Tamalpais Valley. They have two daughters in district schools.

"With two daughters in the Mill Valley Schools, I have a strong personal as well as professional commitment to education," he said.

"In a diverse community such as Mill Valley, the school board must assure that all points of view are heard and given equal consideration. Overburdened taxpayers have the right and responsibility to insist that schools provide the best educational programs possible with available funds."

"Too much importance has been placed on the methods and techniques of teaching rather than on the ability, skill and enthusiasm of the teacher," he said. "The district must hire and retain teachers who will challenge children academically, expect excellence in the basic skills and assume the responsibility of teaching children respect for the rights and property of others as well as to be independent and socially responsive."

School board trustees, Spencer said, "must guide the district's programs in directions that will strengthen the trust and support of the entire community."

He said he is a candidate because "I feel the present board has focused too much emphasis on 'innovation' and in the process lost sight of those parents and teachers who place higher priorities on strong academic curricula, systematic evaluation of programs and personnel and establishment of behavioral standards aimed at teaching children respect for the rights and property of others. A more representative board could restore a balance in educational programs and gain the trust and support of the entire community."

EILEEN BACH-y-RITA, 31, is a housewife who lives at 208 Richardson Drive, Strawberry. She has lived in the school district 10 years, and has worked in the school system for seven years as a volunteer.

She and her husband, Paul, a San Francisco physician engaged in vision research, have two children, both of them attending Mill Valley Schools.

"of being a very healthy district," she said, "but there are a few weak spots to be recognized and improved."

She cited what she said was a "yearly increase of students entering Tamalpais High who are poorly prepared in reading." These students come from the Mill Valley district and others, she said.

Not only that, she said, but "children entering the middle school are poorly prepared in the technical aspects of writing, spelling and grammar as well as in math skills. When middle school teachers have to concentrate on teaching these skills that should have been learned in the previous five years, then something is wrong."

Mrs. Bach-y-Rita said she does not believe, "as is being more and more frequently implied, that there is 'something wrong' with these children." Instead, she suggested there may be "something wrong" with the administration of the teaching program.

"One of the big problems is that often the responsibility of teaching has been shifted from the teacher's shoulders to the child's," she said. "Many children neither are ready or willing or trained to take on such a responsibility. Furthermore, they need to be guided, motivated, inspired and challenged to do their best by competent, well-trained adults."

As a trustee, Mrs. Bach-y-Rita said she would "want us to use every possible means of evaluation (of the district program) that we could get our hands on. I think that we urgently need on the board a voice which will question and analyze the pros and cons of every educational plan in order to prevent problems in them and to assure that they will help the basic program, not deteriorate it."

CATE BAUER, 31, of 290 Cascade Drive, is a housewife who has lived more than 12 years in the district. She has been a volunteer worker in the district for seven years.

Mrs. Bauer and her husband, Karel T. Bauer, have three chidren attending district schools. She was born in New York.

The major problem in the Mill Valley schools, she said, is "how to accommodate the diversity of the community within the public school system. The answer: to provide alternatives within the educational philosophy of the district, alternatives that are real to the people who have different desires for the education of their children."

Another issue, she said, is that of "trust among parents, educators, the board and other citizens of the community who pay school taxes. As someone who is here in Mill Valey daily and who will be able to consult with all the different people, and as someone who keeps trying to keep her mind open, I feel I can make a viable contribution to the board."

Teachers, she said, "are really where it's at. We must work to identify effective teachers, attract them, keep them and encourage them to grow. As parents and educators we must get together and define what we all consider effective teachers and then make it a high-priority budget item to provide more inservice training for them."

Mrs. Bauer said she considers year-round schools "an exciting possibility" which should be studied and said community involvement in the schools is "a very helpful thing" and "the more the community and the schools work together toward common goals the better off our kids and all of us will be."

A Field Of Six In San Anselmo

Three Vacancies Will Be Filled By Voters Tuesday

JUDITH L. VALLAS
Housewife, mother

By MARY LEYDECKER

Voters in the San Anselmo School District will have a choice Tuesday of six candidates for three vacancies on the school board.

Only one of the incumbents, Millard R. Morgen, whose terms expire chose to run again. The other vacancies are the seats now held by Franklin C. Latcham and Mary H. Olive.

San Anselmo schools, like many others in the county, are learning to live with a continually declining enrollment along with stringent tax limitations.

One of the questions on which the six hopefuls are divided is whether or not the district's two junior high schools, Red Hill and Hidden Valley, should be combined.

Here are the candidates' backgrounds and some of their views:

CHARLES H. DAIBER, 62, is a salesman for Montgomery Ward in Corte Madera. He and his wife, LaVaur live at 70 Ridge Road. They have a grown daughter.

Daiber, a native of New York, attended Rutgers University and has a degree from the Insurance Institute of America.

He has done volunteer work for the March of Dimes and is a member of Marvelous Marin Lodge, Sons of Italy.

When he filed for election, Daiber told the Independent-Journal that he "got interested in local politics when I saw the election announcement in the newspaper."

Daiber has said that he is "basically in accord" with the virtues of teaching reading, writing and arithmetic as they are "important for later life."

He also has said that, while "not in favor of laxity of discipline in schools," he does believe "there should be latitude for social changes as they occur . . ."

Daiber told the Independent-Journal he favors "structured classrooms" over the "alternative school concept" and that he thinks pupils should be promoted only when they deserve to be unless there are "unusual circumstances."

As for merging Red Hill and Hidden Valley schools, Daiber thinks no move should be made until further study of the matter is made and expert advice obtained.

OLIVER L. HARLE, 52, is a senior research chemist for Chevron Research Co. in Richmond. He and his wife, Nancy, and their two children live at 21 Echo Court.

Although this is Harle's first try for elective office, he made a bid for appointment to the San Anselmo Planning Commission last year.

He was a member of the San Anselmo schools study committee on regular programs last year has served on the city's citizens committee on zoning and housing and another one on the general plan.

He holds a Bachelor's Degree from the University of Texas, his home state, and a doctorate from the University of California.

Harle foresees a challenge to the district in maintaining current programs under tight financial restrictions. He doesn't see a tax rate cut unless there is considerable enrollment drop.

Harle believes such approaches as alternative classes and "on-location" programs should be encouraged if they meet specific needs but not without adequate evaluation and not at the cost of other programs.

Harle has adivsed against the board making decisions during crisis situations and has suggested a planning group of parents, teachers and students to make suggestions to the board on directions the district should take.

ROBERTA S. MICHELS, 33, is a dental hygienist and housewife. She lives with her husband, Spencer, a television news reporter, and their three sons, one a pre-schooler and the others pupils at San Anselmo schools.

Mrs. Michels has been a volunteer in the classroom and has used her dental hygiene training in several classroom presentations.

She is secretary of the San Anselmo Human Rights Mini-Board and initiated and participated in a dental health program for children enrolled in Head Start.

She also served a year as San Anselmo's representative on the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council board, consistently advocating for fiscal responsibility for the now defunct agency.

Mrs. Michels has advocated using skills and talents of members of the community in the classroom and better communication between parents, teachers, administrators and board members.

Mrs. Michels also has suggested that board members spend more time in the schools and in the community and that parents should be encouraged to attend board meetings, possibly by sending memos home with their children.

MILLARD R. MORGEN, 49, is a professor of history at College of Marin. He and his wife, Patricia, have four children, three of whom are still at home and the other is in college.

The family home is at 39 Hawthorne Ave.

Morgen holds a Bachelor's Degree from San Francisco State College and a master's from the University of California, Berkeley.

Morgen was appointed to fill a vacancy on the board last fall and is standing election now for the first time.

Morgen has said that schools should be concerned with mental health as well as scholastic achievement and placed mental health as a first priority, saying without it there can be no achievement.

Morgen also has advocated seeking out and utilizing talents of the staff as well as pinpointing weaknesses in the system and staff, when they exist, in order to correct them.

The candidate acknowledged that "taxes are too high," but blamed the situation of an "inequitable distribution of state monies" and said that "San Anselmo can't reduce taxes unless it reduces services and these are all reasonable."

GARTH M. STANTON, 39, is also a senior research chemist for Chevron Research Co. in Richmond. He and his wife, Marion and their five children live at 100 Meadowcroft Drive.

Stanton is chairman of the San Anselmo citizens advisory committee on streets and traffic and was one of the coordinating chairmen of Brookside School Association last year. He also served on one of six advisory committees to the school board last year.

He holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Detroit and a doctorate from Purdue University.

Stanton called communication in the district "better than in some districts but not good enough." He suggested a monthly district newsletter containing notice and discussion of new policies and programs as well as workshops on topics of interest.

Stanton said that he is not so concerned with whether so-called alternative programs or more traditional classroom are used, as long as the results are good. "The teacher is everything" in the learning situation, he said.

He also said he thought that the line should be held on expenditures in the district since enrollment is decreasing and taxes already at a high level.

JUDITH L. VALLAS, 33, is a housewife and mother of two young sons. Her husband, James, is a state bridge engineer. The family home is at 260 Brookside Drive.

Mrs. Vallas is a graduate of the University of Hawaii and was a department executive with the Emporium for five years.

She is chairman of the Brookside School Association, serves on the Stull Bill Coordinating Committee and has been a member of the citizen advisory committee on special education. She also has been a volunteer aide in the school educationally handicapped program.

Mrs. Vallas believes that the school board should establish goals and a plan of direction in order that priorities for curriculum and facilities may be established in light of declining enrollment and loss of financial support.

She also advocates planning how programs such as remedial reading, classes for the educationally handicapped and mentally gifted can be maintained when state funds are reduced or eliminated.

Polling places in Marin County for Tuesday's school trustee and coinciding special district elections will be open from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m.

Four Of The Five Bolinas-Stinson Trusteeships Up For Grabs

By PAT ANGLE

Four of five seats on the Bolinas-Stinson School District board will be up for grabs Tuesday when district voters go to the polls to choose new trustees from a field of 10 candidates.

Two incumbents — Jessie Reasoner and John W. Harris — have announced they will not run for reelection and one trustee, John G. Barrow, has resigned. Incumbent Michael E. Aitken is seeking a second term.

The only board position not up for election is that of President Charles E. Hancock.

Seven persons are competing for the seats now held by Aitken, Reasoner and Harris. The candidates are: Aitken, Carol A. Flynn, Paul Mann, O'Brien Young, Carolyn Brown, Michael D. Sanford and Diana L. Farnsworth. All are trying for a full-term on the board.

Seeking to replace Barrow and complete the remainder of his term which expires in June 30, 1975, are: Susan F. Washington, Peter B. Weston and Russell Riviere.

The only concrete issue which has surfaced in the campaign is the 50-cent tax rate increase which the district will ask voters to approve next week.

Most of the board hopefuls interviewed indicated they oppose the tax measure at this time —for various reasons. Only one — Aitken —supported the proposal.

Proponents argue that the district's revenues, already cut by more than $10,000 through land lost to the Point Reyes National Seashore, will decline even further when the impact of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area is fully assessed.

They fear that SB 90, the new state tax shift measure, will freeze district revenues at their current, depleted level, and that existing programs will have to be cut as expenses increase and income remains the same.

Opponents, for the most part, contend that the tax proposal is being presented too soon, before the district actually knows just what the effect the land losses and the tax shift will have.

The candidates and their views are as follows:

CAROL A. FLYNN, 31, is a Stinson Beach pediatrician who has lived in the district four years.

A graduate of Marywood College in Pennsylvania with a bachelor's degree in biology, she received her M.D. degree from Temple University in Philadelphia. She interned at Harkness Community Hospital in San Francisco and completed her residency at Mount Zion Hospital.

She and her husband, George, also a physician, live at 291 Buena Vista Street. The couple has one child, a three-week-old girl.

Dr. Flynn said she decided to seek election to the board "because my child is going to go to that school and I'm interested in how it is being run."

If elected, she would work "to provide the best possible fundamental education for the children." She thinks more school time should be devoted to subjects such as reading, math and language arts.

"There are some people who have suggested replacing some of the teachers (at Bolinas School) with teacher's aides because it costs less," Dr. Flynn said. "I'm opposed to this."

She favors the tax increase "because I think the district needs the money."

O'BRIEN YOUNG, 35, is a musician and photographer who has lived in the district since August of 1972, moving here from Santa Barbara.

She is a graduate of Radcliffe College, with a bachelor's degree in English.

She and her husband, Landon, director of the Community Music Center in San Francisco, reside at 275 Dogwood Road. The couple has two children, both of whom attend Bolinas School.

If elected, Mrs. Young would use her interest and experience in fine and creative arts to bring more cultural events — particularly music and the performing arts — to the school.

The candidate believes the district could make better use of "the fantastic variety of skills and talents" of people in the community, by encouraging them to share their abilities with the children. "That way we could add to the variety of our educational program without increasing the expense," she said.

Mrs. Young admits to "mixed feelings" about the tax measure and does not think its passage "terribly crucial" to the district. "We have one of the highest expenditures per student in Marin County and we should be able to use that money more effectively," she said, but added: "On the other hand, the district hasn't asked for a tax increase in 10 years."

She said she decided to run "because this is a school I find exciting and I would like to be a part of it."

MICHAEL E. AITKEN, 27, is a deputy sheriff and a 17-year resident of Bolinas, where he lives with his wife and four children.

Aitken, a student in police science at the College of Marin, is seeking his first full term on the board. He was first elected in February of 1971 to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Trustee Erik Lund.

If his bid for another term is successful, Aitken said, he will try to insure that Bolinas School remains a "facility for learning, not just one big baby-sitting operation.

"I don't want to see the school fall back to where it was two years ago, with all the conflicts" between supporters of traditional education and those who prefer a more free-learning atmosphere, he said.

The candidate said he doesn't "go in for campaign promises, because most of them don't pan out.

Polling places in Marin County for Tuesday's school trustee and coinciding special district elections will be open from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m.

"I'll just do the best I can," he added.

MICHAEL D. SANFORD, who has lived in Stinson Beach since last September, is an attorney for the Constitutional Revisional Commission in San Francisco.

The 37-year-old candidate holds a law degree from the University of California at Berkeley and a bachelor's degree in liberal arts from St. John's College in Maryland. In addition, he had done graduate work in sociology at UC.

Sanford is married and the father of two children who attend school in the district.

He is chairman of Stinson Beach Projects, a community action organization.

Sanford does not favor the tax increase, saying the district does not yet know enough about the effects of SB 90 to make a decision as to whether more money is needed.

In addition, he said, the tax shift was designed to provide tax relief for homeowners and "I think it is a mistake for local government to use it as an opportunity to increase taxes." He believes the increase would hurt people on fixed incomes in the community.

As a lawyer, Sanford thinks he could help the board "keep its feet on the ground in relation to various state and federal programs and requirements."

He is not committed to "any particular educational philosophy." Rather, he would like to see the school offer "a broad range of alternative educational approaches, from informal, open classroom programs to traditional, high achievement teaching techniques."

DIANA L. FARNSWORTH is a pre-law student at University of California, Berkeley, who has worked as a teacher's aide at Bolinas School and has been active in school activities, including fundraising and a parent survey.

She is a Montessori-trained teacher who has lived in the district since 1966 and resides at 176 Rosewood Road with her husband, Philo —an inventor and designer —and four children, one of whom attends Bolinas School.

If elected, she said, she would work to increase parent involvement in the school. "I feel many parents are alienated from the school; they don't know quite what's going on even though they need to," she said.

She would encourage parents to come to the school and talk with the teachers and staff. "I think they will come if they know the school people are receptive to their ideas and concerned with their problems."

Because of the small size of the district, Mrs. Farnsworth believes it should be possible to give "each child what he or she needs" in the way of individual attention and instruction.

She thinks that gifted children at the school, as well as those with handicaps, are not given sufficient attention and will seek to remedy that.

Mrs. Farnsworth would also work to bring "the many talented people in the community" into the school and its programs. " This town is so rich; we have so many talented people who aren't being utilized and they could be."

She would also like to see some type of educational master plan developed for the district and opposes the proposed tax increase.

"I think we should do more with our present income than we have done in the past," she said. "I am certain there are ways we can save money."

Mrs. Farnsworth said she could bring to the board a love and concern for all children. "When we see the tremendous possibilities in our own children, we have to translate them to all children and I try to do that," she said.

PAUL MANN, 31, is a plumbing contractor and a partner in the Bolinas firm of M and M Plumbing.

Beofre moving to Bolinas, he studied engineering at Pennsylvania State University and was in the Merchant Marine.

He and his wife and three children live at 130 Evergreen Road. The couple's oldest daughter is a student at Bolinas school. His wife is expecting a fourth child.

"I'm going to have four of them going to that school, so I'd like to keep an eye on what's going on," he said to explain his reason for seeking election.

"It's a good school, headed in the right direction and I think all the people there are good people."

Mann said he is "not on any one side" with regard to educational philosophy and would keep an open mind in any conflicts which might arise between those who favor traditional education and those who prefer more progressive methods.

"I will look at each issue as it comes along, try to see all sides and make my decision in an unbiased fashion," he said.

Mann is opposed to a tax increase at this time, believing that district homeowners should not be burdened with more property taxes and that it is too soon to tell if the district will need the additional funds.

"I think more study is needed," he said. "If, at the end of the fiscal year we're in debt and it looks like the situation might be worse next year, then I might go for it, if that's the only way the money can be raised.

He too would like to see more community involvement in the school, more persons devoting their "time, energy and skills" to the district's educational efforts.

Four Of The Five Bolinas-Stinson Trusteeships Up For Grabs

By PAT ANGLE

Four of five seats on the Bolinas-Stinson School District board will be up for grabs Tuesday when district voters go to the polls to choose new trustees from a field of 10 candidates.

Two incumbents — Jessie Reasoner and John W. Harris — have announced they will not run for reelection and one trustee, John G. Barrow, has resigned. Incumbent Michael E. Aitken is seeking a second term.

The only board position not up for election is that of President Charles E. Hancock.

Seven persons are competing for the seats now held by Aitken, Reasoner and Harris. The candidates are: Aitken, Carol A. Flynn, Paul Mann, O'Brien Young, Carolyn Brown, Michael D. Sanford and Diana L. Farnsworth. All are trying for a full-term on the board.

Seeking to replace Barrow and complete the remainder of his term which expires in June 30, 1975, are: Susan F. Washington, Peter B. Weston and Russell Riviere.

The only concrete issue which has surfaced in the campaign is the 50-cent tax rate increase which the district will ask voters to approve next week.

Most of the board hopefuls interviewed indicated they oppose the tax measure at this time —for various reasons. Only one — Aitken —supported the proposal.

Proponents argue that the district's revenues, already cut by more than $10,000 through land lost to the Point Reyes National Seashore, will decline even further when the impact of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area is fully assessed.

They fear that SB 90, the new state tax shift measure, will freeze district revenues at their current, depleted level, and that existing programs will have to be cut as expenses increase and income remains the same.

Opponents, for the most part, contend that the tax proposal is being presented too soon, before the district actually knows just what the effect the land losses and the tax shift will have.

The candidates and their views are as follows:

CAROL A. FLYNN, 31, is a Stinson Beach pediatrician who has lived in the district four years.

A graduate of Marywood College in Pennsylvania with a bachelor's degree in biology, she received her M.D. degree from Temple University in Philadelphia. She interned at Harkness Community Hospital in San Francisco and completed her residency at Mount Zion Hospital.

She and her husband, George, also a physician, live at 291 Buena Vista Street. The couple has one child, a three-week-old girl.

Dr. Flynn said she decided to seek election to the board "because my child is going to go to that school and I'm interested in how it is being run."

If elected, she would work "to provide the best possible fundamental education for the children." She thinks more school time should be devoted to subjects such as reading, math and language arts.

"There are some people who have suggested replacing some of the teachers (at Bolinas School) with teacher's aides because it costs less," Dr. Flynn said. "I'm opposed to this."

She favors the tax increase "because I think the district needs the money."

O'BRIEN YOUNG, 35, is a musician and photographer who has lived in the district since August of 1972, moving here from Santa Barbara.

She is a graduate of Radcliffe College, with a bachelor's degree in English.

She and her husband, Landon, director of the Community Music Center in San Francisco, reside at 275 Dogwood Road. The couple has two children, both of whom attend Bolinas School.

If elected, Mrs. Young would use her interest and experience in fine and creative arts to bring more cultural events — particularly music and the performing arts — to the school.

The candidate believes the district could make better use of "the fantastic variety of skills and talents" of people in the community, by encouraging them to share their abilities with the children. "That way we could add to the variety of our educational program without increasing the expense," she said.

Mrs. Young admits to "mixed feelings" about the tax measure and does not think its passage "terribly crucial" to the district. "We have one of the highest expenditures per student in Marin County and we should be able to use that money more effectively," she said, but added: "On the other hand, the district hasn't asked for a tax increase in 10 years."

Water Board Race Poses Key Question

Should Supply Be Limited To Control Development?

Residents of the Marin Municipal Water District's Division Four will have the chance to decide if they want the district to restrict population growth by limiting water supply when they go to the polls Tuesday to choose a representative to the MMWD board.

There are 17,019 registered voters in Division Four.

Three candidates, with diverse views on that controversial question, are seeking to replace Director Eugene A. Miller — who resigned last November — as representative for the division which includes Mill Valley, and parts of Tamalpais Valley, Corte Madera and Kentfield.

Dr. L. Martin Griffin, physician and conservationist, believes that limiting supply may be the only way to curb population, since he thinks the proposed county-wide plan may not be effective in stopping overdevelopment.

Two other contenders for the board post, Jerome C. Hauke, a civil engineer and former Mill Valley city councilman, and Ross S. Shade, a certified public accountant, contend that planning and responsibility for limiting development should be left to the county's planning agencies.

THE QUESTION of a moratorium on new connections — particularly for large developments — has also been one of the major campaign issues.

The district board has considered a connection ban on at least three occasions — always before large audiences —, but the proposal has failed to pass.

There has been considerable controversy on that subject among district residents, with one group believing that the district is facing a water shortage and should curtail new connections and another which contends there is enough water to grant all new services until additional supply is found.

Since Miller's resignation, the four-man MMWD board has often split 2-2 on the granting of pipeline extensions for new services. Two directors, Jack R. Felson and Ronald T. Stafford, have voted against most applications for extensions, while Directors Jordan L. Martinell Jr. and John M. MacPhail Jr. have favored them.

Also at issue is the fate of the North Marin intertie which would bring between 1,000 and 4,000 acre feet of Russian River water into the district each year.

In 1972, the board approved the intertie, then stalled it indefinitely after Miller resigned by deadlocking 2-2 on a contract to obtain the water.

The campaigners have also addressed themselves to waste water recycling, another "hot topic" in the district.

Some believe that the MMWD should immediately begin planning to recycle water for domestic use. Others believe it to be a good idea whose time has not yet come.

A biography of each contestant, together with a summary of his views:

DR. L. MARTIN GRIFFIN, a Kentfield internist, is a native of Utah and has lived in Marin County since 1949.

The 53-year-old candidate is a co-founder of the Audubon Canyon Ranch, past president of the Audubon Society, a co-founder of the Marin Environmental Forum, a founding director of the Louise Boyd Museum and a member of the Marin Conservation League and the Sierra Club.

He holds a Bachelor's Degree in zoology from the University of California at Berkeley and obtained his M.D. Degree and did post-graduate work at Stanford Medical School.

Griffin, former chief of medicine at Marin General and Ross Hospitals and co-founder of the Ross Valley Clinic, left his medical practice in 1971 to return to U.C. where he obtained a Master's Degree in public health, specializing in environmental health sciences.

He now devotes his time to working for a better environment in many different ways, including serving as a member of the environmental quality committee of the city-county planning council and lobbying for passage of Sen. Peter Behr's Wild Rivers Bill while a delegate to the Eel River Water Council.

Griffin is currently chairman of the Tomales Bay land acquisition for the Audubon Ranch and has been instrumental in establishing seven new wildlife sanctuaries in the area.

He has also served as chairman for the Tomales Bay Environmental study for the Conservation Foundation in Washington, D.C., an organization formed to protect the bay.

In addition, Griffin helped to establish the 600-acre Richardson Bay Sanctuary in 1969 by obtaining a gift of land on the preserve's eastern border.

He was one of those who spearheaded the drive to save Kent Island in Bolinas Lagoon, and worked for establishment of a county park around the lagoon. He has been involved in fighting three attempts to bring freeways from East to West Marin.

He and his wife, Mary, a physician with the Marin County Health Department, live at 313 Goodhill Road. The couple has four grown daughters.

Griffin believes the county should live within the limits of its own water resources and is opposed to importing water from outside to Marin. He thinks the district should work toward obtaining water of the highest quality locally and providing better service for its customers.

He said he will use his public health training "to encourage reclamation, reuse and eventual recycling" of MMWD water if he is elected to the district board.

The candidate is convinced that the water district is facing a serious water shortage and will continue to do so until new supplies are found.

As a MMWD director, Griffin said he would vote against any new connections for large developments and grant water only to small projects — like single-family homes — until a new supply is developed.

The district should use the legal means it now has at its disposal to help implement the goals of the county-wide plan, particularly the growth control objectives, according to Griffin.

One of the tools he mentioned is a new amendment to the government code which makes it positive for the MMWD to take a planning role for all water-related resources, such as marshes, estuaries and watersheds. The new regulation could permit the district to have an official voice in dealing with development proposed for these areas, he said.

Griffin said there are currently efforts to undermine the county-wide plan, both by some cities and development interests. Consequently, he thinks that refusing to expand water supply past a certain point may be "the only way left to halt overdevelopment and unreasonable growth in Marin" and insure that the plan's population goals are met.

Griffin does not favor the North Marin intertie as a means of bringing water to serve current users and provide for a small amount of additional development. He thinks the money for the intertie should be used to develop a firm supply from sources in the county.

JEROME C. HAUKE, former Mill Valley city councilman, is a 15-year resident of Marin and the district.

He is a planning engineer for the State Department of Public Works and holds a Bachelor's Degree in civil engineering from the University of Wisconsin.

The 37-year-old candidate is a member of the Marin County Disaster Council, the Marin Conservation League and the Sierra Club, and also serves as an alternate to the advisory committee for Improvement District A (District A was formed by the MMWD board to plan for a consolidated waste disposal system for Southern Marin.)

He and his wife, Mary Ellen, and their six children reside at 53 Millay Place in Mill Valley.

Hauke served on the city council from 1968 to 1972 and was on the Mill Valley Parks and Recreation Commission from 1963 to 1968. He is a former member of the Flood Control Advisory Board, Zone 3.

An Important Water District Election

In 1968, he was named "Man of the Year" by the Mill Valley Jaycees.

He sees his engineering background as a strong point in his campaign for the seat. "There are no engineers on the board now," he explained. "It would be valuable to have a member who could translate engineering items that come up, to provide a practical approach to matters.

His platform is basically one of concilation. "What is needed is someone who can work with both sides," he said. "I'm not tied to any narrow ideology and would like to tie the board together. It's really split now."

If elected, Hauke would attempt to restore public confidence in the MMWD board by "supplying the voting public with complete and honest data so that may make informed decisions on. . .proposed solutions to our water problems."

He would also work to investigate methods of developing additional water supply, and to provide better water pressure in all areas of the district and improved fire mains. He would also like to explore the feasibility of waste water reclamation of district water.

Hauke does not believe it is the water district's function to control population by limiting water supply. "It is the duty of the water district board to coordinate and cooperate with planning agencies, not compete with them," he said.

He does not think there is immediate danger of a districtwide water shortage and would not vote for a moratorium on new connections until the fate of the bond issue for new supply is decided by voters, probably in November.

Hauke would consider importing water from the Russian River if no Marin sources can be found. "Just because water crosses a county line it doesn't become tainted," he said.

ROSS S. SHADE, a certified public accountant, lives in Mill Valley and has been a resident of the county since 1954.

He holds a Bachlor's and Master's Degree in business administration from the University of California at Berkeley and a law degree from the University of San Francisco.

The 45-year-old candidate is a partner in the San Francisco accounting firm of Shade Faisst and Co. and was formerly a partner in a large national CPA firm.

He is a member of the Commonwealth Club, San Francisco Urban Renewal Planning Associates (SPUR), the California Society of Certified Public Accountants, the Americans Institute of CPA's and the Sierra Club. In addition, he is an associate member of the Municipal Finance Officers Association.

Shade, his wife and two daughters reside at 219 Oakdale Avenue.

He believes that the MMWD should leave growth control to the county's planning agencies, but thinks that district voters themselves will impose some restraints on unlimited water supply which might stimulate unlimited growth by voting down bond issues.

"I don't think the voters want unlimited development and we (THE MMWD board) are going to have to give them what they want," he said.

Shade is convinced that recycling of waste water for irrigation and domestic use will not be feasible "for many years." Consequently, he does not think the district's planning for consolidated sewer facilities should include recycling at this time.

The candidate indicated he would oppose a ban on new connections — at least at this time. He said he might consider it if district voters turn down the next bond issue to finance supply. But, even then, he would explrore other alternatives for obtaining water before voting for a moratorium.

The district's top priority goal should be to find a feasible solution to its water supply problems, he said.

Shade would have no qualms about importing water from outside Marin, but would prefer to seek sources inside the county first, "because it may cost less to get water locally."

He is opposed to the North Marin intertie because that pipeline would not meet all of the district's future water needs or solve long-term water supply deficiencies.

If elected, Shade said he could contribute a firm knowledge of business management to the MMWD board's operations. "I would be able to determine if the district is complying with good business standards and state regulation," he said.

Seeing Bali By Bicycle

The Travel Pages

By RALPH HUBLEY

SANUR, Bali, Indonesia — Cycling through the lush Balinesian countryside and small villages is worth every ounce of pedal power exerted. It brings the rider close to a pleasant way of life still found in Bali.

The crowing of roosters and melodious tones of tropical birds; laughter coming from just over the wall of a compound; crickets chirping their endless chorus; the excited "Hello-Hi" of countless children playing along the roadside; the friendly wave of a farmer as he looks up briefly from plodding behind a water buffalo — there are the rewards of the cyclist in Bali.

They are much more pleasing than the chatter of the marketplace where most tourists gather.

IN THE WARM sunshine of the island it may be difficult to pull away from the comforts of beach and pool offered by an increasing number of hotels here in the Sanur resort area and the only other major resort area at Kuta nearer the airport. But there are not the places to find Bali at its best.

Those who do take off seem satisfied with touring the countryside by taxi or microbus, stopping to visit temples, to watch a shadow show or a trance dance, or to bargain with sellers of batik, silver and woodcarvings..

The many Japanese visiting Bali these days usually rent motorcycles (made in Japan) and roar down the roads. To enjoy the sights and sounds of Bali, one must go a slower pace.

IF A BICYCLE sounds too strenuous the visitor might like to try the "dokar" — Balinese for horse and buggy. These can be rented in Denpasar.

But for me, I wanted to try the Bali bikeway. Although Jogjakarta retains good claim to its title of "Bicycle Capital of Southeast Asia," Bali comes a close second.

Renting an easy-to-pedal, German-made Gazelle from the Bali Beach Hotel at which I was staying, I strapped on my flight bag, plopped on my old tennis hat, and joined the solid stream of Bali cyclists which seems reluctant to give more than half the road even to constantly honking trucks and tour buses.

BEFORE I KNEW it I was riding in formation, in ever-changing patterns, sometimes four abreast, moving at a slow but steady speed.

Sometimes I would be riding next to a student with a book bag over his shoulder. Then it would be a man in a coolie hat with large baskets crammed with sticks balanced on each side of his bike. Or it might be an elegantly dressed Balinese woman with her head held high as if on a royal steed. The stream of two-wheelers would part briefly for an oncoming pedestrian brave enough to buck this constant current.

I can definitely state that this area of Bali is not the place for walkers.

BUT FOR CYCLISTS it's a different story, especially when swinging away from the town areas. The southern part of the island is quite flat, so 10- and 15-speed bicycles are unnecessary. And even on the hottest day, the breeze created by the bike's motion makes the cycler wish to go on and on.

Which I did. After about two hours I found myself 20 miles away from my hotel, and darkness was suddenly upon me. It was then I discovered my lights were not working.

But before I describe my nocturnal return I would like to describe some of the endearing incidents that occurred that afternoon along these country roads.

IT DOESN'T TAKE long for the mass of cyclists to thin out once you head toward rural areas. But that doesn't mean you will be alone on the road, slightly elevated above the paddies where some of the finest varieties of rice in Southeast Asia are grown. I kept finding teen-age riders appearing beside me. They would ride along for about a mile and then wave goodbye. After a few minutes another would appear.

It seems they jumped on their bicycles when they saw me go by.

My tentative companions had one thing in common — they wanted to carry on a conversation in English. Each began by stating he didn't speak English very well and then proceeded with these stock phrases:

"From where are you?"

"How many children have you?"

"How many sons?"

"Do you enjoy yourself in Bali?"

"What do you like most about Bali?"

WHEN I WOULD ask them the same questions they seemed surprised. "How many children have you" brought head-shaking laughter. One 19-year-old explained that he didn't plan to marry for another 10 years.

At an intersection near the port of Benoa my progress was halted by a herd of cattle which filled the road "from wall to wall." There were about 200 steers with about 100 men and boys leading them with ropes. One Balinesian "cowboy" spotted me taking pictures and explained that they were headed for Hong Kong on a cattle boat waiting in the harbor.

Intersections usually have an island in the center with a statue assigned to "ward off the evil spirits of accidents." As I sat there making notes, two youngsters were leaning over my shoulders watching. Then as I changed film in the camera they became even more interested, so I asked the young boy and girl to pose for a picture. I would line them up, step back a little, look through the view finder, and find them about a yard apart again. It was like trying to put the opposite poles of magnets together.

THE LITTLE GIRL was almost in tears, but this quickly turned to joy when I didn't insist on togetherness and offered them a couple of ballpoint pens with pantomimed instructions on how to use them. I also left them some paper, and they imitated my note taking.

I didn't realize I stuck out my lower lip when taking notes.

As I began to head back toward the hotel darkness closed in. My concern over the unworkable light on the bike was somehwat relieved by seeing other cyclists in the same condition.

About this time a student with his younger brother sitting behind him started up a side-by-side conversation. He said he was studying to be a teacher, and that they were orphans being raised by their uncle who was working the half acre of land left to them by their parents. The boys insisted on guiding me to Denpasar, so I suggested we stop at a stand along the road and I would buy some refreshments.

THE DIMLY-LIGHTED counter was crowded with cans and bottles, stacks of native fruits and wrapped snack packs. We chose a Balinese version of popcorn to go with our orange drinks and found just about room enough for us to fit on the inside bench. The shopkeeper joined us at one side of the counter, waving a fan in our direction.

Thus, refreshed, we headed toward the city lights. After giving careful instructions on how to reach the hotel, the two boys, Djudiana and Sukadana, waved good-bye when we reached the main intersection.

By remembering one word — "dimana" — I had no trouble getting around Bali. It means "Where is?" Thus by adding the name of the town or hotel you are seeking you will get ready help from the Balinese.

If you wish to thank them, they are delighted to hear you say, "Terima kasih."

THE RICE TERRACES are very much a part of the scenery one sees touring the peaceful Indonesian island of Bali. And that countryside is best seen, writes Christian Science Monitor's Ralph Hubley, from the seat of a bicycle.

The Real Mexico Seen At Leisurely Pace

A five-hour train ride for 44 cents?

Such an economical excursion is possible between Mexico City and Cuernavaca. And it's a fun trek, reminiscent of the days when train rides were sometimes regarded as rather risky undertakings.

First, there are the soldiers aboard.

But no need to worry, reports American Airlines travel experts. The soldiers are simply historical holdovers from the 1910-20 revolutionary era. Back then, they were the prime targets of Emiliano Zapata's rebel bands staked out in the mountains around Cuernavaca.

ZAPATA'S MEN eventually took over the Cuernavaca train and staffed it with sandaled gentlemen in big, floppy sombreros who had bandoliers of bullets draped across their shoulders.

When the revolution was won, folks put away their weapons and settled down. From then on, the Cuernavaca train was as peaceful as a Disneyland monorail. But even with the territory tamed, the train looks like rolling stock from a six-pistol thriller — set amid dazzling technicolor terrain.

Picture the scene:

The train winds up impossibly beautiful mountains across a 10,000-foot high pass, with full brakes on the downgrade to Cuernavaca. It creaks and curves through bald-faced gaps, on past odd little cones of dead volcanoes and rocky shoulders bulging out of pines and tall grass. Seemingly at any minute, a stalwart lawman should mosey through the train cars to survey the riders on the slat benches.

MORE LOCAL color comes with the people along the route. Whenever the train stops, Indian vendors appear with baskets of food and drink. They walk along hawking their wares as travelers hand out of the windows to buy their lunch. Everybody eats each time food appears. So, most passengers bring more appetite than baggage.

Prices are low, and the food is appetizing and filling.

But food is not always the only reason for a rest stop.

The engineer has been known to stop and chat with relatives who live along the way. Passengers can get off during such a pause to stretch their legs, or even pick wild flowers in the fields. No one is in any great hurry to get where they are going.

The pace is leisurely, but it is never boring. And certainly the experience is something very different from anything United States citizens can find in their own land of rush and hurry.

There's no better way to see the real Mexico — close-up.

THE STRUGGLE FOR THE CITY ON THE VOLGA

THE ENEMY AT THE GATES: The Battle For Stalingrad by William Craig; Reader's Digest Press-Dutton, 404 pages, $10.95. Reviewed by John D. Yates.

In 1944 Charles de Gaulle visited the battlefield of Stalingrad, and wandered through the acres and acres of devastation: ". . .un peuple formidable, un tres grand peuple. . ." muttered the General. A correspondent agreed, "Ah, oui, Les Russes." De Gaulle shook his head: "No, No! I speak of the Germans — that they should have come so far. . ."

We could always rely upon Le Grand Charles to speak his mind.

In reaching the Volga River and the eastern limits of European Russia, the German war machine had far out-paced the French Emperor Bonaparte of another age, and had worked miracles of strategy and logistics; and the German soldier had performed with his usual courage and tenacity. But in the final drive to Stalingrad on the west bank of the Volga, there were dark omens of a disaster in store for the Germans: overextended supply lines, an overconfidence that denied all thoughts of decline and defeat, and the choice of a battleground between two great natural barriers — The Don and the Volga — behind which preparations for defense and counter attack by the Russians could be staged.

However, the factor that contributed most to the terrible German denouement was the takeover of strategic (and even tactical) direction of the campaign by a lunatic ex-corporal of the German Army, Adolf Hitler; and by subsequent false assurances of airlift support by a gross, drug-ridden incompetent, Reichmarshal Herman Goering.

That the aristocratic and dedicated professional, Gen. (and before the end of the battle, Field Marshal) Frederich Von Paulus, could have sacrificed his 6th Army to the whim of the Fuehrer, is incomprehensible. But in the total picture of the Hitler war, I suppose the destruction of an army was nothing compared with the German leader's plans to destroy the entire nation in one final Gotterdammerung, to which military men far senior to Von Paulus gave their tacit approval.

The battle for Stalingrad will remain for all time the most horrendous of struggles in destructiopn of life, limb and property, between competing land armies in what we are pleased to call today "conventional warfare." The statistics are staggering:

The Germans lost 400,000 men, the Italians 130,000 out of their 200,000 man army, the Hungarians 120,000, and the Rumanians 200,000 men. The satellites therefore lost more than the Germans, as did the subjugated nations in 1812 whose soldiers made up more than 50 per cent of Napoleon's army.

But the Russians lost in killed, wounded and missing, 750,000 men; and after five months of fighting and bombing, 99 per cent of the city had been reduced to rubble, more than 41,000 homes had been destroyed. The population of the city in September, 1942, was about 500,000, and by February, 1943, only 1,500 remained. Probably 50 per cent had been killed and the rest had fled to Siberia and other parts of Asia.

Author William Craig has produced an absorbing human record of the struggle, based upon hundreds of interviews over a long period of time with survivors on both sides. Within the framework of the historical calendar of events, the movements of armies and the plans of grand strategy, the book is composed of on-location stories from the memories of participants, and of fascinating vignettes.

We learn of the presence of two famous sharpshooters in the street-fighting — Major Konings of the Germany Army and the Russian Vassili Zaitsev and his girl friend assistant, who carried out a personal duel; of Dr. Kohler, who despite a broken and wired-together jaw, worked 20 hours a day attending friend and foe alike in fire and flame; the famous Soviet violinist who entertained Russian troops at Christmas time, and responded to German shouts from across the streets requesting Bach; of the Russian Girl prostitutes who administered to both sides in a cellar in the rubble. When the Germans were surrounded by the Russian counter-offensive which they had so long ignored, and the Goering airlift was bringing in only 100 tons a day rather than 750 tons, we see the beginning of the total disintegration of the German war machine. Cannibalism becomes common, as soldiers turn into animals.

The author tells us that the physical evidence of this cruel struggle is now very sparse — there are a number of flamboyant monuments and plaques, all overshadowed by a giant statue of Mother Russia at the top of Mamaev Hill.

All the rubble was removed over 25 years ago and the city is rebuilt; and I suspect that even in Stalingrad the battle for the city is largely forgotten because a mere handful of its inhabitants in those days survive.

In all such struggles it is the common people and soldiers who suffer most, but who are remembered or acknowledged least. Craig's fascinating book, however, records the story from the grassroots level and is probably one of the most profound anti-war documents ever written.

Salisbury Of The Times On The New China

TO PEKING — AND BEYOND: A Report on the New Asia by Harrison E. Salisbury; Quadrangle; The New York Times; 308 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

These days a visa to visit China is a passport to a publishable book. "To Peking — And Beyond," written by the experienced Moscow correspondent of the New York Times, combines some of the best and worst attributes of the current reports on the Central Kingdom.

It is only fair to Salisbury to start with the positive contributions that he makes.

As a sophisticated, long-time observer of the Russian scene, he is able to contribute valuable insights into the changing relationship between China and the Soviet Union. Even while U.S. foreign policy was laboring under the assumption that the two most powerful Communist powers had been fused into a monolith bound together with Marxist abstractions, Salisbury was able to anticipate more tangible forces that would pull them apart.

Russian Far Eastern policy, under czars and commissars, has concentrated on the needs and objectives of Moscow. Long before the 1918 Revolution, Russia and China had quarreled over their joint boundary in Central Asia. Right up until the Nationalists under Chiang Kai-shek were driven off the mainland, the Russians withheld any significant support for Mao Tse-tung, and concentrated their efforts on stabilizing a Chinese government which they knew to be badly divided and ineffectual.

Russia simply did not want a strong unified China as a neighbor, regardless of its political persuasion.

With the Chinese Communists in power, international pressures forced China and Russia to try to build a relationship. Even at the height of this honeymoon, Russian aid to China was no Marshall Plan. There were only loans of limited magnitude, and each loan carried a price tag in obligations. Russia was not China's brother, she was her usurer.

Salisbury's account of the Sino-Soviet partnership and its deterioration, and his comparison of Russian post-revolutionary society with China's, are built on his experience as a critical observer of Soviet society and politics and repays careful reading.

China's population — its vast magnitude, its military potential, its capacity for manual labor, and its potential need for room in which to expand so that it can feed itself — is of great interest to the United States as well as to China's neighbors. Chinese population statistics are unreliable, but Salisbury cites data that convinces him that the numbers of Chinese are still growing at a rate greater than those of other world powers. Despite the almost complete lack of overt sexuality among young people, and the emphasis on late marriage, the birth rate, particularly in rural areas, is very high. Why? Because it still takes the total effort of 80 per cent of the population to provide enough food for everyone.

Salisbury judges that China's population will continue to grow rapidly until further mechanization of agricultural production reduces the need for farm labor. At that point he anticipates a major internal transition — a flood of hundreds of millions of peasants from the rural areas into the cities. China's leaders will have to cope with an urban population "bomb" that will dwarf anything the West has known. How China deals with population growth and movement will radically affect her internal stability as well as her relations with her neighbors.

Another valuable aspect of "To Peking —And Beyond" is the two-chapter section on North Korea and its dictator, Kim Il-Sung. Very little is available to the American public about the Hermit Kingdom. Salisbury gives a clear, concise description of North Korea's intense police state, its national drive for security against being any state's vassal, and the unbelievable "personality cult" that has left every leader nameless except Kim Il-Sung.

Salisbury contributes very little to our understanding of the Cultural Revolution, Mao's unleashing of the young people against the New Red bureaucracy in 1966 that has clouded the Chinese scene for even the most clear-eyed China-watchers. Edward Rice in "Mao's Way," and Barbara Tuchman in "Notes From China" give us much more thoughtful and analytical accounts of the import, implications and possible consequences of Mao's attempt to keep the Revolution fluid.

When he makes comparisons with the Soviet Union or discusses Sino-Soviet relations, Salisbury is on familiar ground and his analysis is convincing. When he romanticizes about the "new Chinese man," Salisbury lets himself be carried away by the visible evidence of the greatly improved quality of life for the vast majority of Chinese.

Russian propaganda used to trumpet about the "new Soviet man." Salisbury lived in Russia long enough to know that the "new Soviet man" is strikingly like the old Russian man. Because he knows less about China, Salisbury is less rigorous than he should be in distinguishing between the "new" Chinese man and the new Chinese circumstances.

Hammond Innes' New Novel Features The Wild Outback

THE GOLDEN SOAK by Hammond Innes; Knopf, 334 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Lee Thompson.

The wild outback of western Australia is the real hero of this new adventure novel by Hammond Innes.

The story, told in the first person throughout, follows the protagonist's adventures as he escapes from England after his bankruptcy and his failed marriage. He goes to Australia attempting to rebuild his life among the wild western mining towns. Immediately he becomes involved in a cursed mine, greedy speculators and incredible tales of a lost mine in the great Gibson desert. And as the novel paces to its conclusion, he begins to find the seeds of his own moral resurgence.

The characters are just graphic enough to allow the plot to plunge headlong to its conclusion. But what makes this novel most enjoyable is the verisimilitude of Innes' presentation of the outback.

The heat, the draught, the savage desert winds, all have the feel of reality. The plant and animal forms, many of which are indigenous only to Australia, are encountered so frequently as to be almost part of the plot, making this novel most enjoyable, and a fascinating introduction to the wild and the exotic in Australia.

"I've always had a special liking for old men . . . I listened to the stories strangers told — old people who sat next to me on a bus — and recognized that their pride in what they said was not random boasting, that a man's life story summarizes plainly enough the stamina, concentration and energy he has had over the years, as well as his luck, loyalty, friendship, sanity, imagination . . . Old men are usually joyful men at heart." Edward Hoagland in "Walking the Dead Diamond River."

An Essayist At Work

By DON KEOWN

As both a novelist and essayist, Edward Hoagland has earned himself a reputation as one of the best among the current crop of younger American writers.

His latest book, "Walking the Dead Diamond River," finds him in the latter role, demonstrating anew the form that won him praise as "a fresh breeze amid so many stale opinions" for his earlier "The Courage of Turtles."

"Walking the Dead Diamond River" is a collection of Hoagland essays that have appeared earlier in The Village Voice, Life, Audience, Esquire, The New Yorjer and The Atlantic Monthly. To give the collection some cohesion and to provide a theme, the dustjacket proposes that the pieces be treated as a delineation of the contrast between urban and rural or wilderness life.

Hoagland does, indeed, divide his residence between New York City and a New England farm only miles from the Canadian border. Thus some of the essays deal with life in the city, others with life in the country or the wilds. But Hoagland never really brings about the confrontation the jacket blurb suggests. Each essay stands alone, as it was written, sometimes related to one or more of the other pieces, even to a degree repetitive, but never really close enough for comparison or conflict.

WALKING THE DEAD DIAMOND RIVER by Edward Hoagland; Random House, 340 pages, $7.95.

This absence of a genuine unifying theme is a weakness of many such collections. It means that each essay must then engage the reader's interest entirely on its own merits. Frequently, but not always, Edward Hoagland succeeds. When he is writing about something for which he has deep feeling, the essay is engaging, sometimes even electrifying. When he is writing about a subject of less consequence to himself, the result is far less satisfying, even disappointing and flat.

Not surprisingly, the pieces inspired by the Vermont and Maine wilderness for which Hoagland feels such a strong affection are the best offerings. The title piece, about a long walk with a biologist making a grouse count, is splendid. The reader accompanies the pair through the unspoiled, but threatened, wild country, sharing their observations, their conversations and their thoughts.

An account of a canoe trip on the Allagash is similarly gripping.

"The New England Wilderness" recounts his contacts and discussions with the men entrusted with the preservation of the region's forests and the wildlife they shelter, and offers a course in ecology that avoids the one-sidedness of most such presentations.

"The Midnight Freight to Portland." the story of a ride aboard a freight train across northeastern Vermont into Maine, is a delightful recreation of an experience railroad buffs will envy. And "Tiger Bright," focusing upon the great animal trainer Gunther Gebel-Williams, is alive with the fascination the circus has held for Hoagland ever since a youthful stint as a roustabout.

The shorter pieces are also generally the lesser — a silly bit on dogs; another on boxing that strives for realism but slips into the romanticisms too often accorded a grim, grimy and gruesome sport; a report on jury service that is really nothing more than a personalized newspaper feature story and not a particularly good one; another on assassination that seems to cast no real light upon that dark problem.

But a Hoagland inspired is a Hoagland who holds your attention with passages well worth that heeding. There's a lot of unfortunate truth in "The New England Wilderness' conclusion that "despite all the fuss about wilderness, people nowadays don't really want to be in the woods all alone. If they did, there would be less wildness in the woods and in the end there would also be more of it. Even faster than the woods go, people are losing their taste."

Hoagland is one who sees the tourist and part-time resident as a greater threat to the wilderness and wildlife than the logger or the hunter. "The villain in wildlife management . . . was the summer people like me, who come crowding in, buying up, chopping up the land after the loggers have skinned off the trees."

But, while he can criticize some of them and their tactics, Hoagland is basically himself a wholehearted conservationist: "All factions have reason to worry if the board majority of citizens lose that mysterious sense of felicity and exuberance they once had in the presence of natural grandeur — the feeling of having known it before, or being linked to it via thousands of centuries before they were born — and simply stop caring."

Hoagland's mastery of language is beyond question. He uses it sharply, accurately, efficiently. But good rhetoric will not in itself suffice for the essayist. One must also have something to say — and believe that it is vital. When Edward Hoagland is talking about something very important to him, as when he deals with nature and the menaces to it he is very, very effective indeed, a master of description, an expert at exposition.

INSPECTOR GHOTE TRUSTS THE HEART by H.R.F. Keating; Doubleday, 201 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Patricia Perry.

Connoisseurs of intelligent mysteries who haven't yet met inspector Ghote, a lovely little Indian policeman who works out of Bombay, could do no better than make their introductions in this novel.

The dignified inspector is assigned to investigate a kidnapping because he is so goodhearted; and the abduction, which was a mistake in the first place, serves to accentuate his comic, yet highly intellectual, character.

It's an enjoyable adventure, with chases all over the city, and some remarkably perceptive writing. . . Ghote approaches the father of the intended kidnap victim to see if he'll pay the ransom of the wrong boy . . . "the tall business man's strongly marked features were becoming moment by moment locked more and more in a mask of not deciding. . ."

Book Pages

THE FIRST four titles in a new series of American Civil Liberties Union handbooks for special interest groups are:

"The Rights of Teachers" by David Rubin, $4.95; "The Rights of Mental Patients" by Bruce Ennis and Loren Siegel, $6.95; "The Rights of Servicemen" by Robert S. Rivkin, $4.95, and "The Rights of Prisoners" by David Rudovsky, $4.95. Future books will cover the rights of women, students, suspects and the very poor. Norman Dorsen and Aryeh Neier, general counsel and executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union, are the general editors for the series. Richard W. Baron Co., New York, is the publisher. And the premise is that "rights are given life only through their exercise. If they are forgotten or undiscovered, they tend to disappear. The aim of the . . . series is to inform Americans of their rights in the hope that they will then be encouraged to exercise them."

CLIFF MERRITT'S "Man on the Move!" cartoons, a sort of transportation-oriented version of Robert Ripley's "Believe It or Not" feature, done on behalf of United Transportation Union, have been reprinted as a 75-cent paperback by Popular Library.

THE TRUE-TO-life antics and quips of the "small fry" in Bil Keane's comic panel "The Family Circus" has won the cartoon a loyal following among readers of the Independent-Journal and the 400 other newspapers in which it appears. Those fans can enjoy some of Keane's funniest creations in "Can I Have a Cookie?," a collection of Family Circus ribticklers published by Fawcett as a 60-cent Gold Medal paperback.

THE EFFECTIVE presentation of exhibits, whether they be for a school science fair or a trade exposition or a store window, is an art in itself. Jefferson Warren of Miami's Vizcaya Museum has put together an illustrated manual, "Exhibit Methods," that covers the subject from design through construction to promotion and publicity. Successful exhibits are shown and analyzed. Special effects — animation, sensory stimuli, etc. — are stressed. The Sterling Publishing Co. book sells for $6.95.

DELL HAS reprinted as a 95-cent paperback Hans Peter Richter's award-winning novel, "Freidrich," in the English translation by Edite Koll.

ONE MORE SPRING

One more spring, I asked, of God,
One more emerald sight
Of grass upon the hill,
Of gulls low upon the sea in flight,
Of white-tailed deer sunning in the warmth
And children laughing in the gentle winds,
Of young love, arm-in-arm.
Let me know the birth - the start—
So that the end
Will be as it had just begun:
A poppy opening to the morning sun.

NOVATO DOROTHY HEFFINGTON

THE TALISMAN

The pussywillows lithe and gay,
Fit theme for song or triolet,
Have come to show our spring the way;
The pussywillows lithe and gay
In little silken coats of gray,
On russet twigs each one is set;
The pussywillows lithe and gay,
Fit theme for song or triolet.

CORTE MADERA MYRTLE ALICE McCARCY

UNEVEN RACE

So Many issues to haggle,
babies to tend,
steel beams to send soaring and scripts to end

too soon.

O Time (solar, standard, fiscal),
can't we keep in step?

ONE MORE SPRING

One more spring, I asked, of God,
One more emerald sight
Of grass upon the hill,
Of gulls low upon the sea in flight,
Of white-tailed deer sunning in the warmth
And children laughing in the gentle winds,
Of young love, arm-in-arm.
Let me know the birth - the start—
So that the end
Will be as it had just begun:
A poppy opening to the morning sun.

NOVATO DOROTHY HEFFINGTON

THE TALISMAN

The pussywillows lithe and gay,
Fit theme for song or triolet,
Have come to show our spring the way;
The pussywillows lithe and gay
In little silken coats of gray,
On russet twigs each one is set;
The pussywillows lithe and gay,
Fit theme for song or triolet.

CORTE MADERA MYRTLE ALICE McCARCY

UNEVEN RACE

So Many issues to haggle,
babies to tend,
steel beams to send soaring
and scripts to end

too soon.

O Time (solar, standard, fiscal),
can't we keep in step?

IT IS THE time of the year for puttering in the backyard. Which means it is also a time for cluttering, unless you have provided yourself with adequate storage for all those garden tools, lawn care supplies, barbeque gear and other things that tend to get scattered while you work or play. Steven Ellingson has designed the outdoor storage center shown at right as the answer to the problem. It stands eight and a half feet tall and measures eight feet wide, and it is actually four units in one — potting bench, two storage closets large enough to serve as poolside dressing rooms, and a storage cabinet with shelves. The unit with the fold-down potting bench takes care of garden tools and equipment, and the counter can serve you equally well as a barbeque work center and serving area. The second unit at ground level is perfect for the mower and sweeper, with extra room for small tools. The other units can handle bags of peat and fertilizer, the wheelbarrow, more tools, etc., through their full-height double doors. Order Outdoor Storage Center Pattern 513 by sending $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409. You will get step-by-step instructions plus a complete materials list. Or, if you prefer a storage unit styled in a different period, order Little Red Barn Pattern 461 for $2.

A Craft To Soothe The Troubled Mind

There are certain crafts and trades, long on tradition and steeped in the pride of their practitioners, that seem to serve as an antidote to the hustle, bustle and hurry of today's society.

Bricklaying is one of those. With trowel in hand, the bricklayer seems to forget the pressures around him and to concentrate upon the task before him — to lay those bricks as perfectly as possible.

For all its traditions, bricklaying is not beyond the capabilities of anyone who can cook, sew or saw a board, according to Don Brann of the Easi-Bild Pattern Co.

ALL THE NOVICE needs is a little instruction at the outset.

To provide that direction, Brann has written a book, "Bricklaying Simplified." To get it, send a $2 check (made payable to Directions Simplified) to Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510, and ask for Book 668 — "Bricklaying Simplified."

The book offers step-by-step directions on the mixing of the mortar, the achieving of uniform mortar joints and the placement of the bricks. The 128 pages contain more than 190 illustrations to clarify the directions.

Having read and mastered the book, you are ready to proceed with that brick wall or barbecue, that brick veneer for your house, that walk or terrace, or even that brick floor.

AND YOU WILL discover for yourself the uncanny quality that bricklaying has for relaxing the mind. You will find yourself so involved in the challenge of good bricklaying that the cares of home and office will soon slip away.

Don't overlook, either, the healthful exercise that bricklaying affords the body and its muscles in this day of growing awareness of the importance of physical fitness.

You will rarely see a flabby, unfit bricklayer.

Just as you will seldom see a worried and unhappy bricklayer — at least not while he is at work at his old and honored craft.

Try it, and you'll buy it.

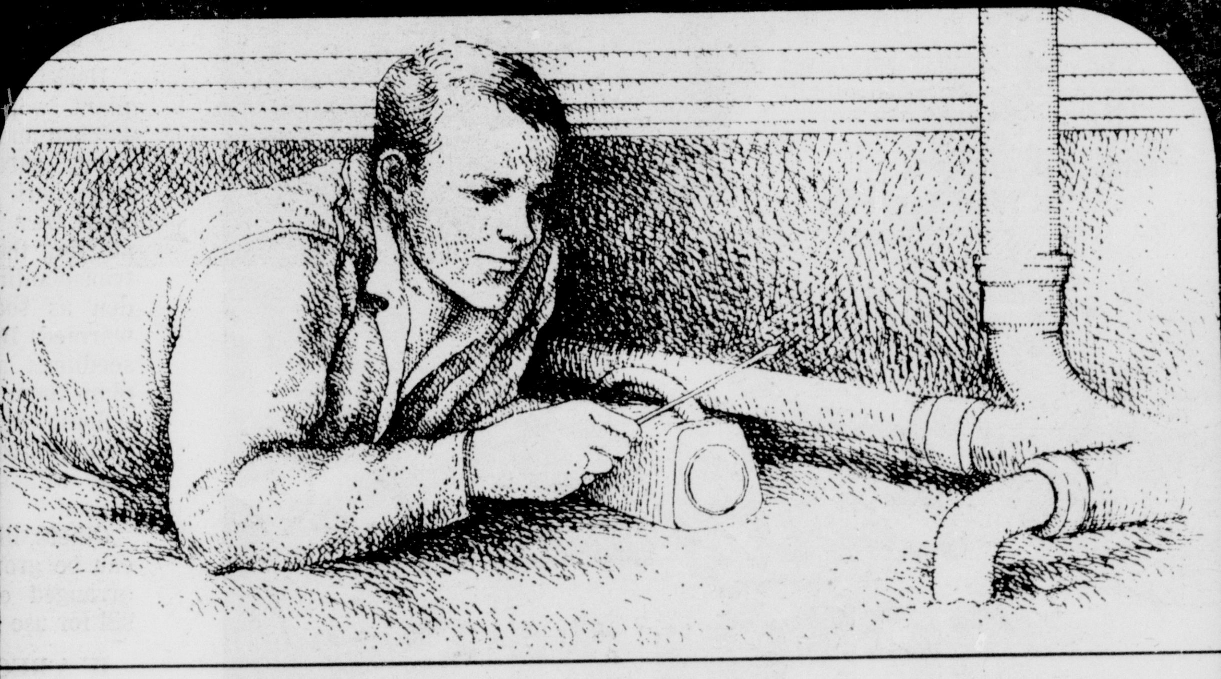
Marin
Homeowner's
Notebook



LOVE IS BLIND. THAT'S WHY YOUR HOME NEEDS US NOW.

Most people fall madly in love with their homes here in Marin County. And love, as everybody knows, is blind. So many homeowners overlook the little faults in their homes. Even the ones that are serious warning signs. That's why your home needs the dispassionate eye of a professional "structural pest control" inspector once a year.

You see, a good "structural pest control inspection" is a lot more than just a "termite inspection." Hinkley & Gordon inspects your home for termites and other destructive organisms, of course. But we also inspect your home for all other conditions which might lead to expensive repairs if neglected.

For example, replacing the grout seal around your shower is perhaps a $30 professional repair now. But give a leaky shower a couple of years to attract termites or dry rot, and you may have to spend $1000 to replace the entire bathroom floor.

That's why a Hinkley & Gordon inspection is so thorough. We inspect your home from top to bottom, inside and outside. We cover literally hundreds of maintenance items, spending a full two hours to check the average home. A very detailed written report, drawings, and specific recommendations are mailed to you within 48 hours.

Whether you follow our suggestions is strictly up to you. There's no obligation whatsoever to have us perform further work. This inspection isn't just a gimmick to sell you a termite job. It's the best way to avoid one.

The cost of a Hinkley & Gordon inspection is just $50 for the average Marin home. And it certainly beats trusting blind luck to protect your investment.

A call to our office today will arrange it.

Herbs Spice Up The Garden And The Dinner Table

EVEN IF YOU don't have space for them in the garden — and it takes only a nook — you can still grow your own herbs. Just plant them in a claypot, or some fancier container, and place them in a sunny window. They will thrive, close at hand for your use in the kitchen. The photo is from "How to Grow Your Own Vegetables" by Michael Kressy.

Seasonings must never shout; they should only sing softly.

A smidgen of thyme, a flurry of dill, or a pinch of basil can elevate a recipe from mere run of the mill to one that becomes a specialty of the house. A few chives can transform plain sour cream into an inviting, flavorful party dip.

The lowly navy bean, laced with the flavor of ginger, produces an aroma that has given baked beans a national reputation.

CREATIVE HOME library, in association with Better Homes and Gardens, has published a new book entitled "How to Grow Your Own Vegetables" (hardbound, $8.95, Meredith Corp.) by Michael Kressy. The book guides gardeners of any experience in selecting a garden plot, planting and growing vegetables and bush fruits, and also contains a chapter on herbs — how to grow, harvest, dry and store them.

Herbs are the "spice" of the plant world as well as the kitchen and deserve a corner in every garden. To assure an early herb yield "How to Grow Your Own Vegetables" advises starting the seeds indoors and transplanting them to the garden as soon as the soil has warmed. But now you can get seedlings at the nursery and plant them immediately.

Some herbs are perennials (mint, chives, savory, and sage) and will sprout season after season.

Others, like basil and parsley, can be grown in clay pots and arranged on a sunny window sill for use in the kitchen.

IF A RECIPE makes no mention of herbs but you want to tinker with a dish anyway, allow: a half teaspoon fresh herbs for each pound of meat or poultry; a half teaspoon fresh herbs for every two cups of soup or sauce; three-quarters teaspoon fresh herbs for every two cups of vegetables; half teaspoon fresh herbs for each cup of salad dressing.

Basil is delicious when sprinkled on freshly sliced tomatoes and can be planted as a border along a walk, in clumps in the garden or in pots on the terrace. When picked fresh, dill leaves add a subtle flavor to salads, fish and many other dishes as well as adding flavor when placed in the pickling jar along with cucumbers.

Marjoram produces aromatic and flavorful leaves that make a tasty addition to almost any meat dish and will do wonders for leafy vegetables, beans, peas or squash.

Parsley can be used with virtually every vegetable as well as with a variety of meats.

REMEMBER, herbs can only be added. If too much is used there is no way to subtract them. Some herbs, like oregano, are more pungent than milder types such as basil and can easily overpower a dish if overdone.

The last chapter of "How to Grow Your Own Vegetables" contains recipes for home grown produce. Herbed Summer Squash is a recipe that not only takes advantage of fresh produce from the garden but enticing home grown herbs as well. Here are the ingredients and easy directions.

HERBED SUMMER SQUASH

¼ cup butter
⅓ cup thinly sliced scallions, including green tops
1 teaspoon thyme leaves or ½ teaspoon dried thyme
½ teaspoon oregano leaves or ¼ teaspoon dried oregano
¼ teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 quart summer squash (about 1 pound), thinly sliced
¼ cup finely chopped parsley

Melt butter in a large skillet. Blend in scallions, thyme, oregano, salt and pepper. Add squash and mix lightly to blend. Cover and cook over moderate heat, stirring occasionally, 10-15 minutes or until squash is tender. Sprinkle with parsley and serve immediately.

Yield: three to four servings.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

The Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Now is the time to replace all those shrubs and plantings killed by the heavy frosts and rains this past winter. Make your selections with care. Your choices should be with you for years to come.

✓ Roses are beginning to burst into bloom on many bushes. A good feeding with spur their blossoming. So will a regular plucking of spent flowers.

✓ Give lawns a spring feeding now, too. They will green-up quickly.

✓ Azaleas, rhodendrons, roses and camellias full of buds or full blooms make ideal Easter gifts.

✓ Now is the time to plant tuberous begonia and fibrous begonia seedlings. Give them some shade.

✓ April is a big month for planting summer-flowering annuals. A wide selection is available.

Play It Safe With Outdoor Appliances

During the gardening season many Marinites will be using electric appliances such as lawn mowers, edger-trimmers, cultivators, grass shears, or hedge trimmers to make their outdoor work both easier, and more enjoyable.

However, along with the increased use of these convenience items goes an increased sense of responsibility for adherence to rules of safety. Underwriters' Laboratories Inc., an independent, not-for-profit organization that tests products for public safety, recommends that you observe the following guidelines when working with outdoor appliances:

KEEP THE work area clean.

Never use appliances in damp or wet locations.

Keep all visitors, especially children, a safe distance away.

Store appliances in high, dry places and keep them out of the reach of children.

Never force an appliance to work faster than the rate at which it was designed.

Never wear loose clothing or jewelry which could get caught in the moving parts. Use rubber gloves and proper footwear.

Never carry an appliance by the cord, and never yank it when removing from a receptacle. Keep the cord away from heat, oil, and sharp edges.

Never use an appliance in the rain.

Keep proper footing and balance at all times, don't overreach.

Keep appliances sharp and clean for best and safest performance. Disconnect an appliance before servicing, changing accessories, or lubricating.

Look for the UL symbol in a circle when purchasing outdoor appliances. Such equipment has been evaluated with respect to hazards affecting life and property, by undergoing rigid tests which duplicate in-service uses and abuses that products may receive.

UL FURTHER suggests observing the following rules of satety when working with edger-trimmers or lawn mowers.

Keep guards in place, and in working order.

Keep blades sharp.

Keep hands away from the cutting area.

HITTING A ROCK or other foreign object with a lawn mower can be dangerous. In the event that this should happen, take the following steps.

1. Stop the mower.
2. Inspect for damage.
3. Repair the damage before restarting and operating the mower.

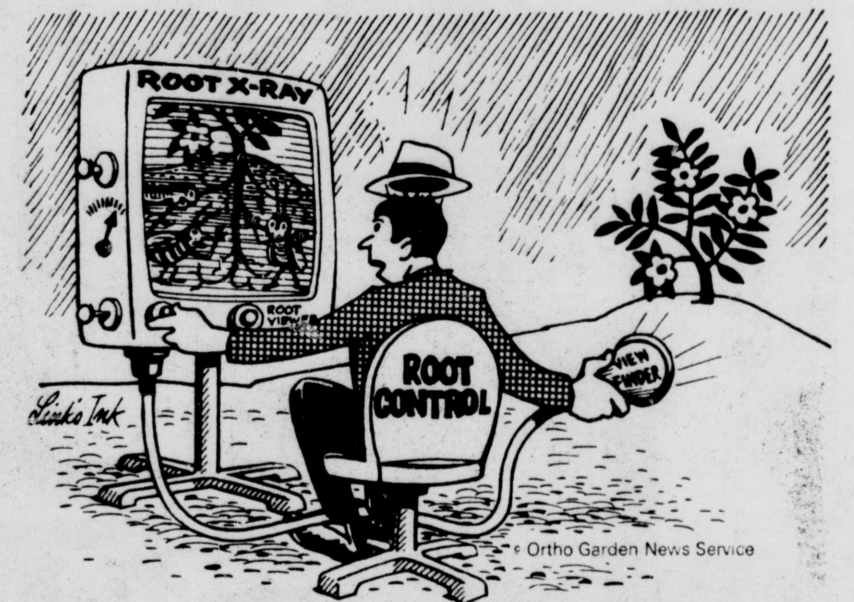
There's Lot Going On Beneath The Soil Out In Your Garden

By FRANK J. TAYLOR



© Ortho Garden News Service

What this home gardener needs isn't a five cent stogie but a five dollar X-ray machine that will take pictures of the roots of his trees, shrubs and plants down in the soil. Most other backyard gardeners have the same need.

I can do some pretty good guessing about what ails a sick plant when the leaves begin to curl, dry up or drop, and the tips of the branches die back. First of all I look for sucking bugs, but if the leaves are clean and they still curl or drop, I know I have a root problem. How do I get a good look at the roots?

"BORE A HOLE and see what goes on down there under the top soil," a county horticultural expert advised me.

Whereupon I added a soil augur to my gardening arsenal in the toolshed. It's still hanging on the wall.

The first dozen holes I drilled alongside trees and shrubs brought up subsoil all right but it was so churned up I learned next to nothing. So, putting on my Thomas A. Edison hat, I invented a home-made coring tube of strong, thin pipe. It brought up cores of earth an inch in diameter which told me that beneath the foot or so of top soil the roots were trying to push through compacted clay and they were finding it hard going.

"You'll have to break up that clay and let some air into it," my expert said.

HE RECOMMENDED some soil conditioners in small but frequent applications. That helped solve one soil problem but not two others — the root chewers and the PH, or alkali-acidity balance.

To catch the root pests in the act I dug small holes alongside scattered shrubs and plants with a trowel, carefully trying to avoid cutting the roots I wanted to examine. In one place I found some nematodes, in another cutworms and nests of root aphids. Under the lawn I spotted sod web worms feasting on the grass roots.

Once I had flushed out these underground enemies it was no trick to lambaste them with the hose turf gun loaded with the right pesticides from the Garden Center — things like Nemagon for nematodes, Chlordane and Diazinon for the bugs and worms, Dyrene for the root fungus.

NOWADAYS I don't waste time digging holes to locate the enemy: I know he's down there. I give the roots a break and use the turf gun before the leaves begin falling —as root insurance, so to speak.

That left me with the most baffling soil problem of all, the PH balance. Too-acid soil wouldn't give up its nourishment, too alkaline burned the roots.

I turned chemist for a day with my home soil-testing kit. The color in the tubes gave me some clues, but to be sure I sent soil samples to college for more reliable tests. Once I had the reports back it was an easy trick to scatter lime or gypsum where the roots cried for less acid soil, or sulphur to counteract too alkaline nourishment.

Sounds like work, but it wasn't really, and it paid off big above ground to give the roots the break they deserved down under.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

The Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Now is the time to replace all those shrubs and plantings killed by the heavy frosts and rains this past winter. Make your selections with care. Your choices should be with you for years to come.

✓ Roses are beginning to burst into bloom on many bushes. A good feeding with spur their blossoming. So will a regular plucking of spent flowers.

✓ Give lawns a spring feeding now, too. They will green-up quickly.

✓ Azaleas, rhododendrons, roses and camellias full of buds or full blooms make ideal Easter gifts.

✓ Now is the time to plant tuberous begonia and fibrous begonia seedlings. Give them some shade.

✓ April is a big month for planting summer-flowering annuals. A wide selection is available.

Play It Safe With Outdoor Appliances

During the gardening season many Marinites will be using electric appliances such as lawn mowers, edger-trimmers, cultivators, grass shears, or hedge trimmers to make their outdoor work both easier, and more enjoyable.

However, along with the increased use of these convenience items goes an increased sense of responsibility for adherence to rules of safety. Underwriters' Laboratories Inc., an independent, not-for-profit organization that tests products for public safety, recommends that you observe the following guidelines when working with outdoor appliances:

KEEP THE work area clean.

Never use appliances in damp or wet locations.

Keep all visitors, especially children, a safe distance away.

Store appliances in high, dry places and keep them out of the reach of children.

Never force an appliance to work faster than the rate at which it was designed.

Never wear loose clothing or jewelry which could get caught in the moving parts. Use rubber gloves and proper footwear.

Never carry an appliance by the cord, and never yank it when removing from a receptacle. Keep the cord away from heat, oil, and sharp edges.

Never use an appliance in the rain.

Keep proper footing and balance at all times, don't overreach.

Keep appliances sharp and clean for best and safest performance. Disconnect an appliance before servicing, changing accessories, or lubricating.

Look for the UL symbol in a circle when purchasing outdoor appliances. Such equipment has been evaluated with respect to hazards affecting life and property, by undergoing rigid tests which duplicate in-service uses and abuses that products may receive.

UL FURTHER suggests observing the following rules of satety when working with edger-trimmers or lawn mowers.

Keep guards in place, and in working order.

Keep blades sharp.

Keep hands away from the cutting area.

HITTING A ROCK or other foreign object with a lawn mower can be dangerous. In the event that this should happen, take the following steps.

1. Stop the mower.
2. Inspect for damage.
3. Repair the damage before restarting and operating the mower.

TV NOTES

By JACK GAVER

The tennis battle of the sexes — veteran Bobby Rigg vs. Margaret Court for a $10,000 pot — will be telecast live from San Diego, Calif., by CBS on May 13.

"The Little People," the Brian Keith series that was new this season, has been renewed for 1973-74 by NBC. The kids are doing well by Keith. First, there was that long, long run "Family Affair" series, in which he was guardian to three orphaned children. In this new one, he is a pediatrician in Hawaii.

NBC's baseball coverage this season is a record 41 games, 26 Saturday contests and 15 Monday night encounters.

Australian singer Helen Reddy, who seems to be on almost everyone's program each time you turn the dial this season, will be the hostess of a weekly contemporary music-comedy one-hour series this summer. It will fill the 8-9 p.m. Thursday spot while "The Flip Wilson Show" is on vacation.

CBS and the National Basketball Association announced agreement on a three-year pact that provides for this network to have exclusive video rights to NBA games beginning with the 1973-74 contract for several years.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

The traditional jazz world lost a major figure recently with the death at 86 of Edward "Kid" Ory, who wrote "Muskrat Ramble" and gave the young Louis Armstrong one of his first jobs.

The famous jazz trombonist used to own the San Francisco jazz club On the Levee, and was known for his tailgate trombone style.

The tape I'm calling your attention to is not new at all, it has been buried in the catalog of Contemporary Records for many years. In fact nowhere on the tape does it state the tape is in stereo, leading one to believe it might be dubs of old classic 78s. Imagine my surprise to discover the tape to be excellent genuine stereo with amazing presence that puts Kid Ory and his seven-man group right in your lap! (GOOD-TIME JAZZ-AMPEX GTF-1042) is titled "Kid Ory Favorites, Volumes 1 and 2" and is at three- and three-quarters ips speed though the sound is not harmed by the reduction in speed from the seven and a half speed of the other tapes we've discussed earlier.

The tunes are predictable: "High Society," "Careless Love," "Panama" and other traditional jazz favorites delivered in spirited manner somewhere between the overly slick gloss of some Dixieland groups and the wrong-note-ridden performances of most of the New Orleans bands still playing.

Everyone — even modern jazz snobs — should have some good gutsy traditional jazz in their collection, and I strongly recommend this definitive Ory set.

TV IOTES

By JACK GAVER

The tennis battle of the sexes — veteran Bobby Rigg vs. Margaret Court for a $10,000 pot — will be telecast live from San Diego, Calif., by CBS on May 13.

"The Little People," the Brian Keith series that was new this season, has been renewed for 1973-74 by NBC. The kids are doing well by Keith. First, there was that long, long run "Family Affair" series, in which he was guardian to three orphaned children. In this new one, he is a pediatrician in Hawaii.

NBC's baseball coverage this season is a record 41 games, 26 Saturday contests and 15 Monday night encounters.

Australian singer Helen Reddy, who seems to be on almost everyone's program each time you turn the dial this season, will be the hostess of a weekly contemporary music-comedy one-hour series this summer. It will fill the 8-9 p.m. Thursday spot while "The Flip Wilson Show" is on vacation.

CBS and the National Basketball Association announced agreement on a three-year pact that provides for this network to have exclusive video rights to NBA games beginning with the 1973-74 contract for several years.

SHIRLEY JONES and Gordon MacRae are seen in their leading roles as Laurey and Curly in the classic musical "Oklahoma!" Friday at 8:30 p.m. on Channels 5 and 10.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

The traditional jazz world lost a major figure recently with the death at 86 of Edward "Kid" Ory, who wrote "Muskrat Ramble" and gave the young Louis Armstrong one of his first jobs.

The famous jazz trombonist used to own the San Francisco jazz club On the Levee, and was known for his tailgate trombone style.

The tape I'm calling your attention to is not new at all, it has been buried in the catalog of Contemporary Records for many years. In fact nowhere on the tape does it state the tape is in stereo, leading one to believe it might be dubs of old classic 78s. Imagine my surprise to discover the tape to be excellent genuine stereo with amazing presence that puts Kid Ory and his seven-man group right in your lap! (GOOD-TIME JAZZ-AMPEX GTF-1042) is titled "Kid Ory Favorites, Volumes 1 and 2" and is at three-and three-quarters ips speed though the sound is not harmed by the reduction in speed from the seven and a half speed of the other tapes we've discussed earlier.

The tunes are predictable: "High Society," "Careless Love," "Panama" and other traditional jazz favorites delivered in spirited manner somewhere between the overly slick gloss of some Dixieland groups and the wrong-note-ridden performances of most of the New Orleans bands still playing.

Everyone — even modern jazz snobs — should have some good gutsy traditional jazz in their collection, and I strongly recommend this definitive Ory set.

LET 'EM EAT RABBIT — With meat prices as they are, John O. Williams (left) and Philip L. Fritchey of Bolinas have an answer: raising rabbits for food. The men cuddle two of the furry creatures that will wind up soon on the dinner table as a tasty and rather inexpensive meal. To the tenderhearted, Fritchey says: "I believe the greatest achievement of any creature is fulfilling its function on earth. . . to provide food."

Activists' Claim Is Rejected

By LARRY MOWELL

Despite claims that they held up a Corte Madera market only to bail out the financially troubled Marin City Learning Center, three radical activists were sentenced yesterday to one-year-to-life terms in state prison before a crowd of spectators in Marin Superior Court.

As more than 50 persons, including at least a dozen small children looked on, Judge E. Warren McGuire impassively handed out the terms to John Turner, 27, of Marin City, and Stephaie Catherine Kline and Candice Yockey, both 26-year-old San Franciscans.

However, the judge granted a delay until Tuesday for the sentencing of a fourth defendant, Claudia Vonetta Grayson, 20, of Oakland, when her attorney said he had not had time to review the probation report and wanted time to call in a psychiatrist to testify.

Turner, Mrs. Kline and Miss Yockey invaded the Co-Op Market at 8 a.m. Dec. 31, brandished guns and forced assistant manager William Fletcher to open the store safe after binding other employees with tape.

However, opening the safe set off a silent alarm and Corte Madera police arrived before the armed bandits, disguised by stockings over their heads, could escape with $2,700. Miss Grayson, standing lookout outside, exchanged shots with Corte Madera officer Andre Horn before the four were captured.

McGuire earlier had reduced the charge against the four from first degree robbery, which carries a sentence of five years to life, to second degree robbery when they agreed to plead guilty March 23.

However, he said at the time he would send them to prison unless something extraordinary in their behalf appeared in the probation reports. The reports by probation officers Jesse W. Johnson and Virginia Di Cerbo recommended prison and 90 minutes of arguments and testimony by Turner and character witnesses for him failed to sway the judge.

"I really have not heard anything new," the judge said. "The record shows a propensity to use force and violence to achieve justifiable social ends. Nobody is going to change their philosophy," McGuire said.

The judge felt they had joined the "so-called antisocial antiestablishment community."

All four had been involved in the Marin City Learning Center and the three sentenced yesterday participated in radical movements. Mrs. Kline, wrapped up in the antiwar

U.S. Oil Company Is Attacked In Lebanon

Guerrillas Take Blame For Raid

BEIRUT (UPI) — A selfstyled guerrilla organization calling itself the Lebanese Revolutionary Guard today claimed credit for the early morning attack on an American-owned oil tank farm near the south Lebanon port of Sidon and said it was aimed at the "dishonorable American-Saudi Arabia-Lebanese alliance."

The official Palestinian news agency WAFA, however, charged the claim was circulated "by American agents to mislead the people." WAFA denied guerrillas were involved and said the attack actually was carried out by Israeli commandos.

Earlier in the week, the Palestinian guerrillas tried to link U.S. Central Intelligence Agency (CIA) agents and the U.S. Embassy in Beirut with the Israeli commando raid into the Lebanese capital in which three top guerrilla leaders were assassinated. The United States has denounced the allegation as reminiscent of the "big lie" tactics of Adolf Hitler's Nazi Germany.

Armed saboteurs overpowered four guards and used time bombs to set fire to two oil storage tanks in the tank farm owned by the Trans-Arabian Pipeline Co., or Tapline. A doctor who treated the guards said they identified their 11 assailants as Palestinians but an American oil official said the identity of the attackers remained a mystery.

The 1:00 a.m. attack on the huge oil facility at Zahrani, about six miles south of Sidon and about 30 miles south of Beirut, followed repeated calls by Palestinian leaders for attacks on American property in the Middle East as a reprisal for Tuesday's Israeli raid on Beirut.

WAFA emphatically denied any guerrilla responsibility and said the attack was the work of Israeli commandos who landed on the shore near the storage tank farm. The agency claimed it warned Lebanese police an hour before the attack that "concentrations of Israeli land

HOME TO THE SEA FOR LISA THE SEAL

Lisa the seal, who's really a him and not a her, was returned to the sea yesterday.

The mammal, which had been cared for at the Louise A. Boyd Marin Museum of Science in San Rafael since being found battered and bleeding on a Sausalito beach Feb. 4, was crated up and driven at Ano Nuevo state preserve in San Mateo County.

At the site, a breeding ground for elephant seals Lisa at first seemed perplexed and hesitant with the surroundings but finally, with a slap on the behind from museum curator Lloyd Smalley, waddled into the ocean.

Release of the seal, originally mistaken for a female by museum officials, culminated a long effort to nurse the mammal back to health.

Smalley said yesterday the young elephant seal had gained substantial weight on a bolstered diet at the museum, and was fit for reunion with her native habitat.

Loan To Be Sought For Railway Rights

By PAUL E. PETERZELL

Golden Gate Bridge District directors, rejecting objections from the City of Mill Valley, voted unanimously yesterday to seek a $1 milion federal loan to start purchase of abandoned railroad rights-of-way through Mill Valley, Corte Madera and Larkspur. (See another bridge story, page 3.)

The sentiment of the full board was evident in director Dean N. Meyer's warning that the rights-of-way "should never be lost to public use."

Transit plans by the district and county long have eyed the rights-of-way for future transit use. For almost as many years, master planning by the City of Mill Valley has looked to eventual removal of the line, which runs through a city recreation area and next to a new school.

No new testimony was taken yesterday, but the Mill Valley City Council voted only Tuesday night to oppose any rapid transit use of the right-of-way through the city.

A 1972 state law pushed quietly through the Legislature by the bridge district empowered it to ignore such opposition. It was unclear, however, whether the city's objections could convince the federal government to refuse the loan.

The district had delayed action for months on seeking the federal loan, hoping it could win over the Mill Valley City Council. The district's staff cautioned further delay could mean some of the rights-of-way will be sold before they can be bought by the district.

Robert E. Shields, the district's engineer, said no long-range transit system will work without the rights-of-way, especially the one east of Highway 101 in Corte Madera. The district hopes to use the Mill Valley line as a feeder to the main trunk.

Even the present bus system could use the line east of the freeway within two years, Shields estimated.

The $1 million loan would be to start appraisals and purchase of the rights-of-way, he said.

Shields said that running transit down the median strip of highways could not substitute for exclusive rights-of-way. The Division of Highways, he said, is far too slow to meet district needs, "the loss of control of the district's operations undesirable, and the outcome far too uncertain."

$400 Taken At Gunpoint At Theater

Two men in their middle 20s took $400 at gunpoint last night from employees at the Cinema I theater in Corte Madera.

Police said the robbers went into the manager's office in the theater lobby at about 10:30 p.m. and told him that one of them had lost a wallet. One of the men then pulled a revolver and ordered everyone in the office but the manager to step outside.

Before leaving with money kept in the office, the robbers herded the manager and other employees into a storage room and told them to wait 10 minutes. Three minutes after they left, the manager called police.

No witnesses saw how the men left or spotted a getaway car. One robber was described as having a mustache and wearing a dark leather jacket. The other, with shoulder length hair, wore a purple shirt, witnesses said.

CHEAP, NUTRITIOUS

Next Time Try Rabbit For That Main Course

By PAT ANGLE

Marin residents looking for ways to stretch their meat dollar might consider inviting the Easter bunny for dinner — as the main course.

Not only is rabbit meat nutritious and delicious, according to Philip L. Fritchey of Bolinas, but it will cost the amateur rabbit raiser only about 25 or 35 cents a pound to grow his own.

"Rabbits are clean and quiet and easy to raise because they require a minimum of care," said Fritchey, a director of the Sonoma-Marin Rabbit Association. "My wife and I spend about 15 or 20 minutes a day feeding our 11 animals, watering them and cleaning their cages. It's very light work, too."

Not only that, but initial investment for a would-be rabbit farmer is small — about $55 — and the animals can be successfully raised and bred in a very small area, less than 30 square feet.

A trio of good "meat bred" rabbits may be purchased for as little as $15, Fritchey said, while all wire, self-cleaning hutches for use inside garages or sheds will cost between $20 and $30.

He said feed is not terribly expensive and the enterprising grower can produce his own from a small backyard garden, stock beets for winter feed and green leafy vegetables and root crops for summer feed.

In addition, rabbits — which are strictly vegetarian — will consume all kinds of garden trimmings and vegetable kitchen scraps.

As an added bonus, a good breeding rabbit can produce more meat per year than a cow, up to 250 pounds in accelerated breeding programs. The average backyard breeker, though, may expect only about 140 to 175 pounds per year.

Rabbit meat tastes something like chicken, except that the meat is denser and has a better flavor and the animal has smaller bones, according to John O. Williams, anothem Bolinas resident who shares Fritchey's enthusiasm for the activity, "It's better than chicken because it's all white meat," he said.

The Fritcheys have their home-grown meat about three times a week and enjoy it immensely.

Marsha Fritchey has been collecting rabbit recipes ever since the family started raising them about a year ago. She now has about 280 of them, including ones for such intriguing-sounding dishes as rabbit paprika, rabbit and sour cream, rabbit and dumplings, stuffed rabbit with cranberry glaze, sweet and sour rabbit, rabbit ala bourguignone and arroz con conejo.

"We haven't tried them all. But she hasn't made one yet that wasn't great," said Fritchey with a grin.

And not only is the meat good, but it's good for you — even better than beef — according to a Department of Agriculture pamphlet. It has more protein than more expensive beef (25.5 per cent, compared to 18.3 per cent per portion), according to the booklet, and fewer calories — 627 as compared to 1,130.

The inevitable question arises: How can anyone bear to kill and eat those delightful, gentle, furry little creatures?

Fritchey has an answer for the tender-hearted, although he laughingly admits "it may be a rationalization."

"I believe the greatest achievement of any creature is fulfilling its function on the earth," he said. "An animal's function is to provide food and we allow it to do that, then we are one step closer to understanding what life is all about."

Fritchey, on the other hand, is shocked that people are considering turning to horsemeat to save money, "I can't see why anybody who is contemplating eating horses should be squeamish about rabbits. The idea of that turns me off completely; I don't even feed horsemeat to my dog."

As meat prices have risen, so has interest in rabbit breeding and eating. A Southern California chain of restaurants, called "Mr. Rabbit," is becoming popular.

Since rabbit meat is not that great a bargain in the stores ($1.20 to $1.59), Fritchey is convinced that raising one's own is the only way to beat high prices. "Prices are not going to be low for anything — including horsemeat — if it's left in the hands of the commercial producer."

Not everyone can follow his advice, of course, because some cities — like Sausalito — frown on rabbit growing in the city limits. But others, like San Ra-

A Sharp Quake In Costa Rica

SAN JOSE, Costa Rica (UPI) — A major earthquake shook the border area between Costa Rica and Nicaragua before dawn today, killing at least one person and causing heavy but localized damage in rural areas.

The National Earthquake Information Center in Boulder, Colo., registered the quake's force at 6.7 on the open-ended Richter Scale, fractionally higher than the killer quake that devastated Nicaragua's capital, Manaugua, Dec. 23, 1972.

Officials said the epicenter was located at the city of Tilaran, about 75 miles northwest of San Jose, the capital. The quake zone was located about 120 miles southeast of Managua.

Power Outage In Southern Marin

A cable failure yesterday resulted in a power outage in Tiburon and part of Belvedere lasting several hours and affecting 3,703 consumers.

The power failed at 9:55 a.m., with most of the customers getting back service by 12:37 p.m. and all by 2:08 p.m., according to Pacific Gas and Electric Co.

During the failure, Tiburon firemen were called out to rescue Letah Mealy of 25 Raleigh Circle, Tiburon, who was trapped in an elevator at 1690 Tiburon Boulevard. The call was at 11:56 a.m. and she was freed in about 35 minutes, firemen said.

Post Card Vote Sparks A Filbuster In Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — For the past four days the Senate has been debating whether every eligible voter in America ought to be able to register by a simple postcard.

The idea of a national register-by-mail program for federal elections isn't new. The Senate defeated such a bill last year, 46-42.

Fearful that this time there are enough votes to pass it, a bloc of Republicans and southern Democrats have been carrying on a determined filibuster in an effort to kill the bill.

Yesterday, Sen. Gale McGee, D-Wyo., the bill's chief sponsor, said he would file a cloture petition to shut off debate if critics continued "their dilatory tactics."

The bill would create a special office in the Census Bureau to mail postcard-sized voter registration forms to each household every two years.

Eligible voters could simply fill out the card and mail it to their local registrar who would be reimbursed for the processing and tabulating costs by the federal treasury.

The measure is aimed primarily at federal elections but carries a financial incentive for the states to adopt the postcard system to register voters for local and state elections as well.

The Census Bureau has estimated that the program's start-up costs will run about $30 million.

McGee and other supporters say that some 62 million voting age Americans did not vote in last year's election.

They argue that perhaps as many as 40 million do not register to vote because of what McGee called "cumbersome, onerous and unnecessary" local registration procedures. Registration offices are open at inconvenient hours. They are inaccessible to the old, the handicapped and those who do not drive, McCgee says.

The administration opposes the measure, which some say would benefit Democrats by registering large blocks of blue-collar workers who tend to vote Democratic.

But the reasons given by Sen. Hiram Fong, R-Hawaii, who is leading GOP opposition to the bill, are that the measure is "radical," "expensive" and just won't work.

The major cause of millions of citizens not registering is "apathy," he told the Senate.

A Census Bureau survey of 50,000 households after the 1968 presidential election showed that more than half of those not registered—53.3 per cent —"did not register because they were not interested, never got around to registering or disliked politics," Fang said.

Red Abandon Major Highway In Cambodia

PHNOM PENH (UPI) — Communist troops today abandoned their positions along a 17-mile stretch of vital Highway 1, field reports said, following 38 consecutive days of pounding by U.S. warplanes.

The field reports said the Communist withdrew to the east bank of the Mekong, leaving the 32 miles of Highway 1 between here and the important base of Neak Luong on the Mekong, plus long stretches of the river's west bank, in government hands. The route is the main highway link between Saigon and Phnom Penh, all but cut off from fuel, water and food supplies since early March. ,

"It looks like the bombing has finally put a damper on their little offensive," said one Western military man. "They've lost their stride now and I think we've got this one licked."

Other military analysts agreed that the momentum, which had carried the Communists to within 15 miles of Phnom Penh during the past 74 days, had been broken and that the Communists now would either retreat into their sanctuary areas to regroup or would concentrate their activities against remaining government strongholds in the outlying provinces.

In Saigon, the Viet Cong warned that any South Vietnamese troop movement into Cambodia to relieve pressure on besieged Phnom Penh would result in "failure."

U.S. B52 bombers and F111 fighter-bombers consentrated their raids today on Highway 1 and on Communist positions round Takeo, a provincial capital 55 miles south of Phnom Penh.

Command spokesman Col. Am Rong said 100 mortar rounds hit Takeo during the night, and early today the Communists started shelling the town with captured U.S. made 105-mm howitzers. The Communists earlier in the day broke through government defense lines in their two-day drive to recapture the embattled provincial capital as fighting continued on.

Cambodian President Nguyen Van Thieu returned from a two-week trip abroad today to a roaring airport welcome and said he and President Nixon agreed that "peace in Vietnam includes peace in Cambodia and Laos."

Saigon's sun-drenched Tan Son Nhut airport was packed with more than 50,000 cheering, flag-waving civil servants, political workers, members of youth groups, school children and ranks of servicemen when Thieu arrived from Korea and Taiwan just before 4 a.m. EST.

Thieu reviewed a military guard of honor and then gave a 20-minute speech.

He said, "The United States has promised .us from now to the end of 1973 to give us everything we need to replace what has been destroyed in the war and to form the base for an economic takeoff."

Thieu said, "In San Clemente, President Nixon and I decided that if the Communists continued to bring in weapons and ammunition and to violate the basic provisions of the Paris agreement, we on the allied side would have to take an appropriate reactin."

Nixon Selects New Boss For Census Bureau

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon has nominated Vincent R. Barabba to head the U.S. Census Bureau.

Barabba, 38, chairman of Decision Making Information Inc., of Los Angeles, a firm which did some public opinion polling for Nixon during the 1972 campaign, was named to succeed George Hay Brown who resigned Jan. 30 from the $36,000-a-year job.

Nixon also:

Nominated John M. Porges, 50, a banker who lives at Douglas Manor, N.Y., to be executive director of the Inter-American Development Bank.

Air Crash Blamed On Human Error

SUNNYVALE, Calif. (UPI) — A Navy patrol plane was practicing "touch and go" landings, possibly with a student pilot at the controls, when it collided with a space agency jet in an inflight accident that took 16 lives, military investigators report.

They say it is not clear whether Lt. Stephen A. Schwarting, 28, Santa Clara, Calif., or the unidentified student was flying the P3C Orion sub chaser when the two planes crashed onto a golf course 30 miles south of San Francisco Thursday.

The commander of the Navy's Pacific Air Fleet said yesterday that human error — and not mechanical problems or aircraft failure—was to blame for the mishap.

"Of course, someone made an error," said Rear Adm. Herbert S. Ainsworth. "We have to look to personnel."

The Navy patrol plane, with six men aboard, and NASA's Convair 990 flying laboratory, carrying 11 men, plunged onto the 12th fairway of Sunnyvale Municipal Golf Course and exploded into flames. One Navy airman was thrown free and survived, although he remained in criticial condition with multiple injuries.

The Navy declined to identify the student pilot pending notification of his next of kin of his death.

Ainsworth declined at a news conference at Moffett Field, where the two planes were trying to land, to discuss the exact sequence of events which led to the crash, saying investigators must first examine flight recorders and conversations between the planes and airport tower.

But investigators said the patrol plane, which had been on a routine patrol flight over the Pacific, was practicing "touch and go" landings—landing and taking off without stopping—before the accident.

The NASA plane, a $5 million lab which recently completed a joint three-week study of the Bering Sea with the Russians, was returning from a checkout flight for its new assignmentrecording of sea mammal migrations from the air.

Exploratory Nod Is Given To Santa Barbara Drilling

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Interior Department has taken a step toward possible resumption of large-scale oil production in the Santa Barbara Channel off the California coast, where there was a major oil spill in 1969.

Secretary of Interior Walter J. Hickel suspended drilling after the 1969 spill. Production has resumed on five platforms since then.

The Interior Department yesterday authorized oil companies holding federal leases in the channel to "unitize" 34 tracts for purposes of exploratory and production drilling. This means one company would conduct joint drilling operations for the group.

But a spokesman said that in most cases the companies would have to submit plans for approval before beginning even exploratory drilling.

The department said public hearings would probably have to be held and environmental statements prepared and that exploratory drilling probably could not begin until late 1974 or 1975.

On March 31, the department authorized unitization of 20 other tracts by Gulf, Texaco and Standard Oil of California. Drilling on one tract has begun.

In Santa Barbara, Alvin Weingand, chairman of Get Oil Out (GOO), formed after the 1969 spill, said his organization does not object to exploratory drilling as long as there is no further production.

"We can find out what the resources are, and then keep them in reserve for a national crisis," he said.

Diamond Haul

LONDON (UPI) — A bandit hitched a ride on a truck traveling without armed protection at Heathrow Airport yesterday and then stole $1.2 million in diamonds and platinum from the vehicle.

The driver of the British Overseas Airways Corp. (BOAC) truck said later he gave the man a ride before he thought he was an airport employe.

It was one of the biggest robberies ever staged at the giant airport, police said.

A Picasso Stolen

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — Authorities searched today for a small painting by Pablo Picasso valued at $85,000 that was stolen from the St. Louis Art Museum.

The painting was discovered missing late Wednesday afternoon, police said, but its disappearance was not revealed until yesterday. Police said the 14 inch by 8 inch painting entitled "Nude" was taken along with its frame from where it was hanging on display with two other Picasso paintings.

The work was done in 1906 during Picasso's rose period.

Lady Bird Visits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Lsdy Bird Johnson, on her first visit here since her husband's death, inspected a grassy plot beside the Potomac yesterday where friends plan to build a memorial to the late President Lyndon B. Johnson.

She then visited Pat Nixon at the White House, and the two strolled through the gardens there.

Laurance Rockefeller, conservationist and one of the originators of the memorial idea, said it would be financed with contributions from friends.

To Resume Monday

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Pentagon Papers trial, delayed more than two days becuase of a defense attorney's illness, was expected to resume Monday with Daniel Ellsberg telling the jury why he took the Vietnam war documents.

Ellsberg, charged with theft, conspiracy and espionage in connection with the leak of the Pentagon Papers to the news media, had just reached the point in his testimony Wednesday where he was about to reveal why he took them from the Rand Corp. "think tank." But his attorney, Leonard Boudin, 60, who has a heart condition and wears a pacemaker, complained of feeling ill and the trial was adjourned.

Hits Selection

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Rep. Henry S. Reuss, D-Wis., has accused President Nixon of naming a "Republican hatchet man" to a high Commerce Department post.

Reuss issued a statement challenging the qualifications of Edward D. Failor, named administrator of the department's Social and Economic Statistics Administration.

"Mr. Nixon misreads his mandate from the people if he thinks it is a license to load his administration with political hacks," said Reuss.

Latin Tour Set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — President Nixon is sending Secretary of State William P. Rogers on a Latin American goodwill tour in mid or late May.

Nixon confirmed the trip during a White House reception yesterday for delegates attending the third Inter-American General Assembly which ends today.

Reagan Task Force Outlay Is Revealed

SACRAMENTO (AP) — State welfare and disability insurance funds were spent without legal authority on Gov. Ronald Reagan's tax limitation plan, a report of the state auditor general says.

Although the report was delivered to six members of the Joint Legislative Audit Committee April 6, it has not been released to the public or other legislators.

A copy of the 60-page report obtained by The Associated Press confirms accusations made over the past three weeks by critics of the Republican governor that "proper accounting procedures" were not followed when his administration signed two contracts for $52,000 to develop the tax plan.

But the report raises no new issues and says that the auditor general can neither confirm nor disprove allegations that a total of more than $100,000 in state funds were spent improperly to develop the controversial plan.

Democratic Assemblyman John Burton of San Francisco, who requested the audit, said he believes Republican members of the audit committee are attempting to suppress the report to save Reagan embarrassment.

"It's my understanding that Republican members of the committee won't authorize its release. It's Coombs and Deukmejian," Burton said. "There must be something pretty terrible in it," he added.

Sen. William Coombs of Rialto was reported at home sick and Sen. George Deukmejian of Long Beach denied that there was any intent to suppress the auditor general's report.

"That's not true at all. The report just reached me yesterday, and I haven't had a chance to read it," Deukmejian said.

The report supports allegations that the Reagan administration used welfare and disability insurance funds to pay for salaries and research of members of the task force.

Leadership Of Hongisto Is Attacked

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Sheriff Richard Hongisto's new policies have done more harm than good and a special board should be established to help run the sheriff's department, the grand jury said yesterday.

"The overall administration of the sheriff's department leaves a great deal to be desired," the jury said in its 17-page report to the board of supervisors. "The sheriff instituted policies that caused more problems than they solved."

But Hongisto replied: "I am not at all surprised at the report. I deplore the inaccuracies and biased perspective of the report."

The sheriff said he filed suit Thursday "detailing the factors I believe lead to the bias of the grand jury, asking that the grand jury be disbanded."

The report charged that Hongisto's deputies "believe he spends too little time administering his office and too much time on political activity."

Poor administrative coordination between the sheriff and his staff was "one of the main contributory causes" to the Feb. 25 riot at the main jail in San Bruno, the jurors charged.

The report said that prior to the riot there appeared to be "a complete breakdown of inmate discipline due to lack of positive direction from responsible officials.

"Lack of consistency on the part of some deputies, in the enforcement of the alleged rules and regulations, enforced the feeling among inmates that rule infractions would be overlooked," it said.

The grand jury criticized Hongisto's educational rehabilitation program and urged that it be discontinued in its present form.

In their report, the jurors charged that Hongisto had been informed of a "demonstration" planned for Feb. 25 and noted "there is some indication that one or two deputies may have conducted themselves improperly during the riot."

The jury said it wants to make sure Hongisto prosecutes those responsible for the Feb. 25 damage.

Japan Expected To Curb Lumber Buying

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Faced with mounting pressure for a ban on American lumber exports, Japan was reported yesterday ready to voluntarily curb its purchases.

Sen. Alan Cranston, D-Calif., said he had been informed by the State Department of Japan's move, but he had no other details.

Cranston made the disclosure at the start of a third day of hearings by a Senate Banking Subcommittee into legislation he and Sen. Bob Packwood, R-Ore., have proposed. It would bar the export of logs from public lands beginning Jan. 1 next year and from private lands by 1977.

Japan's purchase of logs, amounting to 2.7 billion board feet in 1972 and running at a rate of 4 ½ billion board feet this year, have been blamed for skyrocketing prices of lumber. Washington State provides 82 per cent of the logs for export and the remainder comes from other Pacific Coast States.

Harry Bridges, president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's men's and Warehousemen's Union, strongly opposed the proposed ban. His union's members held one-day strikes in West Coast ports to coincide with the subcommittee hearings.

The ban, Bridges told the senators, would mean the loss of 16,000 jobs in Washington and a lesser number in California and Oregon.

While longshoremen picketed outside the building where the hearing was held, Bridges said: "Entire communities might be wiped out if the log export ban passes. Others would obviously be hard hit."

He said the ban would benefit only a handful of mill operators and homebuilders. The problem could be solved.

movement from 1966 to 1970, also worked with the Black Panthers.

Turner helped set up health and education programs for the panthers for a year and Miss Yockey was arrested twice during Berkeley demonstrations and went to Cuba in 1970 to harvest sugar cane for Fidel Castro.

The judge's comments followed arguments by defense attorneys, each of whom echoed Mrs. Kline's attorney, Paul Harris, "I have a feeling no one is concerned with rehabilitation and deterrence here," Harris said. "I have a feeling what the judicial system is concerned with is retribution."

Deputy Public Defender Buford L. Toney, representing Turner, urged the judge to "treat him as others have been treated" by giving him probation and nine months or a year in jail.

However, Deputy Dist. Atty. Ernest C. Zunino said the four received a break when the judge reduced the charge over the district Attorney's opposition.

The reduction also did not sit well with the Citizens for Law and Order, a 1,500-member Oakland group, which issued a press release denouncing the reduction as "not in the best interest of justice."

The group's president, Earl W. Huntting said his group is interested because Miss Kline was acquitted in Oakland last August in a celebrated bomb possession case filed after a 22-uear-old Black Panther was killed by an explosion in her car.

Turner testified that they went to the market to take money "because of the frustration we have been going through for the last four to five months with the school."

The Marin City Learning Center, started by parents dissatisfied with education in the Sausalito School District, had dwindled from about 40 children to about a dozen by December because of financial problems, according to Turner.

"I regret what we did only in terms of the means we used to achieve the ends," Turner said.

Turner said it was hoped violence could be avoided during the robbery. Women were used, he said, because "it was almost impossible a police officer would shoot a female." Although he conceded the possibility "somebody could have gotten hurt," he said, "The whole idea was fear, not necessarily violence."

Toney called four charcacter witnesses for Turner, who was married in jail Thursday to Lee Vella Bland, a former Marin City Councilman . The four, including Berkeley City Councilman D'Army Bailey, praised Turner's social work, oth with the Black Panthers and after he left the group last year. All agreed he is not a violent man.

The probation officers, however, concluded the three sentenced yesterday had set themselves up as judges of the community and were willing to do anything for goals they considered worthy.

"I feel the instant offense represents perhaps the pinnacle of her confrontation with society," Mrs. De Cerbo said of Miss Yockey. The probation officials believed that no program at the local level would alter their attitudes.

McGuire noted all four were outstanding students from good families who had rejected what their parents believe in. "They have all become alienated," he said.

Hearing Set On Home Entry

A 21-year-old Fairfax man, allegedly startled inside a San Rafael house by the returning homeowner, is to appear Tuesday in Marin Municipal Court for a preliminary hearing.

Richard Sheldon Knowles was arrested April 6 after Paul Hillesheim of 50 Miraflores Avenue flushed a man from his home. Knowles fled, but Hillesheim cornered him in bushes nearby and turned him over to officers, according to San Rafael police.

A gun taken from the home was found outside, police said.

Hearing Set In Burglary Case

A preliminary hearing has been scheduled for April 24 for a 23-year-old San Anselmo man charged with breaking into a San Rafael glass business.

Ordered to appear in Marin Municipal Court on that date was Flynn William Harris, arrested April 6 by San Rafael police on Fourth Street after witnesses gave them a description of the man who peeled off metal siding of the Golden West Glass Co. at 915 Lincoln Avenue.

Inmate At Quentin Is Found Dead

A San Quentin inmate, who had suffered from terminal cancer, was found dead in his cell yesterday with a red bandana wrapped tightly around his neck.

Prison officials said that a medical officer making his rounds discovered the body of Harry M. Howser, 54, in a locked cell on the third floor of the adjustment center. Howser had refused an operation for a tumor of the left lung, and the coroner is trying to determine whether the tumor or self-strangulation caused the death.

Prison official William Drummond said that Howser was moved from the Correctional Institute at Tehachapi earlier this year for an operation but refused surgery. He was moved to the adjustment center in "protective custody" after he complained to guards he had enemies in the prison and did not feel safe in the hospital, Drummond said.

Howser, originally convicted in Los Angeles for first degree robbery in 1951, was convicted again in 1957 for robbery while on parole. He was sentenced to a term of from one year to life after an escape from Folsom Prison in 1961.

He was paroled twice more but was sent back each time for violating parole.

Felony Charge Is Reduced

The district attorney has reduced a felony burglary charge against Lee Allan Bramson, 24, of San Rafael, because of evidence problems, according to Deputy Dist. Atty. Kathryn D. Mitchell.

Bramson, charged with burglarizing the restaurant he works in, denied the charge and is to appear in Marin Municipal Court Wednesday for a pretrial conference.

San Anselmo police arrested Bramson March 11 when he reported to work in muddy boots that may have made prints on the roof of the Cafe Ambrosia at 112 Spaulding Avenue.

The prints apparently were left by a burglar who smashed a window and took $650 from the cafe's cash register earlier in the day.

Beating Probe Arrest Made

Sheriff's deputies arrested a Marin City woman last night for reportedly beating her husband with a police-type hard leather club in a domestic dispute.

Deputies said that they responded to an anonymous phone call at about midnight and found Marie Dean, 44, of 69 Cole Drive, Apt. 5, fighting with her husband William, 48, in the 300 block of Drake Avenue in Marin City.

She was booked at Marin County Jail on a charge of assault with a deadly weapon and was scheduled to appear in Marin Municipal Court Monday. No bail had been set.

Subdivisions Before Council

Subdivision plans for 323 new homes will be considered at the Rohnert Park City Council meeting Monday at 7 p.m. at city hall.

Final maps by Gentry Development Corp., Condiotti Enterprises and Forhim Corp. will be considered. All are in the Country Club Estates area.

The council also will hear a request by Rodavco Inc. for single-family zoning on 18 acres south of the city golf course.

and naval forces had been sighted" near Sidon.

Nearly 12 hours after the start of the spectacular blaze, which destroyed two 100,000-barrel-capacity tanks, typewritten leaflets were deposited in Beirut newspaper offices. They were signed by an organization styling itself the Lebanese Revolutionary Guard and claimed responsibility for the attack.

The leaflet attacked the Lebanese government, currently in a state of crisis because of the resignation of Premier Saeb Salam in protest against army inaction in face of the Israeli strike last Tuesday. It said the Revolutionary Guard aimed at "destroying our national and class enemy with organized and armed violence."

The leaflet said the attack on the oil installations was aimed at the "dishonorable American-Saudi Arabia-Lebanese alliance which is directed against the freedom of our people and its independence." It denounced the "hireling" Beirut government which it said had opened "its borders, coasts and skies to the Israeli enemy" and turned Lebanon "into a focus of corruption and a playground for hirelings and spies. . . ."

RABBITS

fael, Mill Valley, Fairfax and Tiburon permit them, with some restrictions. The County of Marin allows each homeowner or renter to have 12 rabbits on his property.

There are few pitfalls to rabbit breeding, Fritchey said, since the animals are susceptible to very few diseases and are fairly adaptable to normal temperatures.

"The biggest problem is that they reproduce so prolifically. If you are careless with your animals or decide you don't want to use them for meat, you are going to end up with a whole lot of rabbits."

Tiburon Driver Hurt In Crash

A Tiburon man was hospitalized last night with a possible broken pelvis and rib injuries received in a two-car crash at Lucas Valley and Mount Lassen roads in Lucas Valley.

Earl H. Kissinger, 64, of 206 Trestle Glen Terrace, was reported in fair condition today at Marin General Hospital.

The California Highway Patrol said Kissinger's auto, southbound on Mount Lassen and another, northbound on Lucas Valley, collided about 10:45 p.m. The second car was operated by Nicholas W. Dollwet, 16, of 1150 Idylberry Road, San Rafael.

Condition Of Driver Is Good

A Nicasio man was reported in good condition today at Novato General Hospital with a broken arm and facial cuts received in a two-car crash at 10:35 a.m. yesterday near Novato.

The California Highway Patrol said Manuel D. Pinheiro, 24, was hurt when his westbound auto collided head-on with an eastbound vehicle on the Point Reyes-Petaluma Road west of Novato Boulevard.

Officers said the second car, driven by Wallace F. Krueger, 20, of 1109 Third Street, Novato, had crossed the road's center line on a curve.

Plans For New Meat Price Fight

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A coalition of consumer groups is threatening to organize two more weeks of food boycotts in May if Congress does not roll back prices to Jan. 10 levels by then.

Leaders of a newly created National Consumer Congress, composed of groups which organized the nationwide meat boycott earlier this month, told a news conference yesterday another meat boycott is being planned for the first week in May and another on fish and poultry for the following week.

Meanwhile, Agriculture Secretary Earl L. Butz said in Paris that American housewives had succeeded by the April boycott in pulling down beef prices.

"But when I give the housewives credit for bringing down some meat prices, I give them credit for pushing them up," Butz said. He explained that Americans will continue to eat meat and push the prices up again.

Butz, attending a meeting of the 23-nation Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development (OECD), said European meat prices are higher than in this country.

Mrs. Jan Alfaro, of Logan, Utah, temporary chairman of the consumer coalition, said the May boycotts were authorized at a meeting here Wednesday attended by representatives of 50 boycott groups around the country.

The House will act next week on a bill that would roll back food and other prices and interest rates to March 16 levels. It would return rents to Jan. 10 levels.

Mrs. Alfaro said reverting food prices only to March 16 would not be enough.

"Passage of this bill would only encourage a rise in food prices," she said. "Some of our key commodities are lower today than they were March 16."

Trial Set On Original Count

A Mill Valley man, who had pleaded guilty to a reduced misdemeanor charge in a 1972 shooting, will have a trial after all—on the original felony count.

Judge Henry J. Broderick of Marin Superior Court voided the plea by Ephorn Freeman Jr., 28, because his attorney James Murray argued he is innocent.

Freeman had admitted a misdemeanor charge of using a gun during a quarrel on condition he received no more than 90 days in jail, but must now stand trial on a felony charge of assault with a deadly weapon.

Judge Broderick continued the case to May 7 to set a trial date.

Freeman, a self-employed vitamin salesman, allegedly wounded 21-year-old Charles Dobson of Mill Valley Nov. 17 during an argument in Lytton Square in Mill Valley.

Puppet Show Set At Library

A puppet show in the children's room of the San Rafael Public Library will replace the regular story hour for 4 to 7 year olds at 10:30 a.m. Tuesday.

Puppeteers Kathy Sternberg and Peggy Manuel will act out several stories for the youngsters.

The usual story hour will be postponed to 10:30 a.m. Wednesday, for the one time only.

Plea Of Innocent To Marijuana

A 23-year-old Woodside man has pleaded innocent in Marin Municipal Court to a felony charge of possessing marijuana and is to appear Tuesday for preliminary hearing.

James Lionel Traube was arrested Sunday at Howard Johnson's Motel on Shoreline Highway.

Louis Jack Katzberg, 25, and Janice Kay Katzberg, 24, both of no known address, were arrested at the same time on suspicion of having drugs for sale and conspiracy, but have not been charged pending further investigation.

Sheriff's Deputy John Goff reportedly found about a pound of suspected pot in the back seat of Traube's car, then went to the motel room housing the Katzbergs and arrested them after he saw traces of white powder on Katzberg's hands and plastic bags of suspected drugs in the bathroom.

Six Killed In Crash Of Plane

GREENSBORO, N.C. (UPI) — A twin-engine plane on a test flight for prospective buyers crashed near a dinner theater 20 seconds after takeoff last night, killing all six persons aboard.

The blue and white Cessna 310 appeared to go almost straight up before its lights went out and it fell 500 feet from the end of the runway at Triad Regional Airport, witnesses said.

Deputy Sgt. John Wray said when he arrived at the scene "the plane was totally in flames and the area around it was in flames."

"It was down here on a test flight," said Wray, "and these men were thinking of buying the plane."

THE BYRD MACHINE

An Era Ends In Virginia Politics

RICHMOND, Va. (UPI) — The Byrd Democratic machine is dead.

For decades, the political machine built by the late Sen. Harry Byrd dominated Virginia politics from the courthouse to the statehouse.

Political pundits have been writing obituaries for the organization since a Republican, Gov. Linwood Holton, took control of the statehouse in 1969 and when Sen. Harry F. Byrd Jr. was re-elected in 1970 as an independent rather than face a possible loss in the Democratic primary.

Some observers believed the machine would make a comeback.

But now, in a state were the blessing of the Byrd machine once automatically meant election, not a single candidate filed to run as governor in this year's Democratic primary.

Only two candidates filed for statewide posts as Democrats this year—neither for the governorship.

Virginia's top-ranking Democrat, Attorney General Andrew P. Miller, filed for re-election after turning down party efforts to get him to run for governor, and State Sen. J. Harry Michael of Charlottesville filed for lieutenant governor. Since both are unopposed, there will be no statewide primary.

Holton is prohibited by Virginia's constitution from succeeding himself as governor.

This year's governor's race likely will be between two former Democrats—Lt. Gov. Henry Howell and former Gov. Mills Godwin.

Howell made an unsuccessful bid for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination in 1969, campaigning on pocketbook issues with a pledge to "Keep the Big Boys Honest." He garnered support from both liberals and supporters of Alabama Gov. George Wallace.

Howell dropped out of the Democratic party in 1971 when party officials decided to abandon the primary and pick a candidate for lieutenant governor by convention. Running as an independent, he defeated both the Democratic and Republican candidates in the race. Howell will run as an independent again this year.

Godwin, once a lieutenant in the conservative Byrd organization, was Virginia campaign manager for President Nixon in last year's election. He le a conservative stampede out of the party when liberals grabbed control of the state organization.

Godwin has announced he would accept the Republican nomination for governor, but said he would run as an independent if he does not get it. The Republicans choose their candidate by convention this summer—and Godwin is expected to get the nomination easily.

Shooting Case Hearing Set

A preliminary hearing has been scheduled for Tuesday for a 56-year-old Oregon man charged with shooting at an occupied house during a dispute over a dog.

Ordered to appear for hearing in Marin Municipal Court was Edgar Jack Storey of Gresham, arrested April 7 by Corte Madera police.

The police said Storey went to the Alexis Sill home at 11 Birch Court to retrieve a Doberman pinscher dog, but fired three shots through the front door of the home and left.

Hearing For Sailor Canceled

A preliminary hearing for a 26-year-old sailor charged with auto theft was canceled yesterday in favor of a 72-hour commitment to the Marin Community Mental Health Center.

Judge Peter Allen Smith of Marin Municipal Court ordered a psychiatric evaluation of Daniel Leon Welborn and put off setting another hearing on the felony charge until the report is completed.

Welborn, of Treasure Island, was turned over to Novato police April 4 after a highway patrolman stopped him the day before in a car apparently stolen there.

In his pocket were keys to a 1972 Corvette stolen the day before from Empire Chevrolet in Novato, police said.

Actress Will Lead A Red China Tour

HOLLYWOOD (UPI) — Actress Shirley MacLaine and 11 other American women will start a tour of the People's Republic of China next Tuesday to learn more about Chinese women.

The actress said Friday the tour will last several weeks. She said the purpose of the visit is to meet with Chinese women on an informal basis to exchange ideas and information on life-styles.

San Rafael Rec Board Approves Proposed Budget

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Commission has approved a proposed budget for 1973-74 of $441,671, down $771 from this year's $442,382 spending program.

The proposal, which does not include cost-of-living increases for departmental employees, will now be considered by the city council, according to Andrew J. Snyder, parks and recreation director.

Snyder said the proposed budget does not provide for utility and communication costs since these will be included in a nondepartmental account handling such expenses for all city departments.

The parks and recreation commission approved the budget proposal Thursday, Snyder said, adding that commissioners asked that a proposed parks ranger at $886 per month and relocating and refurbishing of the Boyd House at a cost of about $32,000 be studied further. Remodeling of the Boyd House would cost about $20,000 and relocating it to level ground within Boyd Park would cost an additional $12,000, he said.

Proposed expenditures, with this year's figures in parenthesis, are administration, $40,211 ($39,546); parks, $191,541 ($213,147) and recreation, $209,819 ($189,699), he said. Snyder attributed the dip in proposed expenditures for parks to the shift in the utilities and communication account.

The San Rafael Parks and Recreation Commission also:

FENCING — Proposed that the city split a $1,600 fee with the San Rafael American Little League for fencing two baseball diamonds at Davidson School.

PEACOCK GAP — Recommended that the city study the feasibility of using the plateau area at the end of McNear Drive within the proposed Peacock Gap Unit 5 subdivision as a park and recreation area.

TENNIS — Said the county should give budgeting priority to a proposal for tennis and sports facilities at the proposed North Bay Front Park, before considering funding of Civic Center fairgrounds.

TOUR — Said the commission will tour all city parks on May 5.

ADJOURNMENT — Adjourned to 8 p.m. May 10 in city hall.

Dominican Is Cataloguing Oriental Books

A collection of some 1,200 volumes on Japan, China and the Pacific area donated to Dominican College is currently being catalogued at the school's Archbishop Alemany Library.

The books, named the Payson J. Treat Collection, were the gift of Mr. and Mrs. Richard M. Davis of San Rafael.

They were collected by the late Professor Treat, Mrs. Davis's uncle, who taught at Stanford University for many years.

Sister Marguerite Stanka, head librarian at the college, said the collection will lead the way to additional courses in Oriental studies at the college, and possibly, a major field of study in the future.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

By DR. THEODORE R. VAN DELLEN

Elderly Women Make Comeback From Life In Geriatric Home

The British Medical Journal recently told of two elderly sisters who were brought back to satisfactory living after spending a short time in a geriatric hospital. Mrs. Y. Z. had lived in London for 40 years. Although in her seventies, she had managed to care for her husband despite her failing memory. When he died suddenly, she became depressed and somewhat demented. As a result, she went to live with her 78-year-old sister, Miss A.B.

BUT MISS A.B. was far from well and hardly able to care for her sister. She complained of increasing weariness and unsteadiness. During the past six months, she had had attacks of pain and stiffness of the neck with headaches. In addition, she developed dizziness on getting out of bed and when bending down or hanging up the laundry. Several years ago, part of her stomach had been removed because of a stubborn peptic ulcer. Miss A. B. blamed her troubles on old age.

The family doctor sent her to a geriatric hospital where a thorough examination revealed several abnormalities. Her brain was not getting enough blood because of hardening and kinking of the arteries in the neck. In addition, she had arthritis of the neck vertebrae. Blood tests also showed that she had pernicious anemia which was treated with vitamin B12 and iron. He also prescribed an orthopedic collar to prevent the vertebral arteries from kinking. Improvement was dramatic.

Meanwhile, the local doctor found her sister, Mrs. Y.Z., in bed where she was determined to remain "partly to keep warm and partly to dream of the dear dead days." Because of her depressed state, hospitalization in the geriatric unit was also advised. Her doctors found that her skin was dry, the pulse slow, and her voice croaky. Tests revealed a very sluggish thyroid gland.

Following thyroxin, she felt better and was more alert. Social workers took care of their financial mess and — should we say "they lived happily ever after."

Questions on medical topics will be answered by mail if stamped, self-addressed envelope accompanies request to Dr. Van Dellen, c/o the Independent-Journal.

SLOW PULSE

H. writes: My 16-year-old son's pulse is only 50. The doctor says the boy's heart and health are good. Should we check further?

REPLY

Not if the heart and the electrocardiogram are normal. A slow pulse is an asset because the heart works with less effort. In addition, it gets more rest between beats. It is abnormal only when the heart rate cannot speed up to meet the demands of the body during exertion and excitement. The victim faints whenever he tries to walk to run faster. This occurs when the nervous mechanism is distrubed (heart block), a condition detected with the electrocardiogram.

MIGRAINE

E. G. writes: Can young children develop migraine headaches?

REPLY

They can and do. Vomiting, lassitude, paleness, and a family history of this type of headache help in making the diagnosis in infants and young children. Older children are better able to describe the one-sided headaches, spots before the eyes, dizziness, and other discomforts associated with migraine. Tension is a common cause. Send stamped, self-addressed envelope for our leaflet on migraine.

ALMANAC

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

Today is Saturday, April 14, the 104th day of 1973 with 261 to follow.

The moon is approaching its full phase. The morning stars are Mercury, Mars and Jupiter. The evening stars are Venus and Saturn.

British Antarctic explorer Sir James Clark was born April 14, 1800.

On this day in history:

In 1861, the flag of the Confederacy was raised over Fort Sumter, S.C., as Union troops there surrendered.

In 1865, John Wilkes Booth crept into the box of President Abraham Lincoln at Ford Theater in Washington and shot him. Lincoln died the next morning.

In 1910, President William Howard Taft set a precedent by throwing out the first baseball to open the major league season.

In 1965, 15-year-old Frank Mitchell became the first black page boy in the House of Representatives.

A thought for the day: British novelist Dinah Craik said: "Oh, my son's my son till he gets him a wife, but my daughter's my daughter all her life."

Jail Time On Grand Theft Count

Frank Dewey Haygood, 48, of no fixed address, has been ordered to serve a year in the county jail on a reduced charge of grand theft.

Judge Charles Read Best of Marin Superior Court reduced an armed robbery charge at the suggestion of Deputy Dist. Atty. Raymond E. Gilbert, who also recommended a state prison sentence.

Gilbert said he recommended the reduced charge because of evidence problems.

Haygood was arrested Jan. 22 in Sacramento, a week after Perry H. Stewart, owner of the Barrel House Tavern in San Rafael, was robbed of $1,600 by a man waving a pearl-handled revolver.

Stewart told police he thought the gunman was Haygood although the robber wore a silk stocking over his head. Haygood reportedly frequented the tavern.

KOREAN STUDENTS — Eager to learn English, Korean students and adults will learn the language from Agapa Movement staff members through the Bible and other evangelistic material.

(World Vision International Photo)

Bible Will Help Koreans Learn To Speak The English Language

It is not unique for the government of an Asian country to want to give its people the opportunity to learn conversational English. But it was definitely unique when Korean educators, under government approval, asked Dr. Joon Gon Kim, director in Korea for Campus Crusade for Christ International, to provide English teachers for the country's high schools, and invited them to use as tools the Bible and Campus Crusade materials.

Dr. Kim eagerly accepted and now "The Korean Project," as it is called, is scheduled to begin in the summer of 1973. Initial plans call for teams—each with 100 teachers, 10 supervisors and a director—to be based in Seoul and, as they become accustomed to Korean culture, to be transferred to other cities. A total staff of approximately 1,000 is anticipated.

Korean Project staff members will participate in the preparations for EXPLO '74, an International Student Congress on Evangelism to be held in Seoul in August, 1974, for an estimated 300,000. Staff will also be available to follow up individuals who respond to the claims of Christ during the 1973 Billy Graham Korea Crusade.

The Korean Project is part of widespread evangelistic efforts by Campus Crusade and other Christian groups and churches to help Korea become the first country in almost 2,000 years to be saturated with the gospel.

The project is an initial thrust of The Agape Movement, a ministry of Campus Crusade which will send Christian specialists—engineers, teachers, agriculture experts, doctors, nurses and others to various countries to help meet spiritual and physical needs of nationals and to train them to communicate their faith in Christ with their own countrymen.

Groundwork for The Korean Project was actually being laid during August, 1971, when more than 10,600 Korean laymen and students attended an evangelistic training institute in Taejon sponsored by Campus Crusade.

During the institute, as conferees were being trained to share their faith in Christ with others, 16,352 Taejon residents indicated that they prayed to receive Christ. Among them were 170 Buddhist high school girls who had volunteered as street guides for the conferees.

The excitement of those who were trained mushroomed as, after the institute, 72 additional county- and city-wide institutes were held across Korea during the remaining three weeks of August.

Because more than one-half (17 million) of South Koreans live in rural areas, an evangelistic Village Plan has also been initiated. One of those reached for Christ through this plan is Kim Yang Sung, a primary school teacher in Hampyung County. Kim received Campus Crusade training in January, 1972, and began to tell people about Christ. Now 59 of his 60 students regularly attend his Sunday school class. So far, 43 per cent of the students' parents have prayed to receive Christ and started to attend church. In addition, nine other teachers who have become Christians through Kim's witness have purchased bicycles and started their own home visitation program.

So now the multiplication process continues as 1,000 English-speaking university graduates are recruited to teach Korean high schoolers. "As evangelicals using English instruction as a vehicle for evangelism," says Bill Bright, Campus Crusade for Christ president, "our goal is to establish bridges of real friendship that will result in innumerable opportunities to share the message of Christ. We will teach the best English possible; and actively seek opportunities to present the gospel."

Tiburon Baptist Players Slate 'Out Of Darkness'

The Tiburon Baptist Players will present "Out of Darkness," a Biblical drama in one act, on April 20 at 8 p.m. in the auditorium of Tiburon Baptist Church. The play was selected by the director, Mrs. Lee Long, because of its timeliness during the Easter season. The drama takes place in Bethsaida at the home of Cornelius in the spring of the year 54 A.D. "Out of Darkness," written by John McGreevey, is based on the scripture from Matthew 28:11-15:

"Now, when they were going, behold, some of the Guard came into the city, and showed unto the High Priests all the things that were done. And when they were assembled with the elders and had taken counsel, they gave much money to the soldiers.

"Saying, say ye that His disciples came by night and stole him away while we slept. And if this comes to the Governer's ears, we will persuade him and secure you. So, they took the money and did as they were taught; and this saying is commonly reported among the Jews until this day."

The cast includes Ross Inglish as Cornelius, Gaye Stopp as his wife Drusilla, Wayne Power as their son Titus, Cathy Cunningham as Ruth, Mrs. Anne Foster as Bernice, Jim Lay as Urias, and Dr. Lyn Elder as Silas.

Rolling Church Only Temporary

FRANKFORT, Ky. (UPI) — The Church of God in Kentucky fully intends to comply with the scriptual admonition to "build thy house on a rock," but right now one of the denomination's churches is built on wheels.

The little white church is constructed around a mobile home superstructure and contains a sanctuary, a pulpit and a Sunday School classroom.

The "holy roller," as some members refer to the mobile house of worship, was at Madisonville last year until a permanent church was built.

Now it is perched along a busy highway west of this capital city. This spring it will be used at Lexington until a permanent church is constructed.

Choir Schedules Special Cantata

The cantata, The Seven Last Words of Christ, will be presented by the All Saints Lutheran choir, soloists and orchestra at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow.

The cantata by Theodore Dubois is under the direction of John Yardas and features Mrs. Delilah Jacobson, harpist. Soloists are Donovan Pearce, Tom and Dawn Scott, Jennifer Suttie, Neil Nordquist, Ellen Warner and Pastor Sorensen. The free concert is open to the public.

A Good Friday Experience Will Highlight Holy Week

A Good Friday experience to which youth groups of more than 60 churches have been invited will highlight Holy Week services in Marin County.

The group will meet at 4 p.m. on Good Friday at the Westminster Presbyterian Church, 240 Tiburon Boulevard, Tiburon, and will construct a large wooden cross which they will then carry to a hilltop overlooking the bay, where it will be erected.

During the procession the cross will be carried about a half mile, with all those in the procession taking turns.

Later, on the hill, there will be singing, guitar music, scripture and poetry readings, prayer and meditation, a spontaneous rap and an Agape feast of bread and grape juice.

Sponsors Dan White, youth minister at Westminster Presbyterian, and Jay Rock, youth minister at Redwoods Presbyterian in Larkspur, ask those who can to bring bread and grape juice to share with the others.

All Must Assist To Curb Burglaries

IT HAS BEEN more than two decades since that memorable day when an irate subscriber called in to complain that because of the I-J his home had been burglarized.

"After my house was burglarized, I found out that a good many of my neighbors for blocks around had been burglarized in previous weeks. You never printed a thing in the paper about it, so I didn't know. Had you done your duty and printed the facts, I would have been properly warned. I would have taken more care to see that all doors were locked and windows secured. I would have put valuables in safe places. It's all your fault at the I-J," said the caller rather heatedly.

In a sense, he was right. One buys a newspaper to keep abreast of what goes on in one's community. The I-J had not reported the rash of burglaries in that subscriber's neighborhood. He had a right to feel cheated.

Come to find out, San Rafael's elected police chief had simply seen to it that I-J reporters did NOT see the burglary reports on file in his office. Election was right around the corner and news of a burglary wave in town would not help his campaign for reelection.

An I-J reporter went to work on the task to find out who in that end of town had recently been burglarized. In a short time he gathered information of 17 previously unreported burglaries.

Unquestionably, there were others besides the irate subscriber who might have saved valuables if only they had known what was going on.

SINCE THAT TIME the I-J has been especially sensitive to its responsibility to warn about the activities of burglars.

Several years ago the incidence of burglary began to climb sharply in Marin. Each was duly reported in the paper. They became so numerous as to become routine.

They became so commonplace that they apparently were largely ignored.

That's when the I-J began collecting them and printing them in a weekly report, so as to present the full dimensions of the situation to our readers.

Now anyone who looks at the paper even casually knows that in the area served by the I-J there are three to four dozen burglaries per week, on an average.

A couple of years ago, a defendant in a burglary trial in Marin testified that picking targets was easy. If he and his accomplices wanted to pick up several new color TV sets, they had only to watch the I-J burglary reports. They surmised that homes reported as having lost color TVs probably would have brand new replacements in a short time.

The I-J responded by eliminating lists of specific items taken. Now we refer only to the loss of "household goods" or "personal effects." We also discontinued the use of specific street addresses, indicating instead only the neighborhood where the burglary has taken place.

An occasional burglary victim objects to the I-J reporting anything at all about his particular case. He wants to be just an anonymous statistic.

Unfortunately, anonymous statistics don't influence the rest of us to take precautions against burglars in the way that a burglary in our neighborhood does — or even the burglary of someone we know in a neighboring town.

WHAT CAN ONE do toward burglary prevention?

Police will usually tell you that your best protection is a suspicious neighbor who will report anything out of the ordinary around your house or property.

If we want to stamp out burglary, then, we need to become suspicious neighbors so as to protect each other.

A burglar alarm system can help, especially those which convey a silent alarm direct to a police station. But such are expensive.

"Operation Identification" is effective in two ways. When you lose property with your social security number engraved on it, you have an infinitely better chance of recovering it. Also, a thief who knows articles are thus identified is less likely to steal them.

Bringing burglary under control is not a job we can expect someone else to do; it will take an effort on the part of each of us.

The sooner we get on with it, the better.

Subterfuge In Tax Measure

On the ballot Tuesday in Bolinas-Stinson School District will be a proposal that is not what it seems. It proposes an increase in the district's general purpose tax limit. However, under new law, a school district is limited in spending per pupil, and can levy only enough taxes to finance the allowable spending.

However, because of a quirk in the law, passage of the measure would give the Bolinas-Stinson district more state funds, as it could pretend the permitted tax total was spent this year and figure per-pupil outlay accordingly.

We call this subterfuge.

WHAT OUR READERS SAY

Any Market May Sell Tough Meat Sometime

I believe Mrs. Emily Johnson (letter Apr. 4) and "those two Congressmen" to be grossly unfair to Safeway markets. I have bought their steaks for years, and have never had a really tough one. However, if one were to name every market in the county where a tough cut of meat was purchased, the list would include practically any market.

Deer Have Bad Life Because Of Hunters

According to Kenneth Whitehead in his dry book about deer, there are approximately eight million deer in the U.S. and one million are killed each year so there must be about one million hunters around the country during the season. The deer are trapped. There are hunters all over and I suppose hidden around the water holes. Probably half of these hunters are novices, leaving wounded deer to suffer. I guess cowards is an apt description.

There are an increasing number of women and children who feel very unhappy over deer hunting and this fact should be recognized by the wild life and game and American Rifle Associations.

During the off-season, poaching and dog packs harass the deer. Also the season starts before half of the baby deer are old enough to cope with fences and dogs and as a result great numbers die or are killed.

Deer are such lovely animals. They do not deserve such a bad life.

The deer population control should be done quickly, efficiently and quietly with a minimum of disturbance.

The offices of game preservation would be better served by women.

Arrigoni Defends Schenck Property Action

This is in reply to a letter to the editor that appeared in your newspaper on April 5, signed by Mr. T. R. Smith of San Anselmo. Part of the letter referred to a recent board of supervisors action on a rezoning and master plan, commonly known as the Schenck property. I would like to clarify the facts and set the record straight.

Unquestionably, it is common knowledge that the land is currently zoned R-1 single family residential, allowing one building site per 10,000 square feet. The owner has the legal right to submit a subdivision map complying with the State Map Act for a single family project for this 15-acre parcel that can legally accommodate 44 units, according to the county planning staff. This would be in compliance with the state and county subdivision laws and would not be appealable to the Board of Supervisors. Only the environmental impact report would be appealable.

In my opinion, the decision of the board of supervisors was far-reaching and protected the interest of the public and the integrity of the Sorich Park neighborhood. First of all, the original project, consisting of 44 units, rezoning from R-1 to RMP residential was denied by the Board of Supervisors and referred back to the planning commission with the instructions that the 15-acre parcel not exceed 20 units on a cluster basis. This works out to almost one unit per acre, with the units to be constructed on the lower two acres of the 15-acre project, leaving approximately 13 acres in permanent open space. . .

I might add that one of the additional advantages of RMP zoning is that it provides for strict architectural control, as well as detailed landscaping maps, and a provision for other amenities which, under R-1 single family zoning, are not possible under the law.

Emergency Help Draws Appreciation

I wish to highly commend two public institutions in this area:

1. Police departments
2. Marin General emergency room staff

Approximately two weeks ago, while at lunch alone, a piece of meat became securely wedged in my lower esophagus. When it became apparent that it was neither going to come up or go down, I prudently decided that I had better seek help. On my way out of the restaurant I spotted a police car in front and explained my predicament to the officers. They gallantly came to my aid and saw that I reached Marin General Emergency in short order. By that time, I was most uncomfortable and extremely grateful for their help and kindness.

Upon my arrival at Marin General, I was immediately taken into the emergency room and helped. This was not the first time I have had occasion to use their facilities and I want to state publicly that I have always found their staff to be most courteous, kind, sympathetic and helpful. This includes everyone from the aids to the technicians and doctors.

I was in such a state that I did not determine whether or not the Officers who came to my aid were city or county employees and I want to take this means of thanking them and letting them know how much I appreciate their efforts on my behalf . . .

Reader Seeks Hidden Meaning In Editorial

The omission in the April 9 editorial of Jack Nixon as a qualified candidate for the San Rafael City Council intrigues me.

For what I'm sure must be a fascinating reason, someone in downtown San Rafael is so worried about a Jack Nixon victory that you don't even mention his name.

One sure thing, the "supposedly sophisticated" I.-J. is editorially deeply involved in "horse-opera" politics, which is what you accused the rest of the town last week.

(The April 9 editorial did not mention two of the six candidates for city council. It recommended election of Lawrence E. Mulryan and Thomas R. O'Toole, but said we would have no qualms about the city's being in good hands should Carl J. Brown and/or Richard C. Fox be elected. This is a straightforward statement that we regard Mulryan and O'Toole as the best candidates, Brown and Fox as next best. — Editor)

THE NEEDLE

By HAROLD COFFIN

Women are to blame for the expanding variety and popularity of men's perfumed beauty aids.

Men may not be prettier but they sure are smellier.

It isn't that the gals want their guys to be beautiful. They're just sick and tired of having to select another necktie for every gift occasion.

Nowadays instead of getitng a tie you can't wear, you receive a bottle of goop you're afraid to pour on you.

Time was, a he-man was supposed to smell like tobacco and whiskey. Now that women have taken up smoking and drinking, those scents are effeminate.

Meat Price Climb Shows Need For New Agricultural Policy

WASHINGTON — There is some misconception of what old King Canute was up to when he sat on the shore and ordered the tide to stay back. Under no illustion himself, he was demonstrating to his foolish sycophantic courtiers that he could not control the forces of nature. A parallel may exist here with President Nixon's attempt to hold back prices against what many of his own courtiers believe are the inexorable laws of supply and demand.

As the battle of the beefsteak rages on, grumbling can be heard in the White House directed at Secretary of the Treasury (and general commander of domestic affairs) George P. Shultz. The kindest thing said about him is that he is an ideologue with his feet stuck in concrete.

Whether Shultz was personally responsible for the incredible folly of abandoning the Phase 2 controls, which were working fairly well, for the charade of Phase 3, no one will say. But the onus falls heavily on the commander who now confronts the rising tide of protests, boycotts and a demand in Congress for a rollback of prices to the level of early January.

OBSERVERS with close contacts with consumers feel that neither the boycott nor the freeze on food prices will substantially lower the total the housewife pays at the checkout counter. The latest 2.2 per cent jump in wholesale prices makes the retail climb inevitable for several months ahead. And the most disturbing aspect of that jump was the way in which prices of industrial commodities nearly kept pace with the consumer rise.

One of the ablest consumer advisers, Mrs. Esther Peterson, a former assistant secretary of labor, in talking to housewives finds an awareness that government tinkering with prices is not enough. As one of her audience put it recently:

"I'm a Republican and I don't like to think that it's Mr. Nixon's fault that we're paying $2 a pound for steak and $1.50 a pound for hamburger. Isn't there something wrong with our food policy?"

A great many people are asking whether the present food policy is not a completely outmoded carryover from the scarcity concept of the '30s. That was when, under the New Deal program to raise the level of farm income, millions of acres were taken out of production and farmers — not a few in the large-scale agribusiness — were getting government checks to keep their land idle.

After delaying for more than seven months, Sec. of Agriculture Earl Butz finally began to reverse this scarcity program. But far more must be done to put idle land back into production. At least 50 million acres can become productive again if government moves quickly. Given the great facilities of mechanized agriculture in this country, the problems of food at home and abroad could be manageable.

THE BOYCOTT has served at least to bring into sharp perspective the urgent need for a new national food policy. Last year the chairman of the American Meat Institute, Clifton B. Cox, who is also president of Armour Food, in his annual report pointed to the "feast or famine" character of livestock production and marketing resulting in inefficiency and start-and-stop operations contributing to unemployment and higher prices.

"We need a national policy to stabilize the production of an ample supply of meat for consumers," Cox said.

He laid down several prescriptions for a new policy. Most important was the stabilization of food drains with a government-sponsored storage and insurance program to level off the peaks and valleys in the supply of what is the raw material of meat production. It takes eight pounds of grain to produce one pound of beef.

AGRICULTURE is the most vital element in the American economy. If the full force of productivity on the farms is unleashed, exports of wheat, feed grains and soy beans can go a long way to offset the deteriorating trade balance in the next decade. The red-ink side of the trade ledger will be augmented by 1980 with a deficit in the cost of imported oil of up to $17 billion a year. One estimate is that the abundance of the farms as geared to full production could offset at least half of this.

The hard-working American farmer with the superior mechanization at his command can do a lot to pull us out of the trade slump. But government must be an active partner if this is to come about.

WATERGATE POLL

Republican Leaders Outraged At Nixon's Handling Of Probe

By GODFREY SPERLING Jr.

WASHINGTON — The Watergate affair is stirring up a surprising amount of anti-administration feeling among key Republican leaders in every section of the United States.

A Christian Science Monitor survey of GOP leaders in half the states and in every geographical region finds that some state chairmen and national committeemen are very upset over what they see as the administration's misbehavior, or over what they view as the administration's failure to clear up the Watergate charges —or over a combination of both.

The survey also shows that the public, long apathetic about Watergate, is now becoming aroused. The Watergate affair clearly is emerging as a major issue.

SAID ONE STATE chairman from the West: "I'm darned unhappy with Watergate. I just don't think anyone in any political organization has any business instigating criminal activity by investigating the other side. . .

"The President is in a position to see to it that everything is brought out into the open. And he hasn't and he has had plenty of time to do it."

Said another state chairman, this one from the South:

"For six months no one paid attention to this. But now, with McCord and other developments, people are paying attention. We've got a real problem.

"It's time for someone high up — probably the President — to stand up and say, 'This is what's happened.' It's not what happened at Watergate that's hurting us so much — it's the apparent cover-up by our administration."

In some states, particularly in the South where the Republican party is struggling to gain numbers, leaders said that Watergate was hurting their recruiting.

Many said that Republicans in their states were becoming unhappy with the administration's role in Watergate — and that the apathy over the case had suddenly ended in recent days.

Said one Midwest state chairman:

"There is a growing feeling in this state among Republicans that the administration is involved. Here and there, there is a feeling that Nixon may be involved — but generally this view does not prevail. And there is a heavy feeling that former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell knew all about it. It8really is hurting the Republican party."

Said another Midwest state chairman: "The President ought to facilitate facts coming out — and anyone who is involved should be nailed to the wall.

"Watergate is the biggest issue of all in this state, bigger than inflation. If the issue continues, it is going to hurt those running for office all the way down to the local level. Republicans here are terribly concerned. But they don't think the President was the instigator or was aware of it."

A LARGE NUMBER of the leaders said that Watergate had finally become a major political issue and that — if it continued — it could be most damaging to Republican candidates in 1974.

At a meeting of some 300 Republicans in one Midwest city a few days ago, a speaker asked: "How many of you think that Watergate is now damaging the Republican party?" Almost everyone raised his hand.

In the Southwest, a state chairman put his distress over Watergate this way:

"People, including the Republicans, are getting concerned. They weren't two weeks ago.

"They are concerned about the arrogance or lack of empathy of this administration in realizing that people want to know what is going on.

SEVERAL COMMENTS from leaders in the East illustrate the strong questioning going on about Watergate — and the administration's role — in that region.

Said one: "There's lots of disgust among the Republicans here, as well as concern. Republicans now are saying, 'If there was wrongdoing, let's get it out in the open. If not, let's get it over with.' "

JUPITER IS FIRST

American Cameras Will Explore The Universe

By AL ROSSITER JR.

CAPE KENNEDY (UPI) — Mercury, Venus, Mars, Jupiter and Saturn have one thing in common—they all will be visited by American space probes to be launched within five years in a stepped up effort to explore the solar system.

Only the three outermost planets will escape the scrutiny of cameras and other reconnaissance instruments aboard robot spacecraft now on the drawing boards or in extra clean assembly buildings. Uranus, Neptune and Pluto will have to wait until NASA has more money.

Jupiter, the almost star-like colossus 480 million miles from the sun, is the first target of the new series of planetary explorers. One little spacecraft is more than halfway there and a twin, Pioneer 11, was launched last week.

The job of the two pioneers is to pave the way to the fifth planet out from the sun and give man his first closeup look at its brilliantly striped atmosphere and its deadly radiation belts.

Pioneer 10, launched a year ago, is due to fly within 87,000 miles of Jupiter Dec. 3. Pioneer 11 should reach the planet Dec. 5, 1974. Both will take 10 pictures of Jupiter and examine its atmosphere and environment with a dozen other experiments.

Jupiter stands at the gateway to the outer planets and will serve as a junction point for future spacecraft enroute to Saturn and the planets beyond. Pioneer 10 improved the outlook for such flights when it passed safely through the debris-filled asteroid belt last month between Mars and Jupiter. None had gone that far before.

"I think we're firmly convinced now that the asteroid belt presents little hazard to future spacecraft going out to explore the outer planets," said Dr. William H. Kinard, meteoroid specialist from the Langley Research Center, Hampton, Va.

The key to the rapidly expanding interest in the planets is the question that has intrigued thinking men for centuries—is Earth the only place to harbor life?

Many scientists think there must be some kind of life somewhere else and they say Mars is the best place to start looking. This idea was buoyed recently when photographs taken by the Mariner 9 showed that Mars is a dynamic, evolving planet with what seems to be unmistakable evidence it once had great volumes of water flowing across its surface.

There also has been speculation that life might exist in Jupiter's thick and colorful atmosphere. And Cornell University astronomers reported recently they have found that Titan, the largest of the 10 moons of Saturn, has an atmosphere that might support life.

"Our research has shown that at the very least," Dr. Carl Sagan said, "Titan should be littered with the kind of organic molecule which, in the early history of the Earth, led to the origin of life."

The investigations now planned will concentrate on a direct search for biological substances on Mars. Two large unmanned Viking spacecraft will be launched toward the Red Planet in 1975 and land in the warmest, dampest places available there in July and August of 1976.

Each Viking will scratch, dig and probe the Martian surface, then swallow and analyze soil samples for signs of biological activity. The landers also will carry television cameras, Marsquake detectors and weather observatories.

But before the 7,500-pound Vikings reach Mars, the United States will have completed the two Jupiter missions and will have sent a television scout past Venus and Mercury, the two inner planets between Earth and sun. Then, in 1977, two Mariners will be sent on a picture-taking voyage to Jupiter and Saturn.

Russia, too, is active in planetary exploration and the Soviets accomplished the first unmanned landings on both Mars and Venus. The Martian lander, however, failed seconds after touchdown in a raging dust storm in late 1971.

Russian scientists are expected to take advantage of the next Mars launch opportunity next year and send two more spacecraft on Martian landing missions. The United States and Russia agreed in February in Moscow to exchange information on potential Mars landing sites.

The Mariner that will explore Venus and Mercury is set for launch Oct. 10. It will be the first spacecraft to visit two planets.

The plan is to aim Mariner 10 so it passes about 3,300 miles from Venus and then, with an assist from the Venusian gravity, swings out to travel to little Mercury, the planet nearest the sun. The probe is expected to pass within 625 miles of unexplored Mercury and take pictures that should be able to show surface objects as small as a football field.

Mercury is so close to the sun that it is hard to see with Earth telescopes and only general shading characteristics are known. The satellite's pictures are expected to tell man as much about Mercury as the first telescopic observations told man about the moon.

Venus also has never been photographed from up close although it has been explored by seven American and Russian spacecraft over the past 10 years. The Mariner will take several thousand pictures of Venus' dense blanket of clouds and scientists hope the probe will find some openings in the atmospheric veil so it can see through to the Venusian surface.

Mariner 10 should reach Venus in February, 1974, and pass by Mercury in late March. It will circle the sun after passing Mercury and will return to the little planet in September, 1975.

After the Viking Mars expeditions of 1975 and 1976, the space agency plans to devote more attention to Jupiter and Saturn.

Two 1,600-pound Mariners will be launched in August and September, 1977, to scout Jupiter first and then fly on to Saturn using the cosmic billiard ball technique that will be tried out by the Mariner Venus-Mercury flight. It will take the probe more than 1 ½ years to reach Jupiter and about two more years to fly to Saturn, the huge ringed planet that is sixth out from the sun.

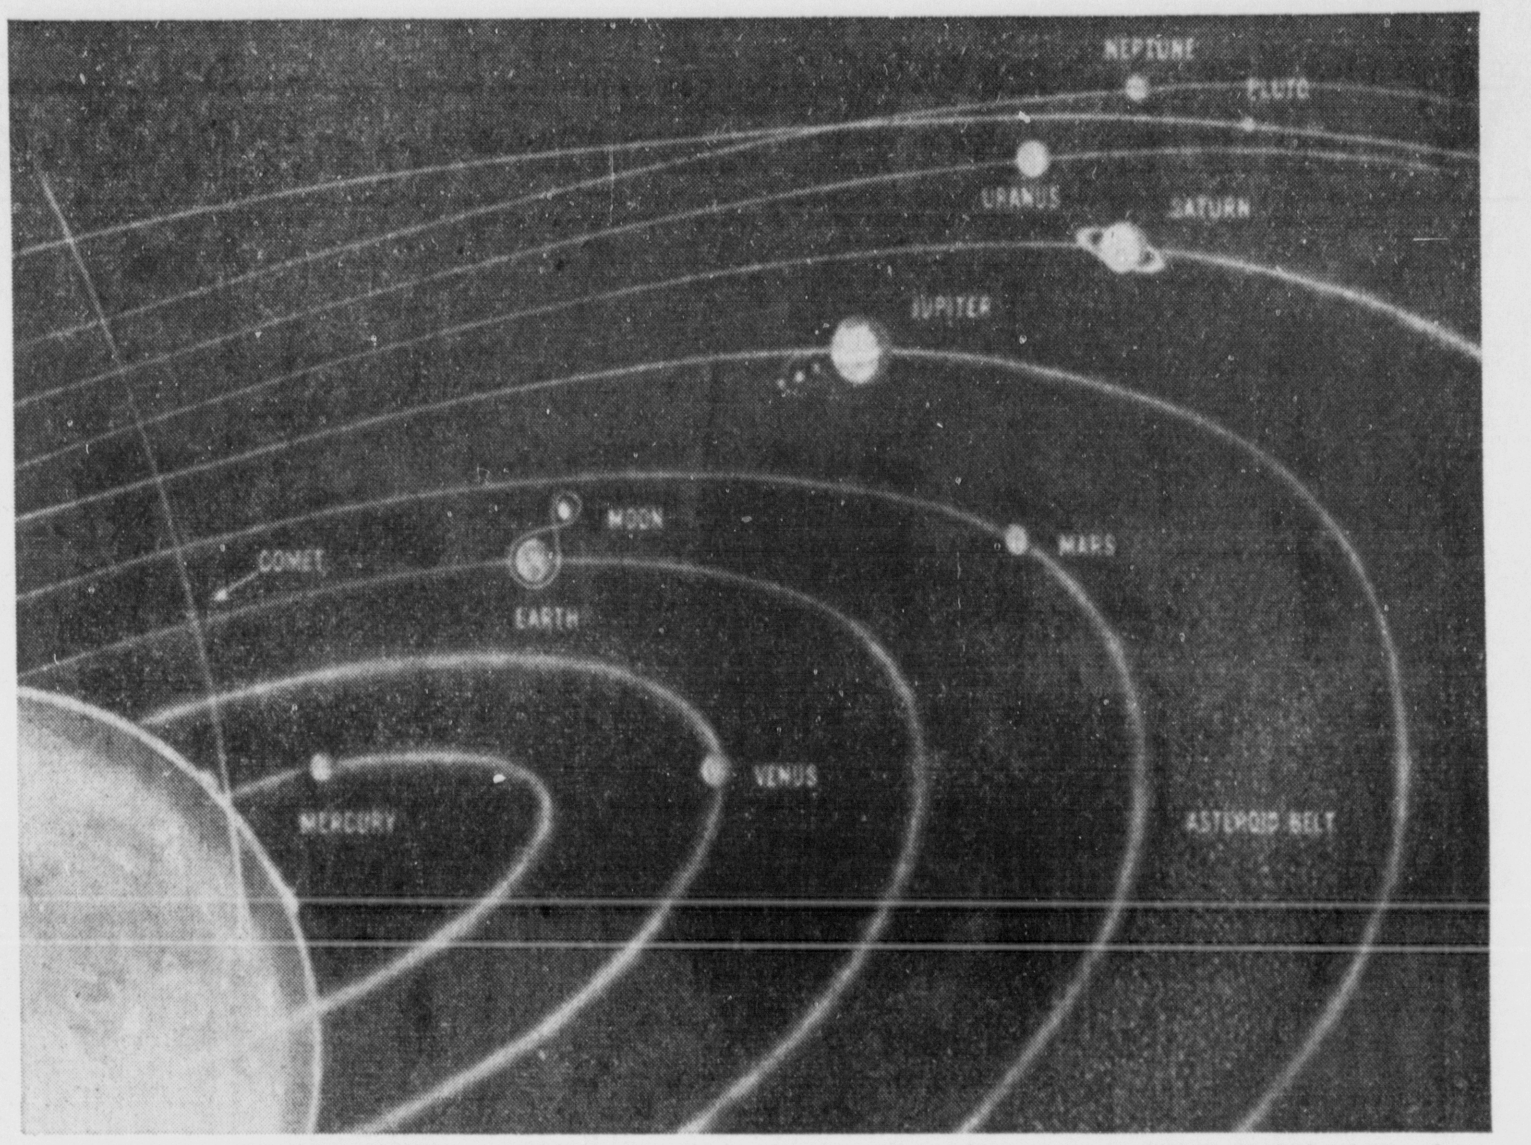
One of the two Mariners' objectives will be to look at the mysterious rings around Saturn. They are generally believed to consist of gas, ice and dust, although two astronomers at the jet propulsion laboratory, Pasadena, Calif., reported earlier this month that radar examination of the planet showed its rings are made of solid chunks of something.

Dr. Richard M. Goldstein said Saturn's rings, girdling the planet from 57,000 to 87,000 miles out, "must be considered an extreme hazard to any spacecraft sent into or near the rings."

Saturn itself is about 72,000 miles in diameter, yet it is believed to be a gaseous body lacking a solid surface and with a density less than water.

NASA's definite planetary exploration plans end with the Mariner Jupiter-Saturn mission, but the agency hopes to begin work next year on another program to explore Venus in 1978 with small Pioneer spacecraft.

Two Pioneers would be wunched with one designed to orbit Venus while the second shoots small instrumented probes into its thick atmosphere. (Advance—into its thick atmosphere.



FUTURE EXPLORATION — This is a schematic of major solar system exploration missions which was drawn up by NASA in 1969. Man has already landed on the moon. Pioneer 10, launched a year ago, is due to fly within 87,000 miles of Jupiter early next December. Pioneer 11, launched last week, should reach the planet in early December of 1974. And two unmanned spacecrafts will be launched toward Mars in 1975.

SCENE IN SOUTH VIETNAM — This is a familiar scene in South Vietnam since the cease-fire agreement. The burning question among the refugees: "When are we going home?" This Week In The World

By UNITED PRESS INTERNATIONAL

The government of President Lon Nol this week broke at least temporarily the Communist stranglehold on the Cambodian capital of Phnom Penh.

After a 19-day encirclement by the Communists, a convoy of five ships raced up the Mekong River from Saigon Sunday, carrying vital supplies of fuel, ammunition and food. On Monday, three more ships ran the gauntlet of Communist artillery fire.

A convoy of trucks Thursday made the trip from the Kompong Som seaport to the capital. U.S. warplanes pounded Communist positions and planes airlifted fuel supplies to the beleaguered capital.

Around The World, Around The Clock

WASHINGTON — The automobile industry was given an extra year to meet the tough Federal emission standards to curb pollution.

WASHINGTON — Anne Armstrong, counselor to the President, said she agreed with Sen. Barry Goldwater that fundraising efforts had been affected and that Republican candidates could be hurt next year unless the Watergate controversy was cleared up.

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Before dawn Tuesday, Israeli commandos landed near Beirut, traveled by car to a suburb, where they stormed an apartment building and killed three Arab guerrilla leaders. Only hours before, 10 Arab guerrillas in Nicosia, Cyprus, attacked the home of the Israeli ambassador with a powerful bomb and attacked an El Al jetliner at Nicosia airport.

NEW YORK — Former Mayor Robert F. Wagner announced he would not run for mayor "on any ticket."

BETHESDA, Md. — Surgeons at the National Heart and Lung Institute installed the first American-developed nuclearpowered pacemaker in a 39- year-old woman.

MOUGINS, France — Pablo Picasso, the Spanish-born titan of 20th century art, died of a heart attack Sunday at his hilltop villa. Picasso, 91, lived the last 10 years a virtual recluse. His extraordinary talents were as diverse as they were bold, and he changed from style to style as the mood hit him. He was entombed without ceremony at one of his French homes. He left a vast estate worth millions but no will because of a superstition about death. One of his great legacies, a priceless collection of works by other artists, was donated by his family to France.

WASHINGTON — The administration proposed raising the Federal minimum wage to $2.30 an hour from the current $1.60 by 1976.

WASHINGTON — President Nixon proposed Federal standards that would increase unemployment benefits and extend coverage to 635,000 farm workers. The proposed legislation, which would give most workers at least half their regular pay when out of work, would also prevent states from extending benefits to strikers.

HOCHWALD, Switzerland — A chartered British airliner carrying 144 people, many of them women on a one-day shopping trip, crashed into a hillside in a blizzard, and 105 persons died in the worst Swiss aviation disaster. Many of the victims were members of a women's club in Axbridge, England, where mourners began calling the community a "town without mothers."

SPACE CENTER, Houston — Astronaut Charles (Pete) Conrad said this week he is as excited about going on the first U.S. Skylab mission next month as when he walked on the moon in 1969. The Skylab will be moved to the launching pad at Cape Kennedy Monday. The unmanned lab will be launched May 14 with the three-man crew going up in the Apollo command module the following day and dock in space with the huge workshop.

QUESTION: WHEN?

S. Vietnam Refugees Wanting To Go Home

By DANIEL SOUTHERLAND
The Christian Science Monitor
News Service

TRUNG LAP — The Vietnam peace agreement supposedly guarantees the civilian population freedom of movement.

But in many villages such as this one in South Vietnam where people want to return to their old homes, the Saigon government is doing everything it can to stop them.

The problem, as the government sees it here, is that the people's former homes — or what is left of them — are located in old battle zones now under the influence of the Viet Cong.

Several years ago, the American Army forced many of the poeple living here to move out of their native hamlets. Now that there is a peace agreement, these people say that they should be allowed to go back to their former lands to farm and to rebuild homes that were destroyed.

At night, the Viet Cong sometimes come to the edges of this village with loudspeakers, urging the people to return to their old homes. Some, of course, have returned. But they complain that they are constantly being harassed by government artillery fire.

During this reporter's visit to Trung Lap, 105-mm. howitzers at a government outpost fired regularly into the surrounding countryside. It was not clear what the gunners' targets were. But there was no evidence of any Viet Cong military activity.

Villagers also complain that government troops have deliberately burned down houses in their old hamlets in order to discourage them from settling there.

Another widespread complaint is that the government has confiscated identification papers as a means of keeping a hold on villagers. Group photographs of each family in this village are being taken, apparently as another means of tightening control.

One villager showed a photograph of himself with his wife and two children. They looked rather unhappy as they stood stiffly under a banner which said: "Down with the Communists for violating the cease-fire." A placard also shown in the picture said: "This family does not accept the Communists."

The man said that he did not know why the picture had been taken. But he complained that he had been forced to pay 250 piasters (about 50 U.S. cents) for it.

One gets varying explanations for all this from government officials.

A hamlet chief said that he did not want people leaving his hamlet and building permanent homes in areas outside the government's control.

He said that it was all right for them to build temporary shacks for farming purposes. But he said that permanent homes would be burned down.

The hamlet chief said that his superiors had ordered him to confiscate identification cards for "security reasons" and in order "to prepare for elections."

The policeman in charge of village security said that his task was "to hold on to our territory and to control the people effectively and not let them go over to the other side."

When asked about the freedom of movement and residence supposedly guaranteed by Article 2 of the peace agreement, government officials often replied that they had not read the text of the agreement.

A young Army lieutenant in charge of "psychological warfare" for the government said that he had read a "summary" of the peace agreement as part of one-week's training he received for his mission in this village, 35 miles northwest of Saigon.

"When people ask us about the peace agreement, we tell them that this is nothing more than a cease-fire in place," the lieutenant said. "And the people are supposed to stay in place."

One middle-aged woman thought at first that this reporter was a member of the International Commission of Control and Supervision (ICCS). She complained loudly about being unable to return to her old fields.

"The soldiers beat us up if we go to our fields," she said. "But if we don't work the fields, we won't have enough to eat."

When told that the reporter was not a member of the ICCS, the disappointed woman said: "We'd heard the international inspectors were going to come here."

The young lieutenant in charge of the government's political warfare here is up against some tough competitors on the Viet Cong side. As best one can determine, they consist mostly of old women, who, thanks to their advanced age, have nothing to fear anymore from anyone.

One such woman in her late 60's, who was obviously a Viet Cong sympathizer, grabbed this reporter by the hand.

"We like the Americans very much," she said, loudly enough so that some of the Vietnamese gathered around could hear. "We like them because they are leaving."

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Enthusiasm Noted In Market Trading

NEW YORK (UPI) — Prices moved higher in stepped-up trading on the New York Stock Exchange this week, buoyed to a great extent by investor enthusiasm over better-than expected first quarter earnings reports.

The Dow Jones average of 30 blue-chip industrial stocks gained 28.29 to 959.36, including an advance of 16.40 Monday. This marked the biggest daily leap by the widely followed indicator since it picked up 17.01 points on March 27.

Standard & Poor's 500 stock index, a more broadly based indicator than the Dow, gained 2.80 to 112.08, while the NYSE index managed a 1.42 advance to 59.65. Advances far outnumbered declines, 1,155 to 604, among the 1,958 total issues on the tape.

Turnover, which has been particularly meager for the past month, picked up this week. Analysts said the increased trading was a good indication the market's rally had real buying support. Volume came to 76,173,505 shares, compared with 62,073,806 last week and with 99,533,836 during the same week a year ago.

Early in the week, before first quarter earnings reports began circulating Wall Street, the market got most of its mileage out of investor hopes for some form of wage and price controls. Inflation has been a chief market depressant ever since mid-January—when President Nixon announced Phase III.

Investors' worries focused on inflation's effect on interest rates. When interest rates climb, so does the cost of borrowing money. The primary damage, therefore, is inflation can bring on a tight money situation that threatens economic expansion.

Short-term interest rates started to decline Tuesday, the same day first quarter earnings results began rolling into Wall Street. Prices advanced and volume picked up.

The market remained comfortably in the black until Thursday. Investors then apparently decided to cash in some profits and do a turn on the sidelines. The marked declined again Friday.

Analysts and brokers generally remained optimistic, however. They attributed the market's retreat to a typical pause

WEEK IN BUSINESS

Enthusiasm Noted In Market Trading

following a sharp advance and found additional encouragement in the fact the selling was light.

American Telephone & Telegraph Co., the nation's most widely held stock, was most active this week and 2 ⅛ higher at 53 on volume of 991,100 shares. Trading in the issue included a block of 250,000 shares crossing at 52 on Tuesday.

Borden Inc. followed with an addition of ¾ to 23 ⅝ on turnover of 769,200 shares. The bulk of the issue's volume came on Friday with a block trade of 662,300 shares at 23 ¼.

S.S. Kresge was third and 2 ¼ lower at 36 ⅜ on 744,800 shares.

Occidental Petroleum was actively traded and 2 ⅛ higher at 12 ⅜ on 619,800 shares. The company announced Thursday it had signed a barter agreement worth $8 billion with the Soviet Union over a 20-year period for chemical fertilizer.

RCA added 2 ¼ among a higher group of broadcasting stocks. A financial newspaper Wednesday quoted a Wall Street analyst as saying the group's recent losses were due primarily to technical problems and they should be in the vanguard of any market advance.

Electronics and computers were mostly higher as IBM added 6 ¼, Burroughs 8 ⅝ and Control Data 5 ⅛. Both Burroughs and Control Data were among those companies reporting sharply higher first quarter net income.

Polaroid added 4 ⅝, Xerox 4 ⅜ and Corning Glass 4 ½ among the mixed glamors, while Itek dropped 5 ¼, Levits Furniture 2 ¾ and CurtiwsWright 2 ⅞.

Airlines advanced. Delta gained 4 ¼, TWA 3 ½, KLM and Flying Tiger 2 apiece and American 1 ¼.

General Motors added 2 ¼ and Ford 3 in the higher motors. GM said Monday a passenger car turbine engine might meet 1976 emission control standards. Also, Wednesday the Environmental Protection Agency allotted a one-year extension to the automobile industry for 1975 emission standards.

DuPont added 6 ½ among the chemicals and Monsanto 4 ⅝, Dow 3 ⅞, Eastman Kodak 3 and Allied Chemical 2. DuPont Tuesday reported sharply higher first quarter net. Many analysts said the DuPont report actually triggered the stock market rally.

Superior lost 9 and Natomas 6 ⅛ among the mixed oils. Atlantic Richfield added 4, Exxon 3 ¼ and Texaco 2 ¼.

U.S. Steel added 1 ¼ to pace its group, while General Dynamics lost 1 ⅞ and United Aircraft added 1 in the mixed aircrafts.

Rails generally were higher in fractions.

Woodland Man Bound Over In Burglary Case

Frank Joseph Grace, 26, of Woodland is to appear Wednesday in Marin Superior Court after being bound over on a felony burglary charge.

Judge Peter Allen Smith of municipal court ordered the appearance Thursday after hearing evidence against Grace, but dismissed an identical charge against Christopher Jay Wootton, 19, of San Rafael, when Deputy Dist. Atty. Michael A. Gridley said he wanted more time to investigate the case.

The two were arrested March 27 after delivering a stereo, two speaks and two radios taken in a burglary to Al's Used Furniture at 634 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael.

The store owner, Frank Albert Tatum, 64, of San Anselmo, was also arrested, but has not been charged.

State Bar Picks New President

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Los Angeles attorney Seth M. Hufstedler has been elected president of the State Bar of California for 1973-74.

Hufstedler was elected by the 15-member board of governors and will succeed Los Angeles attorney Leonard S. Janofsky at the close of the State Bar annual meeting Sept. 10-14 in Anaheim, a spokesman said yesterday.

HOW TO PLAY
WINNING BRIDGE

By ALFRED SHEINWOLD

Sometimes A Finesse Is Not Best Way To Develop Tricks

A finesee is not always the best way to develop tricks in a suit. You may get better results by taking your high cards and giving up a trick or two. The principle is illustrated by a hand played some years ago in an intercollegiate contest.

A TEMPTATION

When the ten of clubs is led you are tempted to win in dummy and finesse with the queen of spades. As the cards lie, this loses to the king, and you can't get to dummy often enough to clear the spades and cash them. It's unlucky that neither of the red queens will serve as an entry to dummy, but there's no need to rely on luck in this hand.

WIN IN HAND

The best play is to win the first club trick in your own hand. Lead the ace of spades and give up the queen of spades to the king.

You can reach dummy with the jack of clubs to give up another spade to the jack. And then you can get back to dummy with the king of clubs to cash the last two spades.

When you're working with such a weak suit, count the number of times you must lead it and see if you can get to the correct hand often enough to do so. This sort of planning takes you a few seconds longer at the beginning of the hand but saves you minutes of helpless scrambling later on.

SOME TROUBLE

Incidentally, if West has four spades headed by the king-jack, he could give you some trouble by refusing to take his king when you lead the queen of spades. The effect would be much as though you had tried a spade finesse and succeeded, so even in this unlikely situation it would still pay to refuse the spade finesse.

DAILY QUESTION

Partner opens with one club, and the next player passes. You hold:
♠ - 7 6 3
♥ - K J 9 6
♦ - A 10 4 3
♣ - 7 6.
What do you say?

ANSWER: Bid one diamond. Bid "up the line" (cheaper suit first) when you have two or more four-card suits as responder to an opening bid.

Deadline For Loans Extended

The Small Business Administration has extended the deadline for filing applications for loans to repair flood damage in Marin to May 10, Gilbert Montano, regional director, announced yesterday.

Montano said that under the SBA's disaster program, loans of up to $50,000 to replace homes or up to $10,000 for replacing of furnishings are available.

President Nixon included Marin County in those areas in California declared disaster areas after heavy winter floods.

MARIN PANORAMA — This sweeping view of Southern Marin is from a hillside on the southwestern boundary of the Gerbode Preserve, 2,138 acres of Marin County headlands that will be a wilderness classroom for county school children. To the right are Richardson Bay and the northern part of Sausalito and Marin City. To the left is some of the rolling terrain that make up the preserve, bought last year by Nature Conservancy and destined for use as an environmental education area.

FINAL MARINCELLO CHAPTER

Wilderness Classroom Nears Reality

By PAUL LIBERATORE

Bucking along a washboard road climbing a grassy hill behind Sausalito, a hawk wheels on an air current and a red fox scrambles in front of the car and disappears in a clump of brush.

To the east, brown Sacramento River currents mix with bay waters in Racoon Straights and beyond in Richmond, the sun glints on the metal shell of a moving BART train that vanishes eerily into a tunnel. Behind the orange towers of the Golden Gate Bridge is a sweeping view of San Francisco from the East Bay to Land's End.

From the top of the hill to the northwest is the Gerbode Preserve, 2,138 acres of wind-swept Marin County headlands that are to become the wilderness classroom for county school children.

"You can really dream up here," said Virgil Hollis, county superintendent of schools, whose dream it was that Marincello renamed the Gerbode Preserve after the late conservationist Martha Gerbode when the Nature Conservancy bought it in 1972, be opened for use by the schools in a sweeping environmental education plan.

The Marin County Board of Education this month agreed to lease Marincello from the conservancy, a private conservation organization, capping one of the bitterest and longest conservation fights in Bay Area history.

Nine years ago the land was destined to become a "new town," the brain child of the late Thomas Frouge, who was enchanted with the planned community concept that was the trend at the early 1960s.

The land, Frouge said, would be the site of a community housing 20,000 persons. There also would be commercial development and light industry.

The development was successfully blocked for six years in the courts and in May 1971 the conservancy took an option to buy the property from Gulf Oil Corp. for $6.5 million.

It was about this time that Hollis was kicking around the idea of using the land for environmental education with old friend Huey Johnson of Mill Valley, president of the trust for public land of the conservancy, who agreed that Marincello couldn't be put to a better use.

Hollis assigned the task of developing the environmental education plan to Gene Turtle, administrative assistant for the county schools, and Daniel Campbell, environmental consultant to the Ross and Kentfield school districts.

The 34-page plan, describing the land and its history and outlining its many possibilities for educational use, was presented to the county board April 2, which budgeted $21,205 for its first year of operation.

"Students will be able to see for miles from the hilltop," Campbell said, "but will be able to get the feeling of complete wilderness and spaciousness down in the valley."

A unique feature, Hollis pointed out, is that the pristine headlands are close to a large metropolitan center which will make them easily accessible to schools throughout the Bay Area.

(The preserve will be used by Marin County schools initially, but plans are to open it to other counties after the first year.)

It eventually will be acquired by the National Park Service as part of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area, but the county schools offich has been assured that it will continue to be set aside for environmental education.

According to the plan, the preserve could be used for nature study at several levels, from simple "discovery walks" by preschool children to field experiments and long-range, indepth studies by the natural science departments of the College of Marin and other institutions of higher learning.

The land is ideal for thoughtful, close-up studies, said Campbell, because of its subtle beauty. Contrasted with the immensity of Muir Woods or the compleity of Bolinas Lagoon, "it tells the whole story very quietly," he said.

Four distinct ecosystems exist within the preserve, including a broad-leaf forest, coastal chaparral, rolling grasslands and a marsh that gradually evolves from freshwater — where streams converge at the valley floor — to saltwater near Rodeo Lagoon, outside the preserve's western tip.

Beyond the lagoon, teeming with saltwater plant life, fish and birds, are the tidepools, beaches and sea caves of Cronkhite Beach.

From the hilltops, the entire Bay Area is visible. "A teacher could spend hours discussing land use practices and the history of Mill Valley, Sausalito, Tiburon. . . ," the plan suggests.

Hollis and others hope to obtain the abandoned barracks and buildings of Fort Cronkhite which bound the preserve for use as lecture halls and classrooms, perhaps even for sleeping quarters for students on overnight trips or extended studies.

Other uses might be for experimental tree farms, animal husbandry, weather stations, astronomy, mapping and art, painting and photography classes.

"Our general philosophy is not to try to import existing programs," explained Turtle. "We must allow our minds to become as rangy as the land and let people create the structure."

Hollis said the first groups of children will be allowed on the preserve July 1.

In contrast to its future as an educational resource for studenta snd educators are the crumbling Marincello gates, the only part of Thomas Frouge's dream town that ever was built.

Behind the Spanish-style gates with their tile roofs is what is now called "the road to nowhere," the Marincello that never was to be, but might better be renamed "the road to somewhere," for the young minds that are to come.

Dixie District Eyes Kindergarten Drop

A sharp decline in kindergarten enrollment in the Dixie School District has clouded class scheduling next year, Supt. Clifford W. Campbell said yesterday.

Some 323 pupils were registered for kindergarten classes last year, Campbell said, and 389 showed up on opening day for classes. Only 258 have registered for kindergarten this year, he added, predicting that about 330 - or a dip of 69 over last year - will show up on opening day this year.

"It means we don't know how many kindergarten classes to schedule," he said, adding plans for staffing schools hinge on known registration of pupils.

Although kindergarten registrations closed April 6, Campbell said all parents who want to enroll children should "go immediately to their local elementary school and register."

Alioto Leaves On 'Working Vacation'

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — Mayor Joseph L. Alioto and his wife left yesterday on a month-long "working vacation" to Europe and Israel.

One of his stops will be in Moscow, where he will meet with Mayor Vladimir Promyslov. He will discuss trade and possible exchange of film festival motion pictures.

22-Year-Old Sentenced To State Prison

A 22-year-old San Francisco man, convicted of robbery and auto theft, was sentenced yesterday to state prison by Judge Henry J. Broderick of Marin Superior Court.

The judge sent Eddie Wheatley Jr. to prison despite the plea of Deputy Public Defender Larry K. Heon for a commitment to the Synanon Foundation. "You put him in state prison, you are writing him off," Heon said.

Wheatley, whose record shows several theft convictions, has a history of insanity, but two court-appointed psychiatrists found him legally sane in this case.

Novato police arrested Wheatley last Nov. 30, minutes after a man said he threw 48-year-old Rita P. Steppler to the ground on Grant Avenue and grabbed her purse containing $11. Officers found Wheatley and the purse in a car parked nearby and discovered the car was stolen hours before in Santa Rosa.

A jury convicted Wheatley last month in a trial before visiting Judge Nat A. Agliano of Monterey County.

Case Goes To Superior Court

A 28-year-old Sonoma man has been bound over to Marin Superior Court on a felony burglary count.

Municipal Court Judge Peter Allen Smith ordered Eugene Boehm to appear Wednesday after hearing the evidence against him.

Boehm was arrested Jan. 24 after 19-year-old Mark Falch gave police a description of an intruder in his home at 23 Stetson Avenue, Corte Madera. Boehm's car was stopped on Tamalpais Avenue, police said.

A second charge of carrying a concealed weapon was dismissed because Deputy Dist. Atty. Michael A. Gridley told the judge the gun taken from Boehm did not work.

PICKETS TONIGHT?

Opera Diva's Strip Miffs Bourbon Street

NEW ORLEANS (UPI) — When opera diva Carol Neblett takes off her clothes again tonight in the name of art, some miffed strippers may be picketing the performance in the name of justice.

They can't dance naked, they say, so the blonde soprano shouldn't be allowed to sing naked.

Which is exactly what she does in Massenet's 1894 opera "Thais," which premiered before a sellout crowd Thursday night and will be performed for the second, and last, time before a standing-roomonly audience tonight.

At the end of Act I, Miss Neblett, playing the defiant Thais who is converted by a flesh-hating Christian monk who loses his own soul in the process of saving hers, tries to corrupt her savior by offering him herself. She takes off all her clothes, to cries of "Bravo! Bravo!" from the audience.

But a few blocks away on Bourbon Street, observers are not so appreciative.

"I think if anybody had any sense, they'd go down to the opera house and picket it," Robin Delaune, a Bourbon Street stripper, said yesterday.

Strippers in New Orleans have to wear G-strings and strategically paced discs called pasties.

But did Miss Delaune see no difference between a naked diva and a naked stripper?

"She's singing. That's all," she said.

"If they're going to harass us about it, they should close them down like they close us down," said Jerry Sanflippo, manager of a strip emporium called Papa Joe's. "If they're going to take their clothes off, there's no difference."

He said former New Orleans Mayor Victor Schiro and current Mayor Moon Landrieu were among the applauding dignitaries at the opera.

"Maybe it's who you know or what city hall likes," Sanflippo said glumly.

Panel Supports Buying Of Land On Mt. Burdell

The Novato Citizens' Open Space Committee has urged the city to buy 2,200 acres on Mount Burdell.

The committee recommended during a public hearing Thursday that the park and recreation commission include the item in its 1973-74 budget, according to Edward Adams, park and recreation director.

The recommendation came after a study of 6,000 acres on the mountain. The proposed open space would be on the top and southern slope that faces Novato.

oThe commission delayed a decision on the proposal until a public hearing April 25, when information on cost of the land will be available from commission staff, Adams said.

Interior Secretary Is Leaving Stanford

STANFORD, Calif. (UPI) — Interior Secretary Roges C. B. Morton responded "very well" to seven weeks of radiation treatment for prostate cancer, according to Stanford Medical Center.

The hospital said yesterday that "there is every reason to be optimistic" about the condition of the 58-year-old cabinet member. Morton will return to Washington after a brief period of recuperation.

Students Knock Schools Regarding Sex Education

By U.P. INTERNATIONAL

SACRAMENTO (UPI) — California youngsters want to learn more about sex, less about physical fitness.

Those were the conclusions of a student advisory group/report presented to the State Board of Education yesterday. The students urged that school curriculum be correspondingly changed and that pupils be given greater freedoms under a "student bill of rights."

The students, from high schools throughout the state, said local districts have been "hesitant" to provide informative sex education courses, adding that current textbooks were "difficult to relate to" and "outdated."

They also complained of "a great lack of informative, objective sex education in the home."

The group said the need for sex and family life information was pointed out by the growing number of illegitimate births and the increasing rate of venereal disease.

The students presented their suggestions to the board in a series of resolutions. Board members said they would consider the proposals but took no action.

Suzie Vaughn of Orange High School in Orange County read the sex education resolution. She said her biology text contained one "tiny chapter" on sex education which the teacher "whizzed" right through.

The physical education proposal called for elimination of mandatory gym classes in the 11th and 12th grades. It urged they be replaced by "more diversified and innovative courses."

The "Student Bill of Rights" called for bans on short hair requirements for boys, corporal punishment and "arbitrary searches and seizures."

It declared that students have, among others, the following rights:

To determine their own appearance, including the style of hair and clothing.

To see their own school files and to be notified about adverse comments which are placed in them.

To wear political buttons or symbols, form political organizations and distribute political leaflets or newspapers.

On the request for more sex education, board member David Hubbard said the board has done about all it can to implement sex education in schools.

He noted that a new, updated sex education textbook, "Human Sexuality," is being prepared by the board.

'Original Residents' Block Wounded Knee

PINE RIDGE, S.D. (UPI) — A group of Oglala Sioux Indians, who say they are "original residents of Wounded Knee," blocked the main road to the village yesterday to protest being ousted from their homes by other Indians occupying the hamlet.

Government forces maintained a perimeter around the village and government negotiators tried to get the Indians to remove the roadblock, established outside the perimeter.

But the Indians vowed not to let food or medical supplies pass into the hands of the Indians occupying the village until the confrontation is ended.

Federal negotiator Stanley Pottinger flew by helicopter to the roadblock Friday and met with the group's spokesmen, Woody Richards and John Hussman, in an effort to persuade them to remove the blockade.

Richards said the group was protesting the American Indian Movement (AIM) takeover that ousted them, from their homes 46 days ago, and what they called the Justice Department's inability to end the armed confrontation.

They also said the government should compensate the original residents of the village for damage to their property and the loss of their homes since the occupation began Feb. 27.

Most of the Indians at the roadblock, Pottinger said, are residents of Wounded Knee and "some are concerned relatives."

Pottinger, an assistant U.S. attorney general, told them the Justice Department wants to end the occupation of the village "without bloodshed or loss of life."

He said he was sympathetic to their reasons for establishing the roadblock, but warned, "If you put yourself in the position of obstructing a federal officer, even if your intentions are the best, then you are violating a federal statute."

Richards said the roadblock would remain up until the armed occupation ended. Before the meeting with Pottinger was over, Richards and Hussman agreed to allow U.S. marshals, FBI agents and Community Relations Service (CRS) workers to pass through en route to the government's roadblock closer to the village.

However, the two Indians said all CRS cars would be searched, and food and medical supplies would be prevented from going through.

"If they want medical and food supplies," Huaamsn said, "they should come out and get it. They're getting better medical aid down there than we are on the outside, and they're getting it free."

A Suicide Barrier For Span Is Back

An old proposal to erect a suicide barrier on the Golden Gate Bridge was revived yesterday, apparently with enough votes by bridge district directors to assure its construction this time. (See other bridge story, page 1.)

The proposal, booted about for 23 years got as far as a preliminary design two years ago, but was shelved indefinitely.

The issue was revived at an unannounced meeting on April 4 of the board's special suicide committee, which urged the board to adopt a policy to proceed with the project "as soon as possible."

The recommendation, backed by dozens of organizations and individuals at yesterday's packed board meeting, was approved, 12-5. Two of Marin's three representatives on the board split, with Supervisor Michael Wornum voting with the majority and San Rafael Mayor C. Paul Bettini with the minority. Dean N. Meyer of Mill Valley was absent.

The board's action fell well short of agreeing to spend the $750,000 estimated for the actual construction, but it did ask the finance-auditing committee to review spending $67,500 to complete design and wind-tunnel testing of the barrier. The committee was given 30 days to report its recommendation back to the board.

The project would replace the chest-high railings with an eight-foot barrier made of thin vertical tension rods six inches apart. It would be topped with an angled rail too difficult to grasp long enough to climb over.

According to bridge officials, 477 persons are known to have jumped to their deaths from the span since it opened in 1937.

Golden Gate Bridge District directors also:

RIDERS — Received a staff report that average weekday patronage during March was 22,980 on district buses and 2,337 on the Sausalito ferry.

DRYDOCK — Accepted a $14,715 bid from Todd Shipyards Corp., Alameda, to drydock the Sausalido ferry on April 25.

BUSES — Received a staff report that 16,432 district buses crossed the bridge during March, up 21 per cent over the same month last year.

NEW YORK — Authorized directors Meyer and L. E. Castner of Sonoma County to attend an insurance conference in New York.

WEIGHT — Approved 50 changes in the design of the three new ferries being built in San Diego, most of them designed to reduce unexpected weight problems that would have slowed the ferries below the required 25 knots.

DRIVERS — Approved hiring an additional 12 drivers to prevent a cutback in commuter service.

STUDY — Referred back to committee a proposed $231,000 study of future fare and toll hikes.

Deadline Set On Auditions

Actors, singers and dancers who wish to audition for the College of Marin Summer Theater 73 must call the college drama department before April 27.

The summer program will include productions of "Inherit the Wind" and "The Fantastiks."

Auditions will be held April 28, with rehearsals beginning June 11.

Those participating in the program may receive college credit.

PATTI DENISE BROWN
Aug. 11 date set

Engagement Of Couple Is Announced

Lt. Col. and Mrs. John F. Brown of Woodacre have announced the engagement of their daughter Patti Denise to Wes Clark Newbold of Fairfax.

Patti was graduated from Sir Francis Drake High School and is in the dental assisting department of the College of Marin.

She is the sister of John Brown of San Anselmo and Linda Brown of Woodacre and the granddaughter of John W. Brown of Oakland.

She is currently employed at the Tamalpais Retirement Residence in Greenbrae.

Wes is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Dale Newbold of Fairfax and the brother of Betsy, Maryann, Margret and Patrick Newbold of Fairfax and Dana Newbold of San Rafael.

He is the grandson of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Fallon of Martinez.

The future bridegroom was also graduated from Sir Francis Drake High School and attends City College of San Francisco where he is in the hotel and restaurant department. Wes is currently employed with Zim's Restaurant in San Francisco.

The couple plans an Aug. 11 wedding at Chapel One at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Women Mostly In Clerical Jobs

The majority of employed women in California were concentrated in clerical work, according to the U.S. Department of Labor.

The report said clerical work accounted for 39 per cent of the women workers, 17 per cent were employed in professional and technical work and service outside the home accounted for 15 per cent. Operatives (including transport) and sales workers made up the fourth and fifth largest groups of employed women with 10 per cent and 8 per cent, respectively.

Bow Ties

That big, sporty bow tie is making a comeback. Often patterned, it is seen most often with casual clothes — will probably take to tailored suits, too.

Golden Birthday Party Is Tuesday

The 50th anniversary of Sylvan Circle 115, United Ancient Order of Druids, will be celebrated at a meeting at the Druids Hall in Novato on Tuesday at 8 p.m. Grand Arch Druidess of California, Mrs. Cora Martinelli, will be a guest.

Three charter members of the original 37 are still members. They are Mrs. Anna De Borba, the first secretary; Mrs. Asunta Zunino and Mrs. Bert York. Mrs. York's late mother, Mrs. Anna Hirribarren, was elected the first arch druidess of the Novato circle.

Mrs. William Nave, now a member of San Rafael Circle 137, was also a charter member of the Novato Circle and suggested the name Sylvan Circle because of the many trees on the hills surrounding Novato.

The Druids, a fraternal order to assist its members, is a moral, social and beneficial order. It was organized in England in 1776 and introduced into the United States in 1830.

Mrs. Leslie Barlow has been elected to serve her third term as arch druidess for the club year. Serving with her are Mmes. John Murphy, first bard, Ed Larsen, recording secretary; Ivan Johnson, financial secretary; Fred Nave, treasurer; George Scherba, conductress; M. J. Bert York, chaplain; Bob Listman, inside guardian, Fred Nave, musician; Leo Schoen, trustee; and Ben Collier, auditor. Mrs. David Johnson is past arch druidess.

THOSE ROUGH EDGES

This Beauty Salon Reshapes The Body

By VIVIAN BROWN

NEW YORK (AP) — In spring when women shop for new clothes, Nicole Ronsard does a thriving business at her beauty salon in New York. But many women never hear of her, she says.

"My business is never word of mouth," she observed the other day. "Women do not discuss the beauty problem I treat. . .But they become more aware of it whenever they shop for a new wardrobe. . ."

Mme. Ronsard is an expert in the treatment of cellulite — in France it is a well-known condition that affects the most susceptible area, the thighs, and other parts of the body including back, upper arms and knees. But the condition usually is not singled out for treatment in the United States, "although a large percentage of women suffer from it" she explained.

Cellulite — lumps, bumps, ridges and globs of matter under the skin — is accepted as just another indication of fat that they cannot control. But it is treated by doctors, hospitals, clinics and beauticians in France, Mme. Ronsard commented.

IN HER SALON she uses the French treatment method that includes automated massage, updating the treatment with two machines.

But one need not go to a salon to have it done, she explained, one reason she wrote the book, "cellulite —Those lumps, bumps and bulges you couldn't lose before."

Hw do you recognize cellulite? Mme. Ronsard suggests gripping the thighs between the thumb and index finger or between the palms of both hands.

"If cellulite is present the skin will ripple and resemble an orange peel or cottage cheese," she remarked "and there might be a little sensitivity."

At a more advanced stage the ripples are noticed just by looking in a full length mirror at an affected area such as the thighs, and women in that category often feel the most despair.

"They cannot wears pants or shorts and the condition embarrasses them. Some women must go to the water's edge at the beach before they remove a long robe that covers their thighs."

IN FACT French women describe the condition as culottes de cheval (riding breeches) because one's thighs fall into that shape with cellulite, but it was Swedish massage experts who first observed "the presence of the lumpy node-like formations" which they began treating by massage, she says. They have referred to it as panniculite, myocellulite and cellulite, the name adopted by the French.

She has been told by doctors that cellulite occurs when the waste removal process slows down in an area. Water and wastes thicken forming the bulgy bumps. One client, a yoga teacher, insists her condition was the result of having had a baby. But many of Mme. Ronsard's clients are slim models who have never been married. In many respects the actual cause is a mystery and even after it is corrected a maintenance program must be used to keep it off, she commented.

"Dieting doesn't help unless it is combined with exercise, massage and drinking enough water to eliminate the cellulite that breaks down," she explained.

Although she stresses massage, she cautions against massaging so hard one bruises the skin. Sitting in a tub is a good time to work on one's legs and thighs. Hips and buttocks might be massaged when one is towel drying. In fact, she suggests, once the knack is acquired, one can massage when one is watching television or sitting in a car or any other time.

KEEPING IN MIND that legs should always be massaged towards the heart, she suggests five massage movements to help break down cellulite — stroking (preparing the skin by using upward sliding movements) kneading (grabbing "a hunk of flesh," lifting it away from the underlying structure and squeezing it with the fingers or whole hand) knuckling (a crushing movement done in circular direction with fingers curled so that the knuckles press the skin) "S" formation (using thumb and forefinger of both hands to lift up a portion of flesh running hands back and forth in opposite directions to form an "S" fold) and wringing (an "S" formation done without picking up the flesh —a deep action massage that involves twisting flesh back and forth with the hands.) Deep stroking ends every massage (heavy pressure towards the heart which therapists believe relieves congestion and speeds removal of waste matter from tissues).

The hose air treatment she gives in her salon may be done at home with a garden hose and lots of water pressure, she advises.

Before coming to the United States six years ago, Mme. Ronsard lived in Paris where she graduated from a school specializing in the science of body shaping. But before that she had often helped her mother, a well-known skin specialist.

Social Problems To Be Discussed

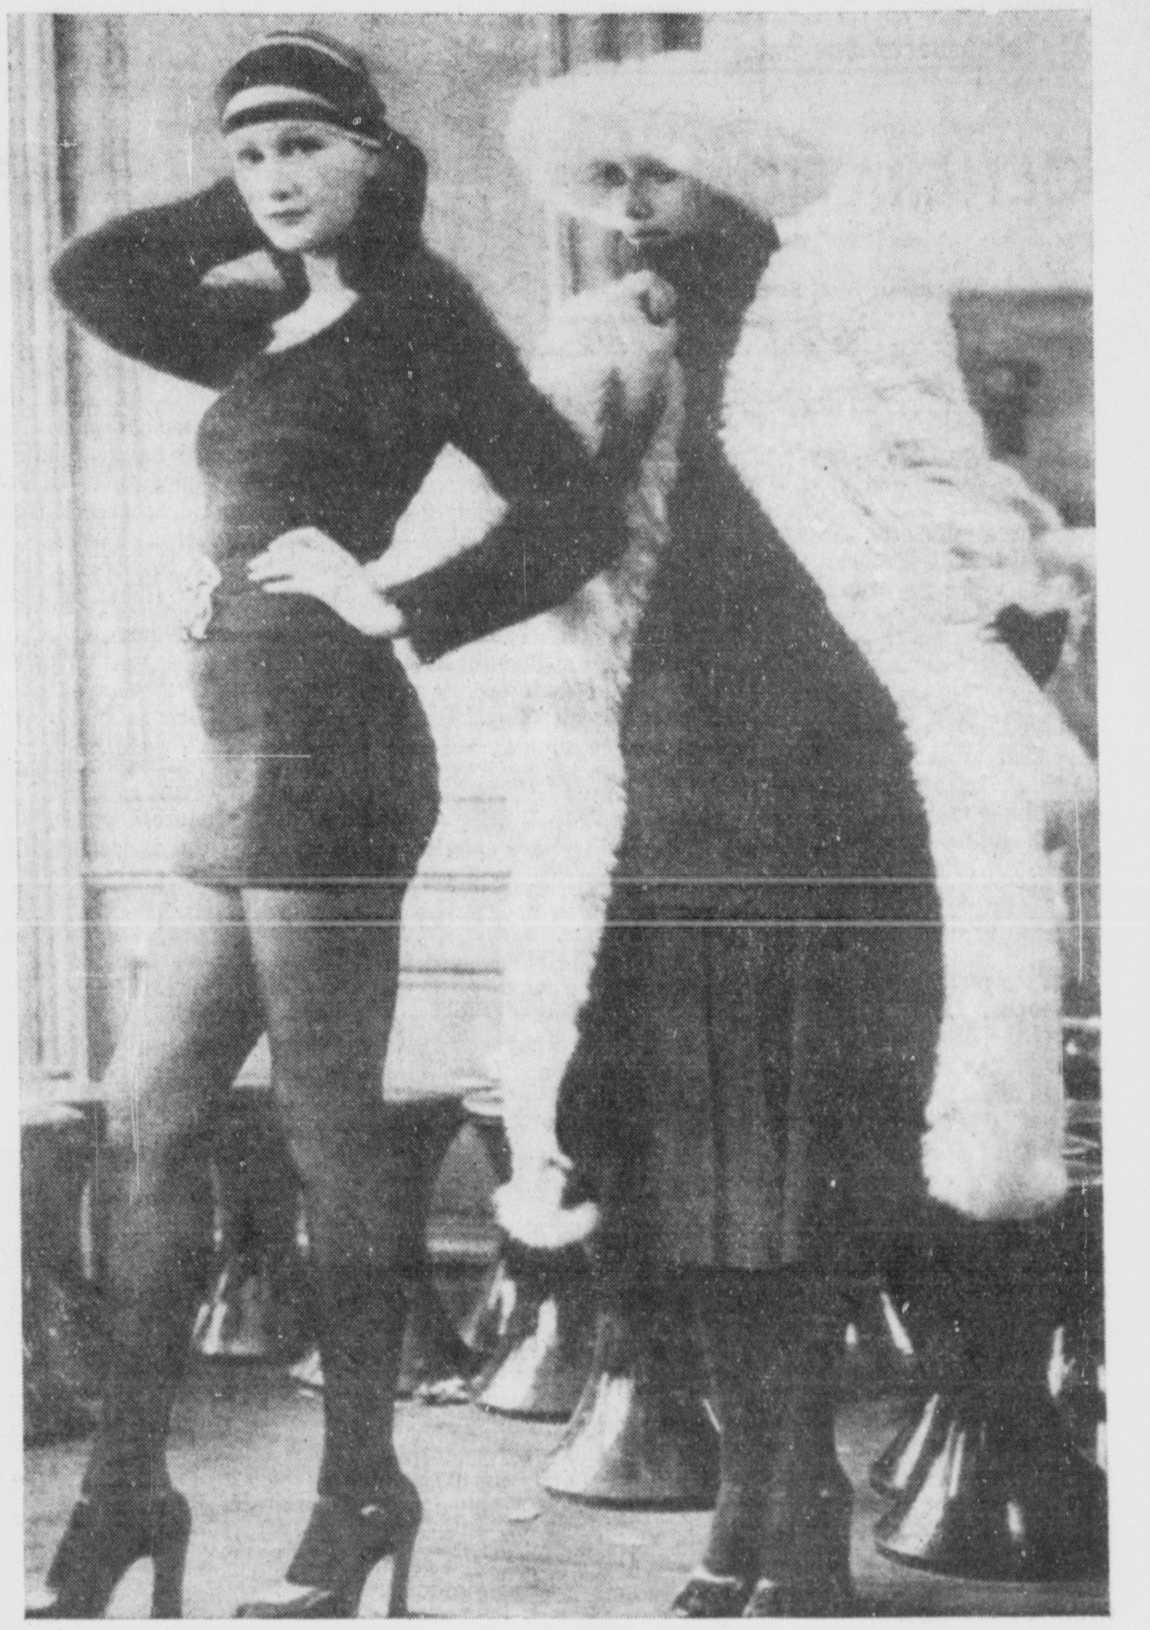
Problem-solving and action programs to meet current social issues will be the major concern of more than 6,000 home economists convening in Atlantic City for the 64th Annual Meeting of the American Home Economics Association, June 25-29.

The issues coming under the home economists' analyses include national health insurance, nutrition, child care, family planning, aging, sex roles and housing.

Officers Wives Choose Leaders

Mrs. Emile Patrick of Novato has been elected president of the Non-commissioned Officers Wives Club at Hamilton Air Force Base.

Other officers elected are Mmes. Robert Rhorer, vice president; Gerald Cameron, treasurer; John Engs, assistant treasurer; Walter Wade, recording secretary; and Edwin Dorminey, corresponding secretary.



FANNY SWEATERS

Meeting the sweater craze head on is fashion designer Sonia Rykiel whose Paris collection included the mini sweater dress for evening (left) and fanny sweater (right) tamed somewhat by the pleated skirt, just below the knee, and covered by the fake fur coat. The new, long sweaters are the hottest fashion of the year, and Miss Rykiel included several when her collection was shown last week in Paris. (UPI Telephoto)

Mrs. Sievers Again Chosen Club Leader

Mrs. Howard Sievers, who was president of the Sausalito Woman's Club in 1950 and 1951, has again been elected to the club's presidency.

She served as club parliamentarian last year, and has been a member of the club for 29 years.

The purpose of the Sausalito Woman's Club according to Mrs. Sievers is "to preserve the beauty of Sausalito, to aid such worthy causes as may enlist the sympathies of the membership, and to create a center for thought and action for the promotion of the best interests of Sausalito."

Any woman who is a resident of Sausalito and who is interested in the purposes for which the club was founded is eligible for membership.

Mrs. Sievers is a past president of the Sausalito League of Women Voters, and served for nine years on the Sausalito School board.

She enjoys gardening, golf, bridge and civic affairs. She and her husband, an electrical engineer with the Bechtel Corp., have lived in Marin County for 32 years. They have four grown children and eight grandchildren. Their children are William Sievers of Mountain View, Robert Sievers, Mill Valley, Mrs. Gary Weld, Fremont and Mrs. Penny Bechtel, San Mateo.

The new president is a native of Bayfield, Colo. She went to high school in Amasa, Mich., and attended the Ferris Institute in Big Rapids, Mich.

GENERATION RAP

by Helen and Sue Bottel

Right On! Taking Initiative Proves Liberation Does Work

DEAR RAP:

Last semester break I spent a week at a ski lodge near where I live. I met a guy who is great looking and nice. We saw pretty much of each other, though casually.

When I returned home, all I could do was think of him. I happened to know his address (through friends), though he didn't have minte.

Well, after three weeks of indecision, I finally wrote him a friendly letter. When he wrote back, I nearly died of happiness.

But my mother tells me I am too forward: a boy always makes the first move; a girl is never supposed to write or call a guy; and I'll be considered a "chaser" — he'll never like me, etc., etc.

She says women's lib has brainwashed me, and I'll see.

Was I right or wrong in making the first move? — WONDERING

WON:

Right! And keep on writing! — SUE

DEAR WONDERING:

Obviously this boy's prompt answer proved your mother's views out of date for this generation. If a girl doesn't take the initiative once in a while, she misses some wonderful opportunities. — HELEN

RAP:

I'm 20, my girl is 25. We love each other, but she gets apprehensive about marriage because "she's too old for me."

I've got a good job and a good future. I'm responsible and ready for a wife. How can I get it across that five years makes no difference? — Y.D.

Y:

If your girl is so hung up on a mere five years difference, maybe she isn't as much in love as you believe. Could this be an excuse to avoid marriage? — HELEN

Y:

How about using logic on your girlfriend:

1. Women often mature later, age later, and die later than do men. It's said that a female reaches her sexual peak at age 35, while men start declining sexually before they're 25. So why the big insistence that husbands be older than their wives?

2. Some of the happiest marriages are older-women-younger-men combinations. (As Ben Franklin said: "choose an older woman — she'll make a good wife because she'll always be grateful."

(NOTE FROM HELEN: That's good advice for men, but don't use it in trying to win over your woman friend, Y.D.)

3. No one really cares about agės any more.

I think this 25-year-old is being supersensitive for nothing and, if she can't see it, well, refer back to Mom's answer and start questioning her excuses. — SUE

RAP:

"Tiger" whose boyfriend doesn't want her to finish college or have a career that might top his, should see the writing on the blackboard and find someone who is secure enough to be proud of her.

I went with a guy who resented my education. I know words didn't and I loved to study. When I took a course which would have prepared me for a better job, he made such a fuss I quit.

I lost out on the job, but I came to my senses, finally. I realized that rather than helping himself up, he wanted to hold me at his level. — FREE TO GROW

A Senior At Vallejo High Award Winner

I-J Special Report

MINNEAPOLIS — Anthony Tom Young, a senior at Vallejo Senior High School, Vallejo, has been named California's 1973 Betty Crocker Homemaker of Tomorrow.

Chosen from a field of 50,951 seniors in 742 of the state's high schools, he will receive a $1,500 college scholarship from General Mills, sponsor of the annual educational program which was open to boys as well as girls for the first time this year. He also remains eligible for national honors.

Judging centered on performance in a written knowledge and attitude examination administered throughout the country last December. From April 29 to May 4, the 51 Homemakers of Tomorrow representing 50 states and the District of Columbia will participate in an educational tour of Washington, D.C., and Colonial Williamsburg, Va. On May 3, the 1973 Betty Crocker All-American Homemaker of Tomorrow and three national runners-up will be announced.

Tony is the 18-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald M. Young of Vallejo. Ranked first scholastically in his class of 487, he is also a National Merit Scholarship and University of California Regents Scholarship Finalist, a California State Scholarship semi-finalist and a member of the California Scholarship Federation.

General Mills said of the contest, "While, historically, the feminine homemaker has usually exerted the major influence in shaping the home, teamwork between husband and wife has long been the ideal. In today's changing society, that teamwork will undoubtedly become increasingly important during the years ahead."

More Clothing Of Flameproof Fabric Needed

Clothing manufacturers must voluntarily increase their efforts to provide the public with flame retardant wearing apparel if the tragic number of deaths and injuries from clothing fires is to be significantly reduced, the National Safety Council advised.

Howard Pyle, president of the Safety Council, said, "An estimated 1,500 lives are lost and some 100,000 persons suffer disabling injuries each year as a result of their clothes catching fire. Sadly, most of these victims are children or elderly and disabled persons.

Clothing is involved in more than 80 per cent of these mishaps, according to studies, and approximately 34 per cent of those injured in the 1,245 fabric ignition cases studied by reports were children under the age of 15. About 15 per cent were persons over the age of 65, even though they represent only 10 per cent of the nation's population.

SEW SIMPLE

Piece Inseam To Avoid Extra Costs

By EUNICE FARMER
(Distributed by Register and Tribune Syndicate)

DEAR EUNICE,

I am another of your readers who is confused with the amount of yardage needed for knit slacks. I have a pattern that will require an extra half yard of fabric because it lacks about two inches of being wide enough. Is it possible to piece the inseam of slacks to avoid buying extra fabric?

MRS. H.H.

DEAR MRS. H.H.,

With the wide variation in widths of fabrics, depending on whether they are domestic or imported, woven expressly for the manufacturers or for the home sewer, it is just as difficult for the sales person in your fabric shop as it is for you. One point must be remembered, knits absolutely must be cut in one direction. Therefore, you can't fit one piece of a pattern into the other as you can when there is no direction to the fabric.

In answer to your question about piecing, yes, it can be done and won't be noticeable, especially if the piecing is only two or three inches at the crotch of the inseam.

I would advise piecing your fabric before you remove the pattern, then you will avoid cutting it too small because you might have overlooked adding two seam allowances. Be sure you piece your fabric with the grain running in the same direction.

DEAR EUNICE,

You have often suggested we examine the construction on expensive clothes if we are in doubt. A good friend of mine has a beautiful knit dress and jacket that she paid almost $200 for. The jacket has no lining or interfacing. However, the dress has a separate lining.

I'm afraid to do the same thing, because I've seen some pretty sad results when women don't line their knits. What is your recommendation?

MRS. C.E.

DEAR MRS. C.E.,

The quality of the knit fabric in these expensive suits is hard to find at any fabric shop. They are usually 100 per cent wool and made from a tight, twisted yarn that has very little stretch or give. This makes it possible to achieve a beautiful effect without lining or interfacing. If your fabric is of the same quality, why not try it? I think you will also notice that there is top stitching about one-half inch from all the outer edges. This again keeps the facings and hems nice and flat. You must do the same, either with machine stitching or hand picking.

As to the lining in the dress, this usually keeps the skirt from stretching out of shape from sitting. It also keeps the dress, which will be fitted closer to your body, from clinging.

THIS WEEK'S Tailor Trix pressing board winner is Mrs. Glen H. Ericson, Salina, Kan., for her sewing suggestion:

"I have used this tip for more than 50 years, hope it can be help to others. When sewing darts in any type material, especially knits, whether underlined or not, machine stitch in the exact center of the dart before folding the fabric and stitching the dart through both layers of fabric. You'll have a perfect dart with no stretching.

"To prevent stretching of fabric when stitching from the outer edge of garment, I recommend you begin this particular stitching at the point of the dart and continue to the outer edge of fabric."

DEAR EUNICE,

Why don't pattern companies tell you the size button you need in inches instead of lines. Often the buttons I like best aren't the same line the pattern suggests, and I find my selections are very limited.

SALLY H.

DEAR SALLY H.,

You won't have too much difficulty in the future if you will keep this column for future reference. In "button language," 40 lines equal one inch, 20 lines equal one-half inch, 10 lines equal one-fourth inch. A few lines make very little difference.

I would suggest you purchase the buttons you like when planning your garment, then you can add a fraction or take away a fraction according to the button you select. There doesn't seem to be any standardization in the sizes, and the imported buttons tend to use the full gamut of sizes.

Hope this clears up the confusion many of you have. You can overcome it all by selecting your buttons first, and you'll find there is no visual difference in a variation of a few lines of measurement.

Private Detective In Watergate Probe Quits

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Harold K. Lipset, a private detective hired to head the Senate's investigation of the Watergate affair, has resigned after confirming that he pleaded guilty to a charge of illegal electronic eavesdropping in 1966.

Lipset issued a prepared statement yesterday saying that the misdemeanor conviction in New York was "of such a minor nature that I was given no punishment whatsoever."

However, he said he was stepping aside so that his presence "in no way impedes" the committee's work.

"Because of my belief that the work of this select committee is of the utmost importance to the welfare of this country, I am choosing to resign as a special investigator rather than cause any embarrassment to the committee, its chairman or staff," Lipset said.

Lipset issued his statement after these other developments yesterday:

The Committee for the Re-election of the President said it will soon make public the sworn testimony of convicted Watergate conspirator James W. McCord Jr. The organization's lawyers, according to press spokesman Devan L. Shumway, will resume taking a deposition from McCord next Friday in connection with civil actions growing out of the June 17 break-in and bugging. "Our desire," Shumway said, is that McCord's testimony be made public as soon as possible so that we can avoid hearing about it through leaks, heresay and innuendo."

McCord met again in private with staff investigators of the Watergate committee, chaired by Sen. Sam J. Ervin, D-N.C., but declined comment after chief committee counsel Samuel Dash had counseled him against revealing any of his testimony.

Both the White House and Ervin denied reports of an agreement for presidential aides to testify before Ervin's panel, but the White House said there had been communication on the subject.

Republican senators and representatives stepped up their pressure on President Nixon to cooperate in Ervin's inquiry.

Several influential GOP officeholders said continued White House silence on the Watergate case is damaging the Republican party and Nixon's image across the nation.

Among those urging Nixon to soften his stand on executive privilege and allow aides to testify were Rep. John J. Rhodes of Arizona, chairman of the House Republican Policy Committee; Sen. Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, senior GOP member of the Watergate committee; George D. Aiken, dean of Senate Republicans and Sen. William B. Saxbe of Ohio.

"The continual mystery surrounding Watergate is hurting the image of President Nixon and the Republican party in the eyes of people everywhere," Rhodes said in a statement.

Lipset, according to the New York Daily News, had pleaded guilty to the eavesdropping charge which stemmed from a 1966 case when he and 27 others were accused of bugging private hotel suites maintained by several large corporations. The eavesdropping was said to have been undertaken to learn corporate and personal secrets.

It May Be Spring, But Weather Is Bad

By U.P. International

An intensifying storm system swirled over the Great Basin of the West today, spreading snow over the Montana and Idaho Rockies and bringing rain to the Great Basin.

Heavy snow warnings were in effect for the mountains of western Colorado and stockmen's advisories were posted for Wyoming, Montana east of the Continental Divide, eastern Nevada, southeastern Idaho, Utah and portions of South Dakota.

Cold, Canadian air poured into the center of the storm system and frost warnings were in effect for eastern Washington state, where temperatures were expected to dip into the 20s early today.

Thunderstorms rumbled over the high plains of Texas from the Rio Grande to the northern Panhandle. Two-inch hail stones pelted White Deer, Tex., about 30 miles northeast of Amarillo, last night.

Some 45,000 head of cattle were evacuated and soybean and cotton land was inundated yesterday by the floodwaters of the Atchafalaya River in Louisiana. Catahoula and Avoyelles parishes in central Louisiana were hardest hit.

"About 90 per cent of the soybean land is under water, and about 20 per cent of the cotton land is under too," said James Graugnard, president of the Louisiana Farm Bureau. "We have requested the Louisiana congressional delegation to use whatever influence it has with the Nixon administration to get these adversely hurt parishes declared disaster areas."

There was, however, no flooding along the Mississippi River in Louisiana, though the river rose to its highest level in 30 years at one point.

Fair skies reigned over most of the nation east of the Mississippi River and over the central and northern Plains and the central and southern Rockies today. Cloudy to partly cloudy skies were the rule over the West Coast, the northern Rockies, the Great Basin, Texas and Oklahoma and fog shrouded much of southern Oklahoma.

Early morning temperatures ranged from 15 degrees at Houlton, Maine, to 72 at Key West, Fla.

Applications On Rezoning Due Study

Two controversial rezoning applications ill be considered at the Petaluma City Council meeting Monday at 7:30 p.m. at city hall.

Arthur Condiotti Enterprises will seek approval for planned unit development zoning and subdivision plans for land on I Street extension at Sunnyslope Road. Neighboring property owners fought the appliacation two weeks ago, complaining of potential traffic and drainage problems.

The council also will consider plans for apartments, houses and a K-Mart Department Store on Casa Grande and Frates roads. Critics two weeks ago complained the store would bring traffic problems and fragment further the business district of the city. A petition with 1,283 signatures favoring the project will be submitted to the council.

The Brink Marriage Is Dissolved

The wife of Mill Valley auto dealer Lawrence R. Brink has obtained a dissolution of their 26-year marriage in Marin Superior Court.

Judge E. Warren McGuire ordered Brink to pay his ex-wife, Leatha M. Brink, $200 a month alimony and provide her with a new car annually as long as he owns Larry Brink Motors.

The judge also ordered Brink to pay ll college costs for the couple's younger sons, Jan, 20, and Kevin, 18.

Distribution of $253,365 in community property left Brink with his dealership, while Mrs. Brink received the family home at 315 Eldredge Avenue, Mill Valley, $15,000 cash and the family membership in the Mill Valley Tennis Club.

The Brinks were married Aug. 27, 1946 in Chicago, where he played professional football. In his career with the Chicago Bears and the Los Angeles Rams, Brink was named to the all-pro team as a defensive end three times. He retired in 1954 and opened his auto business two years later.

A Contest Set On Kite Flying

The San Anselmo Recreation Department has announced it will sponsor a kite-flying contest at 1 p.m. Tuesday at Indian Rock Hill.

Prizes will be awarded to children in four age groups for kites that are the best constructed, most artistic, largest and smallest that fly and highest flyers.

The event is open to the public and is cosponsored by Long's Drug Stores.

Mill Valley Council To Study Moratorium

A porposal to slap a moratorium on large subdivisions in Mill Valley will be considered by the city council when it meets at 8 p.m. Monday at city hall.

The moratorium has been discussed at previous meetings. Originally opposed by Councilman Edward J. Boessenecker, he agreed April 2, to go along with the idea. His vote is needed to pass the proposal.

Boessenecker changed his mind when a new moratorium was proposed which would cover all undeveloped land in the city. The old moratorium would have excluded Shelter Ridge.

The moratorium, which would be in effect as long as three years, will give the city time to update its general plan.

The council on Monday also will elect a mayor pro-tem and make appointments to 11 city commissions, agencies and other local government bodies. Mayor Jean S. Barnard already has been reelected to a second one-year term.

Verdict Of Guilty In Coin Case

A Marin Superior Court Jury has convicted a 35-year-old San Jose man of robbing a Strawberry coin store owner of up to $7,000 in rare coins, ending a second trial on the matter.

The jury in the court of Judge David Menary Jr. deliberated less than three hours before convicting Robert Michael Linsley of holding up Fred Velen at the Golden Gate Coin Store in Town and Country Village Feb. 24, 1972.

In the first trial last September, the jury deadlocked nine to three for convictions.

Linsley, who is now in prison for burglary, was arrested last May 2 after he was linked through fingerprints in a coin book left behind by the two men that robbed Velen and subdued Sheriff's Deputy Billy Dews before escaping.

The second man has not been captured.

Linsley, who has an extensive record of burglaries and thefts, is to be sentenced May 14.

Happy Warriors Ready For Next Playoff Rival

OAKLAND (UPI) — Golden State guard Jim Barnett remembers an elbow from Milwaukee's Bob Dandridge as the turning point in the National Basketball Association playoff series between the two clubs.

But to everyone else, Clyde Lee, the Warriors' soft-spoken 6-10 forward made the difference.

Barnett scored 26 points and Lee snared a game-high 19 rebounds Friday night to power the Warriors to a 100-86 win over the Milwaukee Bucks before a sellout of 13,175 howling fans. That gave the Warriors the playoff series, four games to two, and vaulted them into the Western Conference finals against either the Los Angeles Lakers or Chicago Bulls, who clash Sunday in a seventh and deciding game.

Barnett hit 11 of 18 shots from the field, topped the Warriors with seven assists and plucked seven rebounds as Golden State outrebounded the Bucks, 63-43.

"When Dandridge took that shot (elbow) that decked me in the third game (won 113-93 by Milwaukee). What did we do after that ... win three straight," said Barnett.

"Some people say that was the turning point. I'll take a shot like that anytime if it'll get us going."

Lee scored only eight points but was a demon on defense in helping to guard Kareem Abdul-Jabbar, and the Bucks' all-league center, and in shutting off the inside drives of Milwaukee forwards.

His 19 rebounds gave him 102 for the six-game series, compared to 97 for Jabbar.

Thanks mainly to the glove-like guarding of Thurmond and Lee, Jabbar never once hit his season average of 30 points in the playoffs. He topped the Bucks with 27 points, his high of the series. But still averaged only around 23 points for the six games.

"If you had to single out one guy in this series, it would have to be Lee," said Thurmond. "There's not a forward in this league who can stay with Lee on the boards. When he was playing Jabbar, he kept him outside, out of position and off balance."

Sports

The 13,175 Warrior fans apparently knew the value of Lee. They stood for 90 seconds and gave him an ovation when he was introduced before the game.

"I was embarrassed by the cheers," said the usually shy forward. "I really appreciated it, but it would have been terrible if we came out and stunk up the joint."

Stink they didn't.

Jabbar hit a free throw to open the game and that was the only lead Milwaukee enjoyed all night.

With Cazzie Russell coming off the bench and hitting 10 of his 18 points in the first period, the Warriors jumped to a 54-43 halftime lead.

Milwaukee closed the margin to 69-60 on a three-point play by Oscar Robertson with 3:06 to go in the third quarter. In the fourth period, the closest the Bucks got was 79-72 on two free thorws by Robertson with 8:49 remaining.

Then Barnett hit two buckets and Rick Barry swished two 15-footers to put it away.

"We came out and played basketball the way it should be played," said Attles. "I never saw a team ready to play like we were tonight.

"The only thing I told them before the game was if they lost. They'd have to go back to Madison (Wisc.) Sunday."

Regarding Lee, Attles said: "He did fantastic job. It's hard to believe a man can rebound that well."

Bucks coach Larry Costello said the Warriors outhustled his club.

"To win in this league, you've got to run. They ran well." said Costello.

Franklin Mieuli, owner of the Warriors, said his club is now playing the best basketball it has played in years.

"I know some time, somehow, we'd all come together," he said. "Give Attles the credit. He's been trying various combinations at various times and finally everything's beginning to click.

"We'll be ready for either Los Angeles or Chicago."

Pitcher Frey Lifts Redwood

Gene Frey pitched a four-hit shutout — no, this is not a recording — and Redwood High School took advantage of two Terra Linda fielding lapses for a 2-0 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory yesterday in Larkspur.

It was the third straight shutout for the Giant pitching staff and the second of the league season for Frey, and extended the team's consecutive scoreless inning streak to 25 in MCAL play.

The league-leading Giants (6-0) scored in the third inning when Mike Connor tripled over the center fielder's head and came home on a passed ball, and again in the fourth when Gary LaTorre singled and pinch runner Randy Harris took second on a wild pitch, third on a sacrifice by Dave Payne and home during a rundown following Ross Secor's grounder to third.

San Rafael Nine Turns Back Tam

Left-hander John Sims turned back Tamalpais High School on just one hit yesterday as San Rafael High School achieved a 5-3 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory at Albert Field.

The win kept the Bulldogs (5-1) on the heels of Redwood (6-0) in the MCAL race, and dropped Tam to 2-4.

Sims permitted two runs in the fourth inning on two walks, a passed ball, a wild pitch and a sacrifice fly, but didn't yield a hit until Jon Lea's run-scoring single with nobody out in the fifth.

The hit scored David Jones, who had walked, but on the same play John Hanley (who had reached on an error by Sims) was cut down at the plate on a relay from center fielder Craig Saunders to second baseman Joe Giordani to catcher Dave Steele.

San Rafael scored with two out in the first on Kevin Loughlin's RBI single, and added three more runs after two were out in the second, two on passed balls and one on a single by Saunders. Giordani singled in a run in the fourth.

Conklin, Novato Rip Drake In Baseball

Tom Conklin drove in four runs with a home run and a single and Joe Robinson pitched a two-hit shutout yesterday as Novato High School broke a three-game losing streak with a 5-0 Marin County Athletic League baseball victory over host Drake.

Novato (3-3) struck for four runs in the first inning when, with two out and two runners on base via fielder's choices following an error, Dan Metzger singled for one run, and Conklin smashed a three-run homer over the left fielder's head.

Conklin added an RBI single in the sixth, but Novato left-hander Robinson didn't need the run, as he permitted Drake (0-6) only three walks and struck out four.

San Marin's Bowen Stops Wildcat '9'

San Marin High School's Tom Bowen permitted visiting Marin Catholic just one hit yesterday and George Hoberg drove in four runs for the Mustangs as they romped to a 10-0 Marin County Athletic League League baseball victory.

Bowen, a senior right-hander, pitched four perfect innings, walked Layne Cozza leading off the fifth, but kept the no-hitter until Rich Lopez grounded a clean single between shortstop and third base on a 3-2 pitch leading off the seventh.

Hoberg hit a two-run double to right-center in the first inning and a two-run, bases-loaded single in the five-run fourth. Other stars at bat included Rich Villa, with a two-run single in the third.

THE DIVE — Redwood High School's Scott Ballinger made this dive as part of a series which netted him 142.30 points and third place yesterday in a Marin County Athletic League swimming meet at Terra Linda. The Trojans' Dave Cotton won and Redwood's Tom Schindler was second as Terra Linda delayed Redwood's clinching of the undisputed championship with a 49-46 upset victory.

Terra Linda Tips Redwood In Swimming

Terra Linda High School delayed Redwood's outright clinching of the Marin County Athletic League swimming championship with a 49-46 upset of the visiting Giants yesterday.

The victory improved Terra Linda's record to 9-2 and dropped Redwood, which is already assured of a tie for the crown, to 10-1. The Giants may clinch the undisputed title by beating Novato (4-7) in the season-ending meet April 24.

In other meets yesterday, San Rafael topped Tamalpais, 56-38, and San Marin whipped Drake, 54-20. Novato was idle.

Keith Strange led Terra Linda to victory by winning the 100-yard freestyle in 50.0 and the 100 breaststroke in 1:02.3, both times the best in the MCAL this year, but Redwood's Spencer Eldred also swam MCAL bests in winning the 200 free (1:52.1) and the 100 butterfly (57.6).

Mike Kamler won two events and a relay for San Rafael, while Art Morrill and Dave Milano each took two and a relay for San Marin. Varsity and Class B swimmers from Marin Catholic competed against the San Marin and Drake "B" teams in a triangular meet and won with 58 points

GALLAGHER TRADED

N.L. Starting To Believe In Year Of Young Giants

COMBINED AP & UPI

SAN FRANCISCO (UPI) — San Francisco likes to boast that "this is the year of the young Giants" and the rest of the National League is starting to believe it.

It was the young hotshots who led the red-hot Giants to three runs in the eighth inning Friday night for a 5-4 comeback victory over National League king Cincinnati and the team's fifth straight win.

The Giants also showed that this is the year of the youth movement when they swapped disgruntled Al Gallagher, a veteran at age 27, to the California Angels Friday night and brought up still another youngster to take his place on the roster.

Rookie Garry Matthews doubled home pinch-runner Domi Blanco with the winning run Friday after another rookie, Garry Maddix, had singled to score the tying run.

Matthews, a 22-year old outfielder, had three hits after going into the game with a .154 average.

His game-winner was a towering drive to right field that usually-reliable Bobby Tolan badly misjudged. The ball bounced over the fence for a ground rule double.

It was the third straight hit off Cincinnati relief ace Tom Hall who was the loser.

Manager Sparky Anderson of the Reds brought in Hall because he thought it would keep Giants' manager Charlie Fox from sending Willie McCovey to the plate as a pinch-hitter.

But Fox went against the strategy and McCovey made it pay off with a run-scoring single.

"I don't know who ever said I couldn't hit against lefthanded pitchers but I'm tired of it," McCovey said. He didn't start because Fox felt he needed a rest.

The big rally started quietly with Cincinnati starter Ross Grimsley getting the first two batters. Then Chris Speier walked and Dave Kingman singled.

That's when Anderson's strategy, which helped produce a National League championship last year, backfired.

Gallagher was the third baseman for the 1971 pennant-winners but had been platooned with Ed Goodson, Dave Kingman and Jim Hart over the past two seasons.

"It's up to Al Gallagher to prove manager Charlie Fox wrong," Gallagher said. "I'm just thankful for the opportunity to play. All I asked for

Twins' Hisle Continues Batting Assault On A's

BLOOMINGTON, Minn. (UPI) — Mention Larry Hisle and the Oakland Athletics seem to roll over and play dead.

The centerfielder of the Minnesota Twins hit a solo homer and scored three runs Friday to help the Twins open their home season with an 8-4 victory. It was Minnesota's fourth straight triumph this season over the world champions.

And Hisle, who has had previous unimpressive stints with Philadelphia, Los Angeles and St. Louis in the National League, played an important role in three of them. He has eight hits, three home runs and five runs batted in so far this season against Oakland from his leadoff spot.

Today the A's hope he loses his way to the ballpark before lefty Ken Holtzman (0-1) of Oakland duels Bert Blyleven (1- 1) in the second meeting of the weekend series.

A crowd of 13,040 turned out on a cool and windy day Friday to watch the Twins tee off on starter John Odom and relievers Paul Lindblad and Horacio Pina for eight runs in the first three innings.

Oakland closed the gap on two-run homers by Reggie Jackson in the fourth and Sal Bando in the sixth. But Ray Corbin took over for starter Jim Kaat in the seventh and blanked the A's over the final three innings.

Red Wings' Coach Wilson 'Could See Ax Coming'

SPORT SHORTS

Combined AP & UPI

DETROIT — John Wilson "could see it coming."

Friday the 13th arrived with a bang: Wilson was fired as coach of the Detroit Red Wings.

"I'm not surpirsed," Wilson, 43, said after general manager Ned Harkness of the National Hockey League tea told him his services were no longer wanted. "I could see it coming all winter."

"They're not going to get another coach as good as John Wilson," veteran center Alex Delvecchio of the Red Wings said on learning of the firing. "He got no support form the front office."

No successor was announced but the No. 1 man has to be Ted Gavin, highly sought after coach of the Port Huron Wings in the International Hockey League. Port Huron is Detroit's IHL affiliate.

The Red Wings went to 37-29-12 this past season but were again nudged out of the playoffs, this time by Buffalo, because of a losing two-game road trip to the West Coast.

Home Court A Big Plus For Chicago

By ASSOCIATED PRESS

In the Los Angeles-Chicago basketball series, home is where the victory is — in all six games, the win has gone to the team hugging its own hardwood.

Friday night in Chicago it was the Bulls turn to be lousy hosts. They defeated the Lakers 101-93, forcing the seventh game in Los Angeles Sunday night.

In the other National Basketball Association playoff action, Boston stopped Atlanta 121-103 wrapping up that series 4-2 while Golden State also eliminated Milwaukee in six games, winning the finale 100-86.

Before a season-high 18,096 fans, Bulls' guards Norm Van Lier and Jerry Sloan combined for 53 points to pick up the slack after Chet Walker was slowed by a knee injury and Bob Love could produce only five points.

Sloan was shifted to forward after Walker's injury and responded with a game-high 27 points. Walker returned to the game late in the third period and finished with 16.

In Atlanta, the Celtics polished off the Hawks with a 25-2 burst in the final quarter.

Jo Jo White paced the Celtic attack with 33 points while Dave Cowens contributed 27 and John Havlicek had 24.

Lou Hudson accounted for 35 of Atlanta's points, 29 in the first half.

Boston now meets New York in a rematch of last year's semifinal series which the Knicks won. Opening game is Sunday afternoon in Boston.

The Golden State Warriors advanced into the semifinals by shocking favored Milwaukee 4-2.

Jim Barnett scored 26 points to pace the Warriors, who were able to defeat the Bucks only once in six tries during the regular season.

Kareem Abdul-Jabbar had 27 points for the Bucks.

The American Basketball Association returns to action today as Kentucky, with a 1-0 lead, travels to Carolina for a 2:00 game. Tonight, Utah goes for its second victory as it hosts Indiana in a 9:35 start.

Canadiens Star Frets About Playoff Rival

MONTREAL (UPI) — Frank Mahovlich, the big winger who bagged his 500th career goal this past season, is worried heading into the semifinal series of the Stanley Cup playoffs between the Montreal Canadiens and the Philadelphia Flyers.

"We have to get ourselves together, we almost blew the series in the quarterfinals to the Buffalo Sabres," Mahovlich said. "We were not mentally alert and we can't play that way and expect to beat the Flyers."

"I don't think we're ready, but I know we're going to get together before tonight's opener and we will be well organized to face the Flyers."

Philadelphia qualified for the semifinals for the first time in its six-year history by eliminating the Minnesota North Stars four games to two. It took the Canadiens six games to eliminate Buffalo in their quarterfinal series.

The New York Rangers lead the Chicago Black Hawks, 1-0, in the other semifinal series, which resumes Sunday afternoon at Chicago with a nationally televised game (NBC) at 3 p.m. EST.

Bruce Little broke a 39-year-old school record in winning the discus yesterday, but College of Marin's track and field team was defeated by Santa Rosa Junior College in a Camino Norte Conference meet in Kentfield, 97-38.

Little's heave of 140-7 snapped the standard of 139-9 established by Bill Brooks in 1934.

Greg Biber was a double winner for Marin in the 120-yard high hurdles (16.1) and the triple jump (43-10) as the Tars won six events but yielded to the superior depth of the Bear Cubs, who are tied for the conference lead at 6-0. Marin is 1-5.

Giants Win Series On Casey's Homer

By DAVE BRASE and TIM SIMONS

NEW YORK — A month ago, there was an awesome earthquake in Japan; but at home, things are going well. There is peace, prosperity and a giant new baseball stadium in New York called Yankee Stadium.

Today in that stadium, baseball commissioner Kenesaw Mountain Landis has announced that 58,000 people are in attendance. This total breaks all existing records for attendance at a World Series game.

It's the first World Series game in the Yankee Stadium but the third straight year that both New York teams will square off in baseball's grand finale.

The John McGraw-led Giants have beaten the Yankees in the two previous series.

Now we're in the top of the ninth and the score is tied. "Bullet" Joe Bush is on the mound for the Yanks. There are two outs and the batter is the veteran outfielder Casey Stengel.

The count is 3-2 on Casey. "Bullet" Joe delivers and Stengel drills a line drive to the hole in left-center. Casey has one bad leg but this should be in for extra bases.

Stengel is really moving as he charges around second base headed for third. He reaches third and without hesitation turns for home! The entire crowd rises to their feet as the strong arm of left fielder Bob Muesel fires the ball to the plate.

Catcher Wally Schang waits as Casey Stengel races desperately to beat the baseball home. Stengel slides. Schang can't make the tag. Casey has done it!

The Giants shut the Yankees out in the bottom of the ninth and win the first game of this 1923 World Series thanks to their colorful, 33 year old outfielder Charles Dillon Stengel.

BOWLING NOTES

Baciocco Has 785 At Country Club

"I'm still in shock. I still can't believe it."

The elated speaker was San Rafael bowler Bob Baciocco and he was discussing his record-shattering 785 series at Country Club Bowl in San Rafael Tuesday night in the 905 Classic.

The 38-year-old Marinite broke the house mark established by Charles Valsecchi of San Rafael who had a 769 in the same league Feb. 6. Baciocco's effort is the best recorded Marin showing of the year.

While Valsecchi deemed his own production as "lucky," Baciocco considered his "shocking. I'm still excited about it." Baciocco bowled games of 288, 256 and 241. In his 288 game, Baciocco surpassed his previous best outing of 277.

"I missed a 300 game this time by leaving the 3-6 on my 11th ball. Just before I rolled that ball, I was trembling. After I left the pins, I said 'I'm glad that's over with.'" He converted the spare and continued his scintillating showing in the next two games.

In the final game, the Marin bowler who carries a 188 average had an open on the third frame. Had he spared that one, Baciocco would have broken the 800 barrier.

Afterwards, he said "that's my best series ever. I've never bowled a sanctioned 700 before."

Baciocco, president of a San Francisco designing firm, then saluted his spectators and bowlers for their support. "They were great. They gave me a lot of encouragement."

Ex-Cager Hightower Files $573,000 Suit

DENVER (UPI) — Former basketball player Wayne Hightower filed a $573,000 lawsuit in U. S. District Court against the American Basketball Association and the Carolina Cougars Friday, charging the contract he signed gave Carolina a monopoly on him.

Hightower, 32, alleged he signed a three-year contract with the Cougars in 1971, guaranteeing him $40,000 the first year, $45,000 the second and $25,000 the third. On Sept. 19, 1972, Hightower was traded to the Denver Rockets with the agreement Denver would pay him $17,500 a year and Carolina would pick up the difference.

Golf Star Blancas Hot As Weather

PENSACOLA, Fla. (UPI) — Homero Blancas' golf game heats up with the weather.

The pudgy, good-natured Texan seldom plays well during the winter months, but he had three top 10 finishes last month in Florida and, now that it's April in the Sunshine State, he has a good shot at his first victory of the year.

Blancas went into today's third round of the $150,000 Monsanto Open with a two stroke lead over Frank Beard and the way he played the first two rounds indicated he's on a hot streak.

The 33-year-old Blancas had a 4-under-par 67 Thursday and, with three birdies on the back nine including a 35-foot chip shot, posted a 69 Friday — the only man to shoot in the 60s two days in a row.

Beard, who has not played up his usual standards the past year and a half, came out of the pack Friday "with my best putting in six months" to post a 66 for a 138 total.

Four others, including Aussie Bruce Crampton, who needs at least a third place finish here to vault past Jack Nicklaus and Lee Travino — both of whom skipped this tournament — and take over first place on this year's PGA money list, is one stroke behind Beard.

He was tied at 139 after 36 holes over the Pensacola Country Club course, with its brisk winds and hard, slick greens, with Al Geiberger, two-time champion Doug Sanders and Bob Wynn. Napa's Ron Cerrudo made the cut with a 145.

Friday's round included three holes-in-one, by Mason Rudolph, Tommy Shaw and George Hixon, the most for one round that any Professional Golfers Association official could recall. In fact, there have been only six other aces previously on this year's tour.

Blancas went into Friday's round with only a one-stroke lead over Sanders and was tied with Beard on the leader board, at 4-under, with seven holes to play.

"I knew," said Blancas, who started late in the day, "that my lead was already gone and I sort of kept track whenever I came across a scoreboard out on the course," he said.

around here was a chance, but Charlie never showed any confidence in me.

"Fox told me more than once that I was the worst player in baseball," Gallagher added. "So when I found out about the trade, I went to his office and thanked him for giving me a chance to play somewhere else."

He had said he wanted to play regularly or he traded and Friday was swapped for minor league infielder Bruce Miller, who hit .289 at Tucson last year.

The Giants sent Miller to Phoenix and called up 22-year-old Mike Phillips, a fancy glove man who hit .248 at Phoenix last year.

Ozark Decision On Christenson

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Those people who questioned Philadelphia manager Danny Ozark's decision to keep 19-year-old righthander Larry Christenson on the Phillies' roster this spring should apologize for doubting the wisdom of such a seer.

The youngster has "big leaguer" written all over him. In fact, there are some who feel the Phillies have found themselves another Robin Roberts.

Christenson, who was pitching at Marysville High School in the state of Washington at this time last year, made his major league debut Friday night and tossed a five-hitter against the New York Mets as the Phillies posted a 7-1 triumph. It was the Mets' first loss after four victories.

A 6-foot-4, 215-pounder with a good fastball and a fine curve, Christenson came within one out of posting a shutout when Cleon Jones doubled then scored all the way from second on a passed ball by rookie catcher Bob Boone.

But, except for that lucky break, the Mets were virtually helpless against Christenson. The rookie pitcher was a bit wild, walking six, but the Phillies bailed him out of trouble with three double plays.

Christenson, the Phils' No. 1 choice in the draft last June, pitched last summer at Pulaski of the Appalachian Rookie League and posted a 4-2 record with only two complete games. This spring, however, he impressed Ozark enough to be kept on the roster at the expense of some veteran pitchers.

"It's easier here," said Christenson, comparing the majors to the minors. "The tremendous defense...and the help on offense. The team really did it tonight especially with those doubleplays. I'm disappointed at not getting the shutout but not that much as long as I won.

In other National League games Friday night, St. Louis beat Chicago 6-3, San Diego nipped Houston 5-4, Los Angeles downed Atlanta 6-3 and San Francisco beat Cincinnati 5-4.

Christmas Spirit In Milwaukee

By U. P. INTERNATIONAL

Christmas was in the air Friday at Milwaukee County Stadium and snow was on the ground but Bill Parsons was the only one who had reason to celebrate.

Parsons and Jerry Bell combined on a one-hitter as the Brewers won their 1973 home opener with a 2-0 victory over the Baltimore Orioles before 13,883 fans who braved the 38-degree weather.

The Brewers' first two home games were postponed after a record 15-inch snowfall hit the city Monday. There was still a foot of snow on the ground as strains of "Oh, Come All the Faithful" could be heard through the Stadium.

Parsons, who pitched only 13 innings in spring training because of shoulder trouble, tired in the eighth inning and needed relief help from Bell.

Mike Cuellar allowed the Brewers only three hits, but two were home runs—one by designated hitter Ollie Brown and the other by Pedro Garcia who also homered against Cuellar last Saturday.

Parsons allowed only Paul Blair's solid single to right in the seventh before tiring in the eighth. He retired Mark Belanger to start the inning but Merv Rettenmund walked and manager Del Crandall brought in Bell, who walked Bobby Grich and Earl Williams to load the bases before retiring the side en route to picking up his first save of the season.

In other games Minnesota whipped Oakland 8-4, Kansas City belted Chicago 12-5, Detroit edged Cleveland 4-3 and Texas defeated California 4-2. New York and Boston were idle.

Amos Otis got four hits, including his second homer of the season, and scored three runs to pace Kansas City past Chicago.

Jerry Johnson, acquired by Cleveland from San Francisco during the winter, walked home Bill Freehan with the winning run in the seventh inning to lead Detroit over Cleveland.

Texas made four hits count for four runs and Mike Paul and Steve Foucault combined on an eight-hitter as the Rangers defeated California.

Marsi Pitches Tomales Past St. Vincent '9'

Sophomore Sam Marsi pitched a one-hitter under threatening skies yesterday to lead the Tomales High School braves to a 6-0 North Central League II baseball victory over host St. Vincent of Petaluma.

Marsi's bid for a no-hitter was broken up with two out in the seventh inning when Dan Tocchini laced a single into right field. Jim Leoni was thrown out trying to go to third on the play for the final out of the game.

The win improves Tomales' NCL II mark to 3-1, putting them into a second-place tie with St. Vincent, one-half game behind Kelseyville.

"Marsi was effective out there," Braves coach Jim Clahan commented after the game. "He really did a fine job." Only two shots were hit off Marsi, besides Tocchini's, as he forced the Mustangs into ground outs and popups. He struck out just three and walked three.

STUDENTS KEEP BAY WATCH

Members of San Rafael High School marine biology classes checked water conditions in San Rafael Canal yesterday as part of a 12-school bay study project. Called MER, Marine Ecology Research, it is sponsored by the Contra Costa County Department of Education to keep watch on changes in San Francisco Bay waters. About 60 students in three classes are involved in the study of pollution and silt levels, salinity, and condition of marine organisms, said teacher Larry Lack (standing in middle boat). The data also is passed to the San Rafael Chamber of Commerce for information on the effects of dredging and sewer overflow in the canal. (Independent-Journal photo)

Park Area Workshops Announced

A series of lectures and workshops aimed at helping Bay Area citizens play a planning role for the Golden Gate National Recreation Area will be sponsored by the University of California Extension in San Francisco next month.

A day-long series of lectures May 12 on "National Parks and Urban America" will feature conservationists, environment writers, urban project officials and federal state and local parks officials, including Pierre W. Joske, Marin County Director of Parks and Recreation.

Evening workshops May 14 through 17 will explore desirable uses of the huge recreation area in Marin and San Francisco counties for conservation, recreation and performing arts.

Information and registration forms are available from the University Extension, 2223 Fulton Street, Berkeley 94720.

Two Easter Egg Hunts Announced

Two Easter egg hunts in San Rafael — one at Albert Park and the other at the Terra Linda Recreation Center — will begin at 10 a.m. April 21 for children through age 8.

The event is sponsored by the San Rafael Parks and Recreation Department, the San Rafael Police Officers Association and the San Rafael Jaycees, according to Andrew J. Snyder, parks and recreation director.

Dates Changed For Dominican Musical Events

Performance dates for two concerts scheduled by Dominican College in San Rafael this spring have been changed.

A faculty recital by Willard Tressel, violin, and Ted Blair, piano, has been postponed from April 29 to May 6 at 7:30 p.m. in Angelico Hall. The program will include the music of Beethoven, Saint-Saens and Leon Kirchner.

The final concert of the Music Associates Chamber Music Series likewise has been postponed from May 6 to May 20 at 7:30 p.m. in Caleruega Hall.

This program will be presented by twin pianists William Corbett-Jones and Sylvia Jenkins. A trio originally scheduled to perform May 6 has canceled because of illness of one of the members.

Basic Canoeing Course Is Set

A six-week course in basic canoeing, sponsored by the Marin Chapter, American National Red Cross, will be taught by Richard Brown of Novato beginning May 3.

The course will conclude with a day-long river outing.

Students must provide canoes, paddles and lifejackets. Registration and information are available at the chapter headquarters, 712 Fifth Avenue, San Rafael.

Vote Tuesday For Your School Trustees

By ERIK INGRAM

Voters in 15 Marin County school districts will select Tuesday from a large field of candidates vying for 43 board seats up for grabs this year.

In all, some 95 candidates will be in the running when the polls open at 7 a.m. The polls will close at 8 p.m.

The largest turnout of candidates is in the tiny Bolinas-Stinson Beach School District where eight hopefuls are competing for three four-year seats and three others are battling for the unexpired term of Trustee John G. Barrow.

Bolinas-Stinson Beach voters also will consider a proposal that the school district's general purpose operating tax rate be increased from its present $2.05 to a new $2.55 per $100 assessed valuation.

Originally, 110 persons filed for some 57 trustee positions in 21 Marin districts, but the field has narrowed because of dropouts and "no contest" elections. There is a contest for one county board of education position.

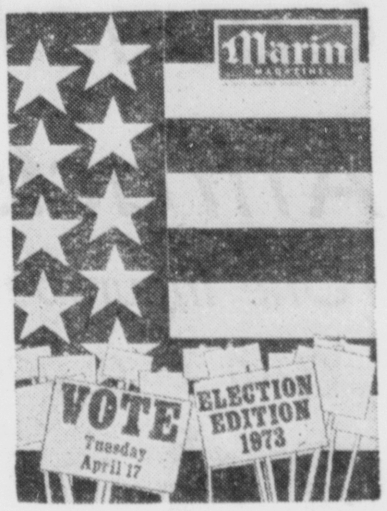
Six districts, including the usually volatile Sausalito School District, failed to draw fields larger than the number of seats up for election.

Other "no contest" districts include the Laguna, Lincoln, Nicasio, Shoreline Unified and Union school districts.

In Southern Sonoma County, the Cotati-Rohnert Park School District and the Adobe School District are also without trustee contests. In the former, Maurice C. Fredericks, Anthony Carbone and Gloria A. Garrett are unopposed for three positions. In the latter incumbents Margaret Kullberg and William V. Youngs, and Donald C. Bennett have no opposition.

Residents of the Cotati-Rohnert Park School District, however, will vote on a one-and-a-half million dollar bond issue for school construction purposes.

In other elections around Marin, voters in Novato will consider a four and a half million dollar bond measure for flood control, voters in Fairfax a $300,000 bond measure for a new fire station, among other things, and voters in San Anselmo a $500,000 bond measure for open space. San Rafael voters will elect councilmen as well as school board members, and decide the fate of several city charter change proposals.



THE COVER

ON TUESDAY, voters of Marin County will go to the polls to perform one of their most important civic obligations and opportunities — to help select their school board members. In several Marin and Sonoma County areas, special elections have also been scheduled in conjunction with the school election. Polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. To assist the voters in their decisions, this issue of the Independent-Journal Marin Magazine is a special edition devoted to the election — the candidates, their qualifications, their stands upon what they consider to be the most pressing issues of their respective districts.

The Special Elections: Bonds And Director

A heated race in the Fourth Division of the Marin Municipal Water District heads the list of special elections set for Tuesday.

In other special elections, voters in Novato will consider a four and a half million dollar bond measure for flood control work, voters in San Anselmo will decide a $500,000 bond measure for open space, and voters in Fairfax will ponder a $300,000 bond measure for a new fire station, among other things.

A two-thirds majority of votes cast is needed to pass bond issues.

The polls will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

IN THE WATER district's Fourth Division (Mill Valley and parts of Kentfield), voters will choose from three candidates — Jerome Hauke, Dr. L. Martin Griffin and Ross Shade.

The three are vying for the unexpired term of Eugene A. Miller and the race has broken down into a battle between those who would limit water to restrict population growth and those who wouldn't.

VOTERS IN THE Novato Flood Control Zone, where waters rampaged out of creeks and into homes this past winter, will vote on the bond measure to finance a Novato Creek Flood Control Project.

The zone, 44 square miles, from Big Rock Ridge to Gnoss Field and from San Pablo Bay to within a mile of the Petaluma-Point Reyes Road, contains 16,770 registered voters.

The type of project to be undertaken isn't specified in the measure, but the work would consist of enlarging Novato Creek channel from Highway 101 to San Pablo Bay, control of Novato Creek from Diablo Avenue to Stafford Lake, and cleaning and enlarging of Warner Creek and the lower portion of Arroyo Avicchi Creek, according to Citizens for Creek Protection and Enhancement.

There isn't any written argument against the measure, but some local conservationists are worried about the potential for a concrete channel.

The choices, according to the district's consultants, are a local-federal (Army Corps of Engineers) project which would include a concrete channel along Warner Creek, a modification of the local-federal project, and leaving creeks in their natural state.

Proponents said along with flood control, the work would include enhancement of creek areas, including recreational amenities, and that public hearings will be held before any project is approved, giving people in the area the chance to reject it.

SAN ANSELMO residents will vote on a $500,000 bond issue to preserve as open space portions of 226 acres of undeveloped land in the city.

The measure at the outset would cost taxpayers 10.8 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, with the levy gradually decreasing over a 25-year period as the city's assessed valuation increases. The cost to the owner of a $40,000 home would be $11 the first year, according to city officials.

Some 7,608 registered voters are eligible to cast ballots.

FAIRFAX RESIDENTS on Tuesday will vote on a $300,000 bond issue for construction of a new firehouse and remodeling of police facilities on the current site at Bolinas Road and Park Street.

The measure at the outset would cost taxpayers 12.1 cents per $100 of assessed valuation, with the levy gradually decreasing over a 25-year period as the city's assessed valuation increases. The cost to the owner of a $30,000 home would be $6 the first year, according to city estimates.

Some 4,313 registered voters are eligible to cast ballots.

VOTERS IN THE Bolinas-Stinson School District will be asked to approve a 50c increase in the district's tax rate when they go to the polls Tuesday.

The tax hike would bring the district's total levy to $2.25 per $100 of assessed valuation.

The school district board agreed to ask for the additional money in January, saying it was needed to make up for revenues lost by creation of the Point Reyes National Seashore and Golden Gate National Recreation Area.

School officials say local income is down more than $10,000 from last year and will fall even lower when land losses from the recreational are calculated fully.

An additional reason for the tax election is the new state tax shift law which will compute future income for the small West Marin district on the basis of current, reduced revenues.

Officials contend that the district cannot expect much more than the current $240,000 annual income in future years.

District residents appear to be split on the tax proposal. Some favor it, saying that unless the district gets the additional money, programs will have to be cut and the quality of education will suffer.

Others contend that all the ramifications of the tax shift measure are not yet known and say the district should not ask for the increase until it knows for certain if more money — and just how much — will be needed.

A simple majority is needed to pass the tax measure.

There are 1,259 registered voters in the district.

VOTERS IN THE Cotati-Rohnert Park School District in southern Sonoma County will decide on a million and a half dollar school building bond issue Tuesday.

The funds together with state assistance will be used to build a 15-classroom school in the Holiday Park area to accommodate new growth there.

The Sonoma County assessor's office estimates the bonds would add 23 cents per $100 assessed valuation on the district tax rate. For the first year the bonds would add $17.25 to the taxes of the owner of a home with a $30,000 market value.

WITH VIVID MEMORIES of the scenes, such as this one that they have witnessed and experienced this winter, voters of the Novato Flood Control Zone will go to the polls Tuesday to approve or disapprove a four-and-half-million-dollar flood control bond issue. Enlargement of the Novato Creek Channel, cleaning and enlargement of Warner Creek and enhancement of the creek areas are proposed for the project. The bonds require a two-thirds vote of approval. The photograph above was taken by Independent-Journal staff photographer Alfred M. Arn in January at Garden Court off South Novato Boulevard, after Novato Creek had rampaged over its banks.

San Rafael's Council Race Attracts Six

One Incumbent In Field With Two Seats At Stake

By NELS JOHNSON

Six candidates are vying for two seats in the San Rafael City Council election on Tuesday.

The council contenders are Carl J. (Red) Brown, athletic director of Sir Francis Drake High School; Richard C. Fox, a research chemist; incumbent councilman Lawrence E. Mulryan; Jack G. Nixon, chairman of the county planning commission; Thomas R. O'Toole, chairman of the city planning commission, and Leo Tinkler, a San Rafael real estate broker.

Expiring on Tuesday are the terms of Mulryan and the late Harry A. Barbier, whose death last fall has left the council split on a number of issues.

Though candidates have offered varying shades of opinion, there has been general endorsement of the city's redevelopment plans, local control of planning, the city's formation of a new general plan and open space acquisition.

Questions concerning the city's past performance in planning matters, the city's sign ordinance and eight proposed charter amendments that will appear on Tuesday's ballot have provided a wider spectrum of opinion.

CARL J. BROWN, athletic director at Sir Francis Drake High School in San Anselmo since 1958, served on the city's park and recreation commission for six years, and was a member of the San Rafael Board of Education from 1963 to 1971. He served as chairman of the board for two years.

The 57-year-old Brown, who lives at 47 Longwood Drive, received a degree in physical education, as well as a teaching credential, from California State University, San Francisco. He was a member of the Civilian Conservation Corps, once worked as a pipefitter and is the former owner of a San Rafael tavern.

Brown has stressed the need for "new blood on an old council" and has declared that he has the ability to take an objective look at crucial issues "unlike others who follow the whims of their council buddies."

He has pledged to "tune my ear to the people of the community" if elected, and has said the city council should work more closely with the San Rafael Board of Education. "I support the idea that change can come from outside the council level," he said, adding he pushed for parks when on the parks commission "but the council wouldn't respond."

He has said that the city has been guilty of poor planning in the past and has urged that the city's general plan be "open-ended" to "take care of all concepts."

The three most important unmet needs of the city, according to Brown, are support for law enforcement, correction of drainage problems and flood control, and free parking downtown. Public improvements needed, he believes, in order of priority, include a recreation center, expanded library and central firehouse, Brown said.

Brown opposes Propositions H, J, and K, which would allow the council to set the size of the fire commission, parks commission and library board. "I think the citizens should decide," he said. Brown also opposes Proposition C, which would make the city treasurer an appointive post.

RICHARD C. FOX, a research chemist for Chevron Co., is a member of the city's citizen advisory committee on the general plan. He is a 17-year resident of San Rafael and lives at 127 Humboldt Street.

The 45-year-old Fox received his Bachelor's Degree in chemistry from Massachusetts Institute of Technology and won doctorate honors from the University of Illinois.

Fox, who describes himself as a conservative conservationist, has stressed that there is no incompatibility between ecology and economic health "since people come to San Rafael because of its beauty and business follows them. Destroy that beauty and you destroy San Rafael."

Fox, claiming the city has been guilty of poor planning in the past, has urged that open space dedications be required of all developments. He has also urged creation of a park and recreational area in the Canal district.

Fox has suggested stronger leash laws and a program whereby dog owners who repeatedly violate the law be sent to dog obedience school.

The three most important unmet needs of the city, according to Fox, are "beautification in its downtown, Canal and Francisco areas," more citizen participation, and "less special interest thinking and more good old-fashioned civic spirit and togetherness." Public improvements needed include parks downtown, beautification and trees downtown, and free parking downtown, according to Fox, adding that all public improvements involving expenditures of more than $250,000 — including proposals for a recreation center, expanded library and central firehouse — should be submitted to the voters.

Fox has been most negative regarding proposed amendments to the city charter. He called the wording of Propositions H, J and K too vague, saying he would favor expansion of the commissions involved to seven members each. He is uncertain about Proposition F, or increasing city promotion expenses ceiling from $1,000 to a new $15,000 lid. And he opposes Proposition C, or making the city treasurer appointive, and Proposition G, or allowing the board of education to fill its own vacancies.

LAWRENCE E. MULRYAN, appointed to the council in 1970 when Fred C. Robbins Jr. was named city attorney, is an attorney for a San Francisco insurance firm. He is the city's representative on the City-County Planning Council and the Association of Bay Area Governments.

He was recently elected by the Marin Council of Mayors and Councilmen to sit as a member of the Marin Local Agency Formation Commission.

The 35-year-old Mulryan, who lives at 74 Upper Oak Drive, founded and became first president of the Mont Marin Homeowners Association, served for a year on the Dixie School District financial committee, and is a former vice president of the Oak View School Association. He was appointed to the city's planning commission in 1969, a post he held until being appointed councilman.

He received a Bachelor's Degree in economics from California State University at San Diego and a law degree from Hastings College of Law.

Mulryan has stressed the need for citizen participation in city affairs, and pledged support of the Town Meeting Association, citizens advisory committee and formation of a committee on open space bond money allocation. Mulryan was co-chairman of the city's successful $2,250,000 open space bond campaign.

Mulryan has called long-range planning "the key to the future of San Rafael," and urged retention of the maximum amount of open space and preservation of the city's hills and ridges. He has also urged preservation of the Robert Dollar Estate.

He has called the city's sign ordinance — which he was "instrumental in drafting and approving" — as the best in the county, and has said the "Standard Brands" sign in the Montecito Shopping Center is in violation of that ordinance.

The three most important unmet needs of the city, according to Mulryan, are to "enhance our cultural resources and preserve our historical heritage," reverse the trend of the Canal area toward overcrowding and improve recreation in the area, and the creation of moderate income housing in San Rafael.

He supports all proposed charter amendments.

JACK G. NIXON, appointed to the county planning commission in 1969 and its chairman since June, 1971, has served as a director of the Marinwood Community Services District, president of the United Homeowners Association of Greater San Rafael and as president of Marin Association of Life Underwriters. He received a Bachelors Degree from the University of Missouri and won Master's honors from the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

Nixon has said that long-range planning is the major task facing the city. "If we don't start to define where we want to be, it's a sure bet that we'll never get there."

The foremost issue is land use planning, according to Nixon, who has said that the city has done a poor job of planning in the past.

Nixon has listed the city's crime rate as another concern, saying police liaison officers should be sent into local neighborhoods to teach methods of burglary prevention to residents. Nixon has also urged maintenance of the current housing mix in the city, saying safety personnel who serve the community are hard pressed to find adequate housing.

He has called for preservation of the city's hills and ridges and has lauded the city's sign ordinance.

The three most important unfulfilled needs of the city, according to Nixon, are recreation facilities, the need to eliminate visual pollution and unattractiveness of some areas as the entrance to San Rafael, and the need for a general plan that reflects the views of the majority of city residents.

A recreation center, central firehouse and improved library — perhaps a Terra Linda branch — are needed public improvements, he said, adding improved parking downtown is also important.

Nixon has opposed Proposition F, the charter measure which would hike the city's lid on promotional spending from $1,000 to a $15,000 maximum.

THOMAS R. O'TOOLE, appointed to the San Rafael Planning Commission in 1962 and recently elected as its chairman, is a member of the Senior Citizens Coordinating Council and the city's chamber of commerce. He is co-owner of Milani's Garage in downtown San Rafael.

The 49-year-old O'Toole, who lives at 66 Junipero Serra, was defeated in a bid for election to the council in 1971. He polled 3,341 votes to 3,527 for incumbent John A. Miskimen and 3,515 for incumbent Fred E. Jensen.

O'Toole, a graduate of San Rafael High School, has described himself as a native son always available to discuss problems with citizens since he works downtown. He has advocated stable "income producing growth" and has stressed the need for moderate-priced housing to accompany such growth.

O'Toole has said that while open space preservation is important, each hill and ridge will have to "stand by itself" for acquisition consideration after the city's general plan is completed.

He has urged more police community relations work to stem the rising tide of burglaries in the city and suggested that the city tighten its mutual aid agreement ith the county because "our equipment is rolling when it shouldn't be." He has also suggested creation of a paramedic team in the city's fire department.

O'Toole has praised city efforts at planning, saying "we really haven't been dragging our heels at planning," and has backed the city's sign ordinance, although expressing uncertainty over size restrictions on signs allowed merchants with large frontages.

The three most important unmet needs of the city, according to O'Toole, are redevelopment downtown, an improved Canal area and more moderate priced housing. Public improvements needed, in order of priority, include library expansion — perhaps a Terra Linda branch — a recreation center and a central firehouse, O'Toole said, adding Canal area improvements and city entrance improvements are also needed.

O'Toole supports all proposed charter amendments.

LEO TINKLER, a San Rafael real estate broker, is the head of Leo Real Estate Co. and Marin County Rentals on Fourth Street. He is president of the Tamalpais Toastmasters Club and has been active in the Little League program in Terra Linda.

The 48-year-old Tinkler, who lives at 749 Bamboo Terrace, attended the University of California at Berkeley and obtained an Associate of Arts Degree. He has taken various courses, enabling him to receive credentials as a licensed real estate broker, a licensed real estate agent, a licensed general insurance broker and a licensed registered representative of the National Association of Security Dealers.

Tinkler has stressed tax relief for property owners through thrift in city government, his independence as a result of a lack of any "favors owed to anyone" and his concern with the shortage of "decent housing" in San Rafael.

Talking about open space preservation is meaningless when a housing shortage prevents people from living in the city and enjoying it, according to Tinkler.

Tinkler, however, has also called for environmental balance and selective building after balanced planning — "No more indiscriminate gobbling up of open space for anyone's purely personal financial profit."

Tinkler, who describes himself as a consumer advocate, has said that he is always available to discuss problems with citizens, since he works downtown.

Tinkler has also blasted city-county squabbling and said that the city is plagued by dirty sidewalks, loose dogs and an "oppressive" sign ordinance that is "harmful" to merchants.

Tinkler did not respond to an I-J questionnaire that asked for viewpoints on city needs and proposed charter amendments. Tinkler, in a letter to the editor, said his views on charter amendments "should not influence any voter one way or another" in the city council election because "I happen to be just one of the voters who will cast his ballot, and I feel I have the choice of keeping it secret."

CHARTER AMENDMENTS ARE UP FOR DECISION

Eight proposed amendments to the San Rafael City Charter — ranging from a proposal to make the post of city treasurer appointive rather than elective to expanding the size of three city boards — will appear on the San Rafael ballot Tuesday.

The proposed amendments are:

PROPOSITION C would make the post of city treasurer appointive rather than elective.

PROPOSITION D would reduce from three years to one year the residency requirement which candidates for elective office must meet, bringing the city charter in conformity with a state Supreme Court ruling that residency requirements of more than one year are unconstitutional.

PROPOSITION E would raise from $2,500 to $3,500 the amount of money the city may spend before being required to call for bids.

PROPOSITION F would increase the present $1,000 limit to a $15,000 maximum the amount of money the city can spend on municipal advertising and promotional purposes.

PROPOSITION G would permit the San Rafael Board of Education to fill its own board vacancies. The board is now allowed to fill its own vacancies only if the city council fails to do so within 60 days. Proposition G also provides that the term of any appointment or election in a special election will expire at the next regular municipal election. This applies to all elective offices, including the council.

PROPOSITION H would allow the city council to set by ordinance the size of the fire commission, now limited to five members. Proposition H would allow city fathers to expand, decrease or abolish the body at will.

PROPOSITION J would allow the city council to set by ordinance the size of the park and recreation commission, now limited to five members. Proposition J would allow city fathers to expand, decrease or abolish the body at will.

PROPOSITION K would allow the city council to set by ordinance the size of the library board, now limited to five members. Proposition K would allow city fathers to expand, decrease or abolish the body at will.

A Critical Time For The College

New Indian Valley Campus In Forefront In Election

By PATRICIA PERRY

This year's trustee election comes at a historic time for the Marin Community College District as it embarks on building a companion campus to the 47 year old College of Marin.

Construction of Indian Valley Colleges in a wooded valley in Ignacio is scheduled to begin this summer. The cluster-style campus is expected to eventually relieve the overcrowding that has plagued the College of Marin campus in Kentfield in recent years.

The Kentfield campus is designed to house 5,000 full-time day students — this fall enrollment zoomed to around 7,000. The North Marin campus, when complete, will serve 5,000 students.

In common with all California's community colleges, the Marin district faces increasing financing difficulties in the coming years as state funding is expected to decline. However the state tax-shift school-finance law, Senate Bill 90, which has drastically affected elementary and high school district's revenues, does not apply to community colleges.

There are six candidates for three seats on the board, as the terms of office of Trustees Theodore C. Wellman, Robert E. Oliver and Donald K. Felt expire. Wellman and Oliver have decided not to seek reelection.

Originally eight candidates filed for election, but since filing Alvin Buckelew and Anne B. Saltonstall have withdrawn from the race for personal reasons. Their names will still appear on the ballot, however.

JAMES KIMO CAMPBELL is a senior history major at the University of California at Berkeley. He works part time at the College of Marin as a reader, and does freelance writing for local newspapers.

He has been active in College of Marin affairs since coming to the mainland from Honolulu in 1966. He is a former student body president at College of Marin and was editor of the campus newspaper, The Times. He has served on several college committees and was a member of the original student-faculty advisory committee for Indian Valley Colleges.

Campbell, 26, lives with his wife, Nancy, at 2 Oak Ave., San Rafael.

Stating that the college district is facing a money crisis with declining federal and state support and increased enrollment, Campbell said the district needs trustees who care more about what happens in the classroom than about administrative bureaucracy.

Instead of cutting back on student services and the hiring of new faculty, he advocates a moratorium on hiring administrators.

Indian Valley College will be a chance to build a "beautiful exciting facility that will not duplicate the kinds of mistakes that are seen on the Kentfield campus," he stated, decrying "monolithic" poorly-designed buildings that cost millions.

The trend in increased enrollment at College of Marin is due to more women, veterans and olders students, he noted, and the college is obligated to accept the "incredible burden" as expenses force more and more students away from four-year colleges.

ELIZABETH M. DEEDY was a trustee on the college board from 1958 to 1971, when she decided not to run for reelection.

She is a past member of the Mill Valley School Board and has been active in many community organizations, including the League of Women Voters, Center Point and the Tuberculosis and Respiratory Disease Association. She is a director of the Colleges of Marin Foundation.

Born in Atlanta, Ga., she graduated from Queen's College in North Carolina, and received an M.A. in psychology from the University of Pennsylvania.

She and her husband Daniel are the parents of six children, and live at 1 Garden Road, Ross.

Mrs. Deedy, 59, said she decided to seek election to the college board after a two year absence because she is "keenly interested in and aware of the problems facing College of Marin and the new Indian Valley Colleges." She believes her 13 years of expereince as a trustee will be of special value as the board faces challenges ahead.

She feels the opening of the North Marin campus will relieve the overcrowding at College of Marin, and thinks serious study should be made on the idea of offering Saturday classes to part-time students seeking a degree while they're working.

She also favors offering as many adult non-credit classes as possible in locations throughout Marin County which also would help congestion on the Kentfield campus.

JOSEPH E. DOHERTY is a probation officer for the Marin County Probation Department and coordinator of the Juvenile Delinquency Prevention Commission.

He is a director of the Greater Novato Chamber of Commerce, president of the Novato Jaycees, past president of the Probation Workers' Union and past chairman of Allied Juvenile Agencies of Marin.

A native of New Jersey, he earned his Bachelor's Degree in philosophy from St. Mary's University, Baltimore, Md., where he did two year's of graduate work in theology. He is currently working on his Master's Degree in counseling.

Doherty, 32, lives with his wife Elizabeth and daughter at 22 Villa Vista, Novato.

Concerned with the overcrowded classrooms and traffic congestion at College of Marin, he advocates development of the Indian Valley Colleges campus, adding "being aware of what it means in terms of taxes, it should be built on an increment basis. As a board member I would make certain the campus would not be overbuilt."

He supports a divisional rather than the existing departmental structure at the college, and "an approach which will keep the administration in touch with all students."

He believes his training and experience would enable him to make a valuable contribution as a trustee and asserts that local control is the essence of the state's community college system.

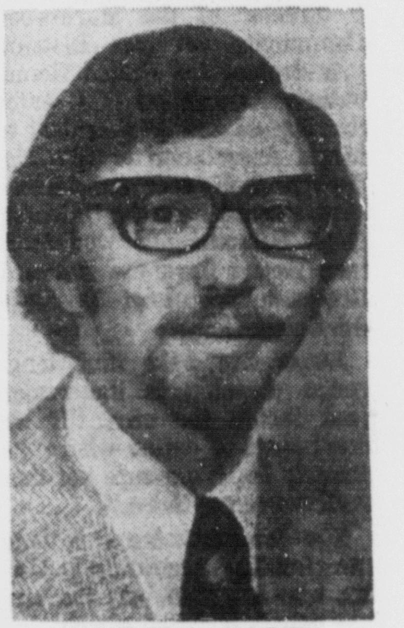
DONALD K. FELT was appointed to the college board in 1968, and elected to a four-year term in 1969, serving as board president in 1971-72.

An attorney, he is a partner in the San Francisco firm of McCutchen, Doyle, Brown and Enersen, specializing in corporate finance, general business and real estate law. He also is director and secretary of MBAssociates of San Ramon, a technology company.

A native of Chicago, he gradauted from Yale Law School in 1961, and is a member of the Yale Club of San Francisco, and on the Yale Alumni Schools Committee.

Felt, 38, lives with his wife Priscilla and three children at 150 Greenwood Way, Mill Valley.

In a college setting, Felt believes that the board should establish the general outline for the curriculum but that structuring of specific courses should be the primary responsibility of the faculty and administration, subject to board review.



GEORGE A. MAGID

He considers that problems with teacher tenure laws relate primarily to the probationary staff, and believes that the board should have absolute discretion not to rehire for the first three years "at a minimum."

While noting that in practice most educational decisions at the college level are best left to the staff, he feels it is important for the board to retain its powers of approval over such matters.

JOSEPH A. GEREGHTY JR. is a stockbroker with the San Rafael firm of Waldron and Company.

He is president of the Alumni Association of the College of Marin and has been active in Marin County Republican affairs. He belongs to the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, and has worked for the Central Marin Boys Club funding group, and in Lions Club White Cane activities.

Gereghty, 36, attended College of Marin and graduated from San Francisco State College in 1962.

He and his wife Gail and two sons live at 3 Laurel Grove, Kentfield.

Gereghty states that the function of the board is to set policy, and it should listen to the faculty or staff for their every day ideas. He charges that there has been much passing of the buck on decision-making.

On the question of teachers' tenure, he feels there is "more than adequate protection for teachers under the present system," and he would like to see

Only One County Board Trustee Contest

Trio Of Candidates Seek The Nod To Represent New Area Three

Although there are three seats vacant on the Marin County Board of Education after June 30, there will be an election in only one trustee area on Tuesday.

Incumbent Glen B. Robinson was the only candidate to file for Trustee Area 6 (The Mill Valley and Sausalito school districts.)

Two entirely new trustee areas were created this year under redistricting of the county board's constituencies, and one new area - 5 — the Larkspur and Reed school districts plus the Strawberry area - attracted only one candidate, Marilyn C. Steinau.

Thus Robinson and Mrs. Steinau have already been named to the board and will assume office in July.

The other entirely new trustee area has drawn three candidates. It's Area 3, and includes all the Dixie School District, plus Santa Venetia, Los Ranchitos and the northern portion of the San Rafael School District.

The county board of education oversees the activities of the county schools office — headquartered in Corte Madera — which operates special education programs all over the county. These include schools for the physically and mentally handicapped, children's centers, and schools at juvenile hall and at San Quentin prison. In addition the county schools office provides services to local school districts.

DOROTHY C. BROWN has been a member of the Dixie School District board since 1957, where her present term expires in June.

She was a member of the Marin County Committee on School District Organization. She is a past chairman of the legislative committee of the Marin County School Boards Association, and a delegate to the California School Boards Association.

Mrs. Brown lives at 1069 Las Gallinas Avenue, San Rafael. A native of Montana, she and her husband Rulon have lived in Marin County since 1954. They have two children, Bonnie, a commercial artist, and Craig, an architect.

Mrs. Brown considers a county board member's primary job to be the budget and policy-making decisions, noting that members must be kept aware of all aspects of educational decisions, because these affect the budget.

The immediate problem facing all school districts is that of finance and the restrictions imposed under Senate Bill 90, Mrs. Brown has stated, "along with militant teacher organizations." The finance legislation, she said, is in the right direction.

She considers teachers' salaries to be "quite adequate compared with other professions and days worked per year" and would like to see the California tenure law which she considers gives teachers all the advantages, treated realistically so the three-year probationary period could be used to weed out weak teachers."

She would also encourage greater use by local districts of county schools office personnel and services.

PRISCILLA E. PHILLIPS is a state registered social worker and until August last year worked for the Marin County Department of Public Social Services.

A native of Tennessee, she gained her Bachelor of Arts degree in sociology and psychology at Winthrop College, S.C. and her Masters Degree in social welfare at University of California at Berkeley.

She and her husband Stephen live at 1048D Los Gamos Road, San Rafael, and have two sons.

She is a member of Aldersgate Methodist Church, Terra Linda, where she is on the executive board of the Women's Society, and has served on the administrative board for three years.

She belongs to Pixie Parents, Marin Art and Garden Center, American Association of University Women (Marin Chapter), and is on the executive board of the Marin Chapter of the National Association of Social Workers.

Mrs. Phillips considers it essential for a county schools board member to be aware of all the special education programs offered throughout Marin County, by visiting each program.

She endorses the new concept of school finance limits under Senate Bill 90, but is concerned that it may curtail funds for new programs, or the improvement of underdeveloped ones.

She has stated that all county schools' programs should be "educationally sound, efficient, economical and meet the needs of the entire county."

EDWARD ALAN TIBBETTS, the district engineer for the Las Gallinas Valley Sanitary District, is making his first try for public office in this election.

A native of Massachusetts, he gained his Bachelor of Science degree in civil engineering from Northeastern University, and is presently working on a Masters Degree in public administration at Golden Gate University.

He and his wife Cynthia live at 102 Los Gamos Road, San Rafael, and have three sons.

He is a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and belongs to Aldersgate Methodist Church, Terra Linda.

Tibbetts, who decided to run for office because he was concerned that not enough candidates for the new trustee area had emerged, considers that local districts generally "do a very adequate job."

He suggests that the county could contribute some of its federal revenue-sharing funds to keep the county schools operated children's centers, threatened with closure by federal funding cuts, open.

He sees fiscal responsibility as a board member's prime concern and suggests line by line analysis of budgets so that "historical" items don't get funded year after year without evaluation.

legislation to change the system.

Saying that 70 per cent of the College of Marin's teachers are earning $16,000 a year or more, he adds that their fringe benefits are good. He does not advocate firing long-tenured teachers, but advocates "more conscientious effort to evaluate the probationary teachers."

GEORGE A. MAGID is a certified public accountant in San Francisco, and also a part-time instructor at City College of San Francisco and the American Institute of Banking.

He graduated from California State University (Northridge) and returned to Marin County six months ago after working in the Virgin Islands for a year.

He is a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants, California Society of Certified Public Accountants, Credit Grantors Committee of the San Francisco chapter of the CPAs, Boy Scouts of America Sea Exploring program, and the Professional Association of Diving Instructors.

Magid, 30, lives with his wife Sara and two children at 49 Canyon Road, San Anselmo.

He feels that the future expansion of the college district, including the building of the Indian Valley campus, adult education and the child care center, are areas to which the board must continue to give close attention.

He also sees other areas needing immediate analysis and review as the long and short-term operating and capital improvement budgets of the district.

He considers himself qualified to clearly assess a situation and separate the necessary requirements from the inessentials of operating institutions of higher learning, citing experience as a consultant for governmental educational agencies at the county, state and federal levels.

Low-Key Campaign In Fairfax District

Five Candidates Covet Three Openings On The School Board

By JEFF GREER

In a relatively low-key campaign, five candidates are competing for three seats open on the Fairfax School District Board.

Three are incumbents — Chairman Dr. George C. Stone, a veteran of nine years on the board; Jane S. Durr, on the board since 1967, and Lawrence G. Hermann, who has served 12 years.

Challenger Joann R. Walla is making her third try for election, and Richard K. Chinlund his first.

THE CANDIDATES and Fairfax citizens have raised a number of campaign issues. The various candidates are stressing different issues as the most important.

Among them are low accomplishment by Fairfax students on state tests, the proposal to close Central School and consolidate its classes with other plant, the need for a multipurpose building at White Hill School, to cost about $400,000, and the turfing of a playground at Deer Park School.

Porteous Avenue residents have opposed the turfing — on grounds it would create too much traffic to and from the school. The incumbents defended the move, saying the community needs the playground.

The student test results have sparked only brief, cautious debate, over whether students should be graded or would be discouraged by grading's competitive aspects.

All the candidates have said the curriculum decisions should be made cooperatively by trustees, administrators, faculty and to some extent students. They've also agreed that trustees should personally visit all district schools each year, that students should not win automatic promotion, and that teacher salaries in the district are "about right."

All five candidates have been more or less critical of teacher tenure laws, but differ on the worth of Senate Bill 90 tax reform law. Chinlund favored its limitation of spending per pupil; Stone opposed it, and others implied "there's nothing we can do."

RICHARD KEITH CHINLUND, 32, of 204 Forrest Avenue, is a first-time candidate.

He is a certified public accountant with a San Francisco firm. He and his wife Donna Mary have two daughters.

Chinlund was born in Illinois and earned a Bachelor's Degree from Carthage College in Kenosha, Wis. He has lived in Marin County five years and in Fairfax almost two years.

He is treasurer of the Street Ministry of Southern Marin, and a member of the Sierra Club, American Civil Liberties Union, PLAN and other groups.

In his campaign, Chinlund has stressed the need for "communication" between all involved in school district functions and favored construction of a multipurpose building useful both to the students and the community.

He has said the board should make more efforts to make the budget understandable to the citizens, and has called for increased athletic programs and other efforts to give youngsters more pride in their school. He also favors "new approaches" in the classroom, explaining that one of his daughters is in a private Montessori school and "I've been very impressed."

JANE S. DURR, 46, has been a Fairfax trustee since 1967, when she was appointed to fill a vacant seat shortly after missing election by only one vote.

She has been reelected to one full term since.

Mrs. Durr, her husband, Milo H. Durr, and their four children live at 470 Cascade Drive. She was born in Cincinnati, Ohio, and earned a Bachelor's Degree in chemistry at the University of Cincinnati. She worked as a laboratory technologist for four years.

A past president of the Deer Park Parent-Teacher Association, she holds an honorary life membership in the California P-TA, and has served on educational committees for the Fairfax schools and Sir Francis Drake High School. She is a member of the Commonwealth Club, Marin County Industry and Education Council, and other organizations.

"I'm going to stand on my record," she told a recent candidates' night audience. She favors a variety of educational environments to serve the varied needs of Fairfax youngsters. She also favors selling Central School, to provide greater efficiency.

She pointed out that she had voted for a 10-cent cut in the tax rate, after the district was reassessed last year.

LAWRENCE G. HERMANN, 45, of 220 Marinda Drive, has been a member of the board since he was first elected in 1961.

He moved to Fairfax in 1956, and was co-chairman for three district tax campaigns before becoming a trustee.

He and his wife, Helen, have three daughters at home. He was born in Olympia, Wash., graduated from the University of Puget Sound and served four years in the Navy. He is engineering supervisor for the Transamerica Insurance Co. in San Francisco.

He has been president and director of the Marin County School Boards Association.

Hermann has stressed that his experience can be valuable

in decision the future board must make about selling Central School, building a multipurpose facility, taking over more curriculum responsibility under new state law. He said he is neither a rigid traditionalist nor "wholly wide open" to innovations in education.

He called for greater parent participation in evaluation of the whole school system, in terms of student learning, teacher efficiency and district operation.

GEORGE C. STONE first was appointed a Fairfax trustee in 1964 for a short term, and twice won reelection since.

The 49-year-old research psychologist at Langley Porter Institute in San Francisco, lives at 801 Bolinas Road with his wife Hannah. They have two children at home and two grown ones living elsewhere.

Stone was born in Los Angeles, and earned his bachelor's, master's and doctorate at the University of California in Berkeley. He has written many scientific and professional articles.

He served as chairman of a Fairfax school bond campaign before joining the board.

"The education we offer is improving, but I'm not sure it's improving fast enough," he told a recent candidates' night audience. He cited the mushrooming total of organized knowledge, which is rapidly making obsolete even the training of recent graduates, he said.

Dr. Stone said the way for the district to improve lies more in use of "human resources . . . not financial" through in-service training, diversity of curricula for children with varied interests, and "establishing for every child a sense of competence."

JOANN R. WALLA, 38, of 665 Cascade Drive, campaigned unsuccessfully in 1970 and 1971 for a board seat.

She is president and owner of Wallabs Inc., a cytodiagnostic laboratory in San Rafael that specializes in diagnosis of cancer cells. Her husband, Joseph, is western division manager for Universal Transport Corp. in San Francisco. They have one daughter.

Mrs. Walla was born and educated in Wisconsin, graduating from the University of Wisconsin in Madison in 1958 with an advanced degree in technology. Her mother is a long-time teacher, her father a retired clergyman.

Mrs. Walla is chairman of the Fairfax Park and Recreation Commission and a member of the year-around school Committee and of the education Committee of the Marin Unit of the American Cancer Society, and a member of professional associations.

In her campaign, Mrs. Walla is stressing "basic educational rudiments," and declaring "recent surveys show that our children can neither read, spell or solve problems." She has been critical of "educational experimentation" and "promises of educators" that "led us to falsely equate large budgets, class size and peripheral curricula with better education."

She has called for attention to grading and evaluation. "If you can't tell what a child has learned, what good is it to try to teach new things?" she said.

A Lively Campaign In The Tam District

Nine Seek 3 Spots On Board

Of all the school districts in Marin County, the Tamalpais High School District has experienced the most controversy during the last year, thus generating an exciting election.

The district, operates three high schools, Sir Francis Drake in San Anselmo, Tamalpais in Mill Valley and Redwood in Larkspur, plus two "alternative" schools, San Andreas and Mewah Mountain.

It has a budget of $10,902,863 this year, and forecasts one of $11,468,864 for the 1973-74 fiscal year. Revenue limits imposed under Senate Bill 90 promise to be a source of concern for the district in future years as it already has the highest administrative and second highest student costs in the entire state.

There are three seats on the board up for election, with the expiration of terms of incumbents Jerrold M. Ladar, Robert W. Corlett and David D. Ring. Ring resigned last month and will not seek reelection. The other two incumbents are running in a field of nine candidates.

ELAINE S. BROCKBANK

ROBERT W. CORLETT
An attorney

MAURINE BALLARD was an English teacher, department head and supervisor for 18 years at Tamalpais and Redwood high schools, retiring in 1971.

She graduated from the University of Kansas and received an M.A. in English from Columbia University. She has been a teacher in Idaho, Washington and California, starting in a one-room Idaho school and later working for seven years on the staffs of two West Coast junior colleges.

She is currently the volunteer editor of the Marin County probation department's newsletter, takes part in the county library's outreach program, and the Redwood International Student Exchange program.

Miss Ballard, 62, lives at 122 Marion, Mill Valley.

She considers educational goals, curricular content instructional methodology and programming to be current concerns. A board whose focus is primarily managerial neglects the heart of education — what happens in the classroom —, she has stated.

The most pressing problems facing the district are to bridge distances between educators, students and parents, she states. It is also important to avoid pressures for "systems control" because a school is not a factory producing tangible objects.

Miss Ballard says a board most needs inner harmony and unity to aid efficient operation and to avoid mistrust and anxiety both in the school and the community.

She believes her understanding of the instructional program and of the complexities involved in creating programs would be an asset as a trustee.

DAVID A. BRINKHAUS, 30, born in Colorado, is an accountant who attended the University of Colorado. He was formerly active in the Young Republicans of Colorado and lived in Los Angeles for eight years before moving to the Bay Area three years ago.

He is treasurer of the Marin Chapter of the National Organization for Women.

Single, he resides at 10 Milland Drive, Apartment B13, Mill Valley.

Brinkhaus says: "The board must work together as a unit with an open mind, and make fair decisions after hearing all sides. The trustees must work with students, teachers and parents, with the education of the students foremost in their minds.

"No board member should make a statement regarding any item that may come before it for a policy decision without first hearing all sides."

"In budgeting monies, the board must only make cuts in the field of teaching after all other fields have been cut to the bare bones," he believes.

And he adds: "I believe it is the board's responsibility to see that any position that opens is open to all people, regardless of sex, race or color, and all should be invited to apply. The hiring should be based on merit alone."

He promises, if elected, to visit each school in the district at least once a month, and to make himself always available to those concerned with the schools.

ELAINE S. BROCKBANK has been involved in Redwood High School and Tam district activities since coming to Marin county in 1963. She is on the district citizens' advisory committee where she is chairman of the subcommittee on alternative education. She has been active in Parent Teacher Associations, the district's discipline study committee and the Redwood School-Community Committee.

Mrs. Brockbank was raised and educated in Utah, where she attended the state university.

She and her husband Reed live at 109 Crown Road, Kentfield, and have four children.

She considers the most pressing problems facing the district are the efficient use of the more restricted funding, and the development of effective and beneficial evaluation processes for teachers and administrators.

Mrs. Brockbank would like to see a wider variety of class structure to meet the diverse needs of parents and students, and the development of more efficient "articulation" between junior high schools and colleges so that students may move more effectively forward in their educational development.

She would like to see career instruction for the non-college bound student expanded, and the wider use of volunteer personnel to augment the smaller budget.

Mrs. Brockbank has said that after 10 years of working in the district she feels she could bring a widely representative and non-partisan position to the board.

ROBERT W. CORLETT was elected to the Tam board in 1969 after 12 years as a trustee of the San Anselmo School Board.

An attorney, he has been president of the Marin County School Boards Association, and active in the United Crusade, the Family Service Agency and Camp Fire Girls. Last year he was president of the Marin County Bar Association.

A graduate of Minnesota Law School in 1947, he worked for the Standard Oil Co. of California before entering private practice in 1953.

He and his wife Kay, are the parents of a son, and live at 14

Nine Candidates Vie For Three Tamalpais Trustee Jobs

Communication Has Loomed Large As Issue In Lively High School District Campaign

Carolina Avenue., San Anselmo.

Corlett has stated that he sees three problem areas facing the district: finance, curriculum and enrollment.

He believes the board must constantly strive to provide courses that have meaning and validity to students, and feels that the Tamalpais District, with its rich resources of talent among students, administration and faculty presents a unique opportunity.

Acknowledging that enrollment in the district's schools will decrease in the coming years, he said it will have a definite financial impact on the district's income under Senate Bill 90 legislation, combined with cut-backs in federal government supported programs.

FRED C. HANNAHS, a stock broker, has been a member of the Tiburon Fire District board since 1959, and served one term on the Tiburon City Council.

He received his B.A. Degree from Macalester College, and is a native of Kenosha, Wis. A Marin County resident for 25 years, he has been active in Boy Scouts and Little League.

He and his wife Casey live at 440 Ridge Road, Tiburon, and have three teen-age children.

Hannahs, 52, questions whether the Tam District knows how to communicate with parents, and states his first suggestion would be to attempt a "vocabulary deflation" adding that the quality of communication seems to deteriorate in direct ratio to the use of overworked cliches.

He has said the board should recognize that a significant number of students and parents are seeking an educational alternative that provides a structured and well-grounded academic education.

Hannahs considers that the tax limitations of Senate Bill 90 may have the desirable effect of forcing the board to consider priorities with more care than it has exercised in the past.

On the question of alternative schools, he states that only the extremely gifted teacher can maintain direction and discipline in a completely unstructured environment, and as a trustee he would make this a specific field of interest and inquiry.

ROBERT ALLEN KARLSRUD is a history professor at Sonoma State College, and previously taught in the Los Angeles city schools.

He received his Bachelor's Degree from the University of California at Berkeley, and his master's and Ph. D from the University of California at Los Angeles.

Karlsrud, 35, and his wife Joanne live at 178 Carson Road, Woodacre.

He is active in Red Cross affairs in Marin County, is a volunteer teacher at a San Anselmo private school, and belongs to the Marin Industry-Education Council and the California State Employees Association.

Karlsrud considers the Tam District needs a responsive board to combat a loss of confidence in the educational system pervading all levels. He has stated that board members must work to create policy before crises ensue, not after a full-blown educational explosion occurs.

He believes the board needs new members who do not have vested interests programs they have been personally identified with to protect, and who are able to take a fresh and more objective view of the issues.

He believes that board members must make classroom visits to analyse existing programs in order to perceive potential problem areas, and feels his familiarity with education would be an asset.

JERROLD M. LADAR was elected to the Tamalpais District board in 1970 to fill out the term of Gloria Melbostad. An attorney in private practice in San Francisco, he was previously an assistant United States Attorney.

Ladar, 39, is a native of San Francisco, and graduated from the University of Washington after receiving his law degree from Boalt Hall, University of California.

He is a member of Temple Emanu-El, and is currently on the advisory board to the 14th Parent-Teacher Association District of Marin and Sonoma counties.

He and his wife Joyce and two sons live at 30 Keats Drive, Mill Valley.

Ladar is most concerned about the communication gaps in the district and feels the administrators are not open enough to constructive criticism. He believes teachers' salaries are about right, and teachers' fringe benefits already excellent.

He supports the concepts of "on location" and "alternative" schools when there are specific goals and when careful evaluation ensues, adding that the Tam District is a richly diverse community. He is concerned that courses be accurately labeled so students and parents know what to expect from a course.

He sees the Tam District as faced with reduced income next year due to Senate Bill 90, declining enrollment and loss of federal funds, while the personnel force will remain constant, adding that the challenge will be where to make budget cuts while trying to improve the quality of programs.

BRICE PACE was formerly dean of academics of the San Rafael Military Academy and is now a mathematics instructor at the St. Rose Academy in San Francisco.

He retired from the Army in 1959 as a colonel, having served on Dwight Eisenhower and Maxwell Taylor's general staffs.

A native of New York City, he earned his B.S. in geology at New York University and a Master's Degree in education from Dominican College.

He and his wife Doris are parents of three grown children and live at 283 Oak Manor Drive, Fairfax.

Pace, 57, strongly advocates greater concern for the public's money, saying that in most cases it represents 75 per cent of the tax dollar for all levels of education. He adds that money is not the sole criteria, more important is better utilization of existing resources. He considers educators, for the most part, to be inadequately trained in fiscal management.

He considers a board should restrict itself to broad policy, embracing finance, housing, housekeeping and educational decisions.

Pace considers recent disagreements on the Tam board to be "literally appalling and a great disservice to the public and to the student."

He has repeatedly stated that he is not willing to commit himself on all issues as he wishes to reserve the opportunity to observe, judge and decide when facts are made know to him as an incumbent.

LOTTE SCHILLER, trained as a teacher and directed her own nursery school. She has been active in Tamalpais High School Parent-Teacher Association affairs for many years and served as a community representative on the district curriculum council.

A charter member of the New Voter Education Research Foundation, she has organized voter registration drives in Marin.

Born in Germany, Mrs. Schiller, 52, attended schools there and in Israel.

She and her husband Hans and three children live at 22 Madrone Park Circle, Mill Valley.

Mrs. Schiller considers the district's most pressing problems in the next four years to be constant reevaluation of educational and budgetary priorities, finding balance between student freedom and adherence to rules needed for the proper functioning of any institution, and restoration of trust by the community in the schools, by the board in its personnel, and by students in their teachers.

As someone who has been involved in the district as a parent and an interested citizen for many years, Mrs. Schiller has said she is deeply disturbed by the increasing lack of trust in the school community.

She states that "no student should leave our schools without the basic tools to grow into a self fulfilled adult, an aware citizen and useful member of the community of man."

Seven Candidates In Dixie District: Three Can Win

Only One Incumbent In Race Lacking In Dramatic Issues

In the Dixie School District, where seven candidates including one incumbent are vying for three seats on the board of trustees, there is no dramatic issue dividing the community.

Rather, each candidate has a slightly different educational outlook and a slightly different answer as to how to cope with decreasing enrollment and tight money.

The district, which serves Terra Linda, Marinwood and Lucas Valley and adjoining lands, has a long history of high parental concern and equally high student performance on testing.

Thomas Neal McNamara is the only incumbent running. Trustees Dorothy Brown, running for the Marin County Board of Education, and John A. Starkweather, did not seek reelection.

Here are the backgrounds and some of the views of the candidates:

CORAL KAY BECKMAN, 46-year-old housewife and free-lance home economist, has lived in Marinwood 16 years with her husband, Bink, and three sons.

Two of the sons attend elementary schools in the district and the third is in high school.

Mrs. Beckman has been involved in 4-H activities, Cub Scouts and Little League and has been a teacher's aide for years. She and her husband have served as Dixie District Coordinating Council representatives for Mary Silveira School.

Mrs. Beckman has a B.S. Degree in institution management from Washington State University and has held various positions in the home economics field.

In addition to school and youth activities, Mrs. Beckman has worked many years on the Marin County Heart Fund campaign, serving one year as co-chairman for Northern Marin County, and also has been a member of the Marinwood Guild of Sunny Hills, American Association of University Women and League of Women Voters. She is a past president of Marin County Home Economists in Homemaking and Alpha Phi in Marin County.

Mrs. Beckman believes that Dixie is "one of the outstanding school districts in the state," but she also recognizes that school taxes have been very high in this district.

"This has been partly because the homeowners themselves have carried the tax burden in the absence of much industry. . . .Senate Bill 90 will relieve them of some of the tax load. Another method of tax relief might be if a broader base were used for school taxation. . . ."

Mrs. Beckman told a candidates' night audience that she believes in "teaching useful knowledge" and that she advocates "as much utilization as possible of parents" in assisting teachers.

WAYNE E. CLIFF, a 39-year-old resident of 425 Quietwood Drive in the Terra Linda section of San Rafael, is vice president of BankAmerica Realty Services Inc. in San Francisco.

He holds a Bachelor's Degree from Dartmouth College and a master's in business administration from Amos Tuck School.

He and his wife, Margot, and their three children moved to Marin County 10 years ago. Two of the children attend schools in the Dixie District and the third is at Terra Linda High School.

"The Dixie School District is the only reason we live where we do," Cliff told the Independent-Journal earlier this year.

He said he thinks the Dixie District has made efficient use of the "taxpayer's dollar" during past years, and "while having far from the highest expenditure per pupil, the district is considered one of the best in the state."

Cliff has consistently linked the quality of the school district with the continued high value of homes in the area.

"One need only look at the classified ads for houses for sale which stress the location within the Dixie District to see evidence of this value," Cliff said.

He added that "any tax relief that would jeopardize this quality would be false economy which could well reduce the value of all homes within the district."

JOSEPH DOYLE, 41, has lived with his wife Sada, and two children in the Dixie School District for the past five years. The family home is at 552 Appleberry Drive in Lucas Valley.

Doyle, a statistician for the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare in San Francisco, has been a member of the Dixie District's citizens advisory committee and Boy Scout Troop 64 committee.

Doyle has said he has no objection to innovation in education but believes that children are sometimes used as guinea pigs in experiments which exploit them for "psuedo science."

He cited a recent reading study in the district which he said involved 90 children for three months "for nothing" since "the study was done so badly no conclusion could be reached from it."

Doyle is a strong believer in evaluating school programs and believes in a "literal interpretation" of the Stull Act, which sets standards for teaching performance.

Doyle has also said that, even with declining enrollment, quality can be maintained in the district but advocates "fiscal responsibility to the taxpayer."

Doyle holds a Bachelor's Degree in business and economics from Oklahoma State University in his home state.

DONAL A. McENHILL, 43-year-old dentist who practices in San Francisco, lives at 22 Mount Foraker Drive in Lucas Valley, with his wife Mildred, and four children.

He ran unsuccessfully for the Dixie board in 1971, finishing third in a field of seven candidates. He has served on the Marin County Committee on School District Organization, Dixie Parents Club and Dixie Finance Advisory Committee and is a member of conservation groups and dental societies as well as the California Academy of Science.

He is a graduate of the University of San Francisco and the University of the Pacific Dental School.

He has said that if he is elected he will encourage "a joint effort by parents, teachers and administrators to translate district goals into laymen's language. . ."

McEnhill has said he thinks it is possible to continue current school programs even under state financing restrictions and that he believes in local control of education.

He has cited his regular attendance at district board meetings for the past three years as valuable experience.

THOMAS NEAL McNAMARA, 42, a lawyer with Pillsbury, Madison and Sutro in San Francisco, has served on the Dixie board since 1965.

He and his wife, Mary Elizabeth, and their three children live at 2200 Lucas Valley Road.

He is a graduate of Duke University and received his law degree at George Washington University.

In addition to two terms on the school board, he has been legal adviser to the Marin Foundation and the Lucas Valley Homeowners Association.

McNamara has said he sees a "great challenge" to the district in maintaining quality education for the present 4,000 pupils in the Dixie District (down from a high of 5,000) under new legislation which limits taxation.

He said while Dixie school taxes are the highest in Marin, there has been a "desire of the parents in Dixie to maintain a quality educational program regardless of the cost to themselves."

"It would appear that SB 90 will alleviate the problem for Dixie in part by increasing the state's share of the cost of education. This is the only significant way in which local property taxes can be reduced," according to McNamara.

He cited his eight years' experience on the board as valuable in establishing priorities for various education programs.

LANCE P. MORAN, 32, lives at 1063 Lea Drive, Terra Linda, with his wife Carole and two children. He is a realty firm owner, who said his business allows him considerable time to devote to the school board.

He was vice chairman of the Dixie District citizens committee opposing Proposition 14 last year and has worked as a teacher's aide at Don Timoteo School.

He is a graduate of San Rafael High School and San Francisco State College.

Moran has decried lack of communication between the board and teachers and called "innovation the heart" of the school system. He has said the reason the district ranks so high academically is in part due to new but "highly controlled programs."

He also has said that with his business background, he believes he can determine how to live with new expense limits without harming the district's programs.

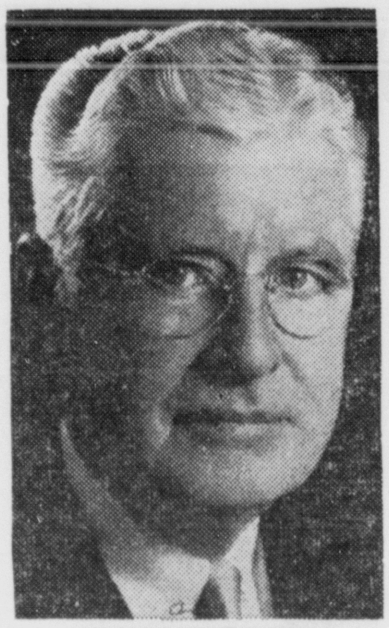
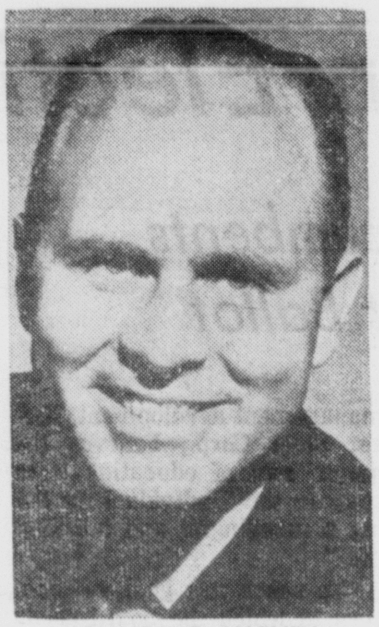
Eight Vie For Four Larkspur Chairs

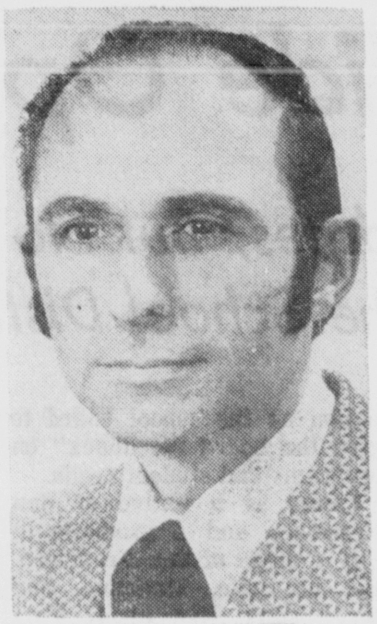
Tuesday Voting Has Big Field



JOHN W. BOYD
Insurance agent

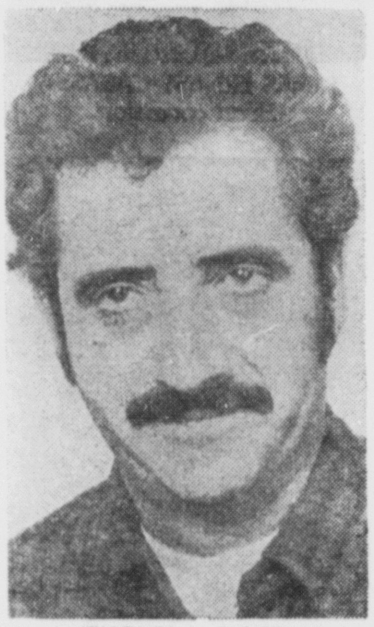


HOWARD C. HARVEY
Mining officer



JAMES A. LAVILETTA
Civil engineer

JAMES P. McDONOUGH
School principal



ANTHONY J. MORENO
General contractor

CHARLES E. NEWMAN
Police officer

W. DON PACK
A dentist

LEON PERSSON
Industrial manager

With four of the five seats up for grabs Tuesday, a large field of eight candidates has emerged to battle for votes in the Larkspur School District board contest.

Trustee Shirley A. Walker is the lone board holdover as the terms of Leon Persson, John W. Boyd and Howard C. Harvey are expiring and colleague Curtis P. Kamai has decided to step down after a long board service.

Persson, Boyd and Harvey are running, joined by challengers James A. Laviletta, W. Don Pack and James P. McDonough. Anthony J. Moreno and Charles E. Newman seek to fill Kamai's unexpired term.

Oliver B. Larson Jr. of Corte Madera also was in the race for Kamai's seat, but dropped out last month because of business commitments.

A total of 7,533 voters is eligible to go to the polls.

A rundown on the candidates in alphabetical order:

JOHN W. BOYD, 78, general agent for the Franklin Life Insurance Co., has been a district trustee for 20 years. A resident of Larkspur, he was voted that community's outstanding citizen in 1971 by the chamber of commerce. Last year the new multimedia library at Larkspur-Corte Madera School was named in his honor.

Boyd, answering an Independent-Journal questionnaire, said in response to one query that he is opposed to teacher tenure laws. "Good teachers do not need it and poor teachers hide behind it," he said.

He also criticized the state's new tax shift, school finance legislation: "SB 90 does not help our district in any way and the Legislature has not met its obligation to finance education in the State of California."

HOWARD C. HARVEY, a 51-year-old officer with the Homestake Mining Co., first was elected to the board in 1965. A Corte Madera resident, he is president of the Mariner Cove Improvement Association, a member of the Corte Madera General Plan Study Committee and chairman of the group's subcommittee on housing.

In his response to I-J questions, Harvey generally agreed with Boyd's position on teacher tenure laws and said he didn't endorse SB 90 either because "it will tend to weaken the financial stability of the district.

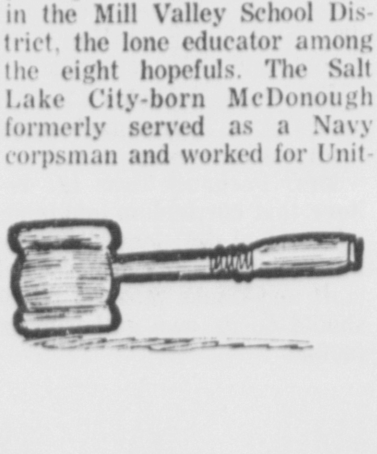
"State funds from other tax sources will be needed to maintain and improve the educational capabilities of the district in future years," he added.

JAMES A. LAVILETTA, also of Corte Madera, is a 40-year-old civil engineer with the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare in San Francisco. He is a Marine veteran, a member of the Elks Club and institutional representative for a Marin Scout troop.

The candidate, criticizing the state of parent communication with board members and district administrative staff, recommended compilation of a newsletter that would include highlights of board meetings. He also advocated rotating board meetings among the district's four schools and hoped to encourage more parent and student participation in formation of policies.

Laviletta didn't believe that board members should help review applications for teacher openings. "The superintendent, through his staff, should be the one to select teaching staff. However, for management positions, I feel the board should have a hand in making selections."

JAMES P. McDONOUGH, 38-year-old Larkspur resident, is principal of Homestead School in the Mill Valley School District, the lone educator among the eight hopefuls. The Salt Lake City-born McDonough formerly served as a Navy corpsman and worked for United Air Lines before beginning a career in education.



In his questionnaire responses, McDonough believed that the Stull Bill, requiring local guidelines to evaluate teachers, "addressed itself" to the teacher tenure question. "Teachers should be commended for a job well done, assisted in areas of weaknesses, and dismissed for legitimate cause."

He also said "there is always a need for better communication between the parents, staff and board. Parents should be involved in committees and workshops before decisions are made."

ANTHONY J. MORENO, 39, is a general contractor who lives in Corte Madera. He is a captain in the community's volunteer fire department, and a former past president of the group. He is active in sports groups.

Moreno believed tenure laws "too much in favor of teachers," and endorsed more local control in teacher dismissals.

He endorsed the idea of rotating board meetings in an effort to boost communication with the community, and said newsletters might also help.

CHARLES E. NEWSMAN, 51, has been a Corte Madera policeman for 15 years, and the department's juvenile officer for nine. He is a member officer of numerous civic and fraternal groups, has been active in Scouting and other youth work and formerly served on the Corte Madera Parks and Recreation Commission.

Newman, while not returning an I-J questionnaire, said he planned to continue regular visits to district schools.

W. DON PACK, a 41-year-old dentist, is scoutmaster of Troop 88 in Greenbrae, works with young people at the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-Day Saints in Greenbrae and has been a dental school instructor for five years. He lives in Larkspur.

Pack, like Boyd and Harvey, expresses concern over the effect on the school district of SB 90. Worrying that per-pupil spending increases permitted under the legislation won't keep pace with inflation, the candidate said, "Quality is inalterably tied up with cost in some degree and I hate to see the high standard of education in our community slide."

On the communication issue, he said: "Parents in our district feel the board and administration are not listening with interest and respect." He suggested parents regularly poll citizens to keep abreast of community feelings.

LEON PERSSON, 43, has been a trustee since his appointment in 1968, and currently serves on the executive board of the Marin County School Boards Association. He is manager of a chemical and industrial raw materials firm in Emeryville, and belongs to a number of trade and social organizations. He is a Corte Madera resident.

Persson, citing SB 90 shortcomings, advocated "more local option" to school finance "such as the availability of some override taxes."

And he said in his completed questionnaire, "I feel that the current tenure laws are wrong . . . One should be able to fire a teacher for poor performance."

Eight Candidates, But No Incumbents, Are On The School District Ballot

No matter what the outcome at the polls Tuesday, the Novato Unified School District will have three new trutees from a field of eight candidates.

The race became wide open when the three incumbents, Carolyn M. Crabtree, Marret B. Boissevain and William G. Schneeflock decided not to seek reelection.

Polling places will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m. the district covering northeast Marin contains 16,773 registered voters.

The candidates are:

JAMES ERNEST CASASSA, a head counselor and dean at Herbert Hoover Junior High School in San Francisco, first runnerup in 1971, is making his second try at a seat on the seven-member board.

Casassa, a member of the steering committee of the Novato Citizens Task Force for Education, has urged an upgrading of the basic skills program, continuing evaluation of programs and a start toward selecting a superintendent to succeed James G. Bunker, who will retire at the end of the 1974-75 school year.

The prime responsibility of an educational program is the maximum intellectual development of young people, he asserts.

One of the major tasks facing the board is the allocation of funds provided through Senate Bill 90, increased revenues which could be allocated to teacher salaries, new educational programs or restoring items that have been cut such as janitorial services and field trips, he said.

Casassa is a member of the Tamalpais Conservation Club, the Highland-Oaks Improvement Association and several professional organizations.

He is a graduate of the University of San Francisco and was charter president of the Alpha Delta Gamma fraternity there.

Casassa, his wife, Catherine, and three children, live at 11 Nina Drive. He has been a resident of Novato for about five years.

THOMAS J. CLEARY, 40, manager of distribution order services, Del Monte Corp., is president of the Rancho School Parent-Teacher Association.

Cleary said, "The citizens as a whole must ultimately decide the tax rate. As a school board member it is my duty to see, whatever the tax rate, that every dollar is spent efficiently to the student's benefit."

Cleary has advocated that the school board be geographically balanced, containing members from as many neighborhoods in Novato as possible.

He said he believes in teaching basics, reading, mathematics and writing, and believes there should be student participation on the school board to give the board "feedback" on programs and student needs.

Cleary is a native of San Francisco and a graduate of City College of San Francisco. He, his wife, Madeline, and three sons, live at 41 Taft Court. He has been a resident of Novato for four-and-a-half years.

He served in the Navy, 1952-54, and is former chairman of the Southern California Food Distribution Warehouse Association.

MABEL CROUGHAN, 53, a microbiologist with the Marin County Public Health Laboratory, said her "orientation will be toward human values."

Mrs. Croughan is a member of the American Association of University women and a former Parent-Teacher Association president and district PT-A officer.

She said all schools should have equal facilities and the schools should serve as community centers. "In our mobile society, families really need a place of belonging and acceptance," Mrs. Croughan said.

She advocated greater effort in career education, saying, "Every child should be prepared to earn his living by the time he gets out of high school, specifically girls in fields other than cosmetology and business."

Trustees should operate as a policy-setting body and should represent children from throughout the district, rather than from a specific neighborhood, she said. "The board also must have a larger concept of state and federal involvement in schools, particularly because of state and federal funding.

One goal she said is "to recapture the joy in learning for the teacher and the pupil.

Mrs. Croughan, mother of six children, ranging in age from 12 to 30, lives at 8 Haverhill Court. She has been a resident of Novato for 12 years.

M. GORDON GADDY, 36, a vice president of Firemen's Fund Insurance Co., is past copresident of the San Ramon parent-faculty-student Club.

Gaddy said, "The school system should be judged by what it does with the raw material it receives," and, "The board must work together effectively."

Schools should expand youngsters' understanding so they can act in the interests of society, find a vocation, fulfill their responsibility as citizens and engage in good personal relationships, he said.

Gaddy is a graduate of Georgia State University and has been a resident of Novato for four-and-a-half years.

He and his wife Sue and three children live at 2473 Vineyard Road.

JAMES HARRINGTON JR., 49, director of personnel and management development, Kaiser Steel Corp., believes the major goal of education is to prepare the "individual for living a meaningful and fulfilling life."

"To reach this goal one concern to which the board needs to address itself is that of providing significant career counseling for Novato students," he said.

Harrington was an executive counselor at the University of Georgia and Southern Methodist University and served on the accreditation study committee at San Marin High School.

He said high school students should serve on the board in "an advisory capacity," and urged a program to increase student awareness of the responsibility of adult status, which they reach at 18.

Harrington also advocates a broader athletic program which would increase participation through "less publicized sports."

Harrington is a native of New York City and a graduate of New York University. He holds a Master's Degree from Southern Methodist University.

He, his wife, Betty Jean, and two children live at 194 Maestro Road. He has been a resident of Novato for 13 years.

DR. JOHN D. KASSENBROCK, 46, a dentist, has served on the Novato Parks and Recreation Commission and is a founding board member of the Novato Civic Foundation.

Kassenbrock believes "any educational system has to be based on individual differences" and must provide basic knowledge.

Course and career counseling has been "one of the most neglected areas and as much attention should be paid to students preparing for a trade as those going to universities," he said.

Special program should be available for the gifted students as well as the educationally handicapped and a combination of innovative and time tested programs "must be worked out."

He said one of the district problems is "the weakened credibility in the eyes of many especially in regard to financial matters," and that teacher morale is low.

Dr. Kassenbrock, a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley and Washington University in St. Louis, is a native of Chicago.

He served as a lieutenant junior grade in the Navy Air Corps during World War II.

Dr. Kassenbrock, his wife, Mary Ann, and six children live at 35 Eames Court. He has been a resident of Novato for nine years.

WILLIAM A. LEHIGH, supervisor of administrative services, Chevron Chemical Co., Richmond, was a member of the district's educational goals committee, 1970-71.

Lehigh believes school board members should participate in all decisions affecting the education of children, with administrative detail delegated to the staff.

He said the tenure system for teachers needs a thorough review and believes there is need for communication between parents and school board, parents and administration and particularly between parents and faculty members.

"I do believe that our schools should exist to bring about the optimum development of the individual, thereby enabling him to attain his full potential to function effectively within his environment and society, "Lehigh said.

He has called for continuing review of the school system, and described the board's function as "coping with various sons at 130 Esmeyer Drive, San Rafael. They moved from Hawaii last September.

In Hawaii she and her husband were researchers for the Hawaii English Program and she testified before the House Education Committee last year.

She also published a community newsletter dealing with schools and other activities.

Mrs. Pechauer holds a Bachelor's Degree in communications from the University of Illinois.

Mrs. Pechauer does not believe that curriculum and other educational decisions should be left entirely to the professional staff and thinks that the board should do its own gathering of facts.

Mrs. Pechauer also advocates "early diagnosis of learning problems" rather than passing unqualified children from one grade to another, an emphasis on basic skills and a setting of goals for children's progress in schools.

She has said she endorses any "concept that really works," but that her own experience with an open classroom program led her to believe it "was an inflexible program, (which) decreased educational levels and was disastrous for the child who needed direction."

Mrs. Pechauer said she believes she has had enough time to get acquainted with Dixie schools and that her experience in Hawaii in school matters qualifies her for the job.

school policy matters as they become apparent, and to collectively work them out to serve the best educational interests of the community."

Lehigh, a native of San Francisco, is a graduate of San Francisco State University. He has served on the board of deacons and board of elders of the Presbyterian Church and as a member of the Marin Republican Central Committee. During World War II, he was a first class petty officer.

Lehigh, his wife, Peggy, and three children live at 844 Sutro Avenue.

BETTY MACHADO, 48, a housewife, has been active in many civic groups and was named a "founding father" of Novato when the city was incorporated in 1960 for her incorporation efforts.

"If you want a trustee who will rubber stamp the administrators' recommendations, I am not your candidate," Mrs. Machado said at the first candidates night session.

"The attitude of the board has not been one of the best to deal with over the years," she said.

Mrs. Machado has opposed plans to rent space for administrators' offices, and board breakfast meetings with the Novato City Council, held at a time, she said, when most of the public couldn't attend.

On the potential closing of Pacheco School, she said she would rather "see the empty classrooms used, instead of closing the school."

Mrs. Machado said there is a lack of communication in the district and approved of having two students on the school board as non-voting members.

Mrs. Machado was a charter member of the Rancho School Parent-Teacher Association and the Novato Federated Women's Clubs and is a former member of the Novato Parks and Recreation Commission and a member of numerous organizations and committees.

She, her husband, John, and two children, live at 1424 Dawes Street. She has been a resident of Novato for 14 years.

Diverse Life Styles Spawn Choice Of School Programs

By PAUL LIBERATORE

Launitas School District voters will be confronted with a double-barreled ballot when they vote Tuesday for members of the district's governing board.

Six candidates are competing for three full-term seats on the board.

And four of those six candidates are also contesting for a special term on the board that runs only until June 30 — a vacancy created by the resignation of Gary Giacomini when he was elected to the Marin County Board of Supervisors.

CANDIDATES IN the regular election are Lee DiVincenzo, Allan J. Kirchem, Marilyn C. Marioni, incumbent Richard C. Sloan, Harry R. Smith and Patricia White.

Competing for Giacomini's unfinished term are Mrs. DiVincenzo, Kirchem, Smith and Mrs. White.

The primary issue in the district in the past few years has been the institution of alternative education programs. Groups of parents have pressed for programs that they thought expressed their philosophies of education for their children and reflected their life styles.

One result during the last year and one half has been the establishment of the Open Classroom and Advanced Basic Capabilities programs (ABC), supplementing the existing more traditional program of basic subjects plus electives.

With that all behind it, the district now is faced with providing guidance and evaluating the progress of the new alternatives.

All candidates agree that the three educational program choices should remain and be developed. Incumbent Sloan, Marioni and Smith have conducted a cooperative campaign, stressing the need for the school to carry education past the walls of the classroom and into the community, the independence of children and bringing up ecological issues in the San Geronimo Valley.

The other three candidates, DiVincenzo, White and Kirchem, have emphasized that frictions resulting from differences in philosophies among residents must be eased, and have called for board objectivity.

The 500 students in the district are distributed in two schools: San Geronimo School, kindergarten through sixth grade, and Lagunitas School, first through eighth grade. The district has 2,091 registered voters.

LEE DiVINCENZO, a former full-time teacher in Fountain Valley in Southern California, has been a subsitute teacher in the Lagunitas district for the past two years.

Substantial community growth in the San Geronimo Valley, she said, has brought with it "a great diversification of interest and ideology," creating a need for diversification in the school system. And with growth, she added, also has come division and polarity in the community.

She said the school board "should not be used as a political or ideological territory" to divide the community or promote individual political viewpoints.

She has called for a breaking up of the polarization in order to free residents to work in the school system as individuals and to put the district in a position "to receive a larger field of talent and ideas without a larger financial output."

"We must create a framework in our school for receiving input from the total community so that no one member will have to experience intimidation," she said. "We must create a framework for positive communication within the school so that no one instructor, child or staff member will feel boxed in and unable to share special talents and attitudes."

She said she offers her objectivity to all three programs offered in the district, her eight years experience as an instructor and parent, and her refusal to divide her attitudes politically.

Mrs. DiVincenzo, 30, of 320 Cintura Ave., and her husband, Joseph, have lived in the community five years and have two children.

She is a graduate of California Western University in San Diego.

HARRY R. SMITH, 30, a clerk in the Fairfax Post Office, has lived in the San Geronimo Valley for three and a half years with his wife, Diane, and two children.

He cites a vast change in the Lagunitas District in the past few years as the outcome of a push by parents, in which he was active, to set up new programs in the schools to accommodate differences in values and life styles among students and parents.

The results of these new programs, he said, "have been spectacular."

He said the best aspect of these new programs is that large numbers of parents are now actively involved in the education of their children — in designing the programs, hiring the teachers and determining the underlying values of each.

He calls now for an evaluation of existing programs and staff.

"There must be yearly individual teacher evaluation, yearly program evaluation, yearly district evaluation and yearly board evaluation," he said.

As problems to be dealth with in the district he lists "school buses that dictate school schedules, overcrowded classrooms, a poor physical education program, the possibility of collective bargaining, a board commitment to lower the student-teacher ratio, and early childhood education."

Smith, of 15 Corona Ave., Lagunitas, served as president of the San Geronimo Art Center in 1972 and is its vice president this year.

He attended Indiana University and Indiana Institute of Technology.

MARILYN MARIONI, 37, a first-time candidate for the Lagunitas board, lives in Forest Knolls and is the mother of three sons, all of primary and elementary school age.

She is a classroom volunteer, organizing the student newspaper Right On News at San Geronimo School, and has lived in the district two and one-half years.

Mrs. Marioni said she is a candidate because she wants to see the existing wide choice of educational programs in the district continue and because she is concerned "for the rights of children."

"They must have a say in their choice of learning style and must be listened to," she said. "Children belong to no one. They should not be chattel to their parents or society.

"Learning is taking place outside — walking in the woods, sitting on the hills, or following the creeks. I feel a board member should raise questions and issues regarding open space, preserving the hills, wildlife and rural atmosphere versus pouring concrete over White's Hill, urbanizing the valley."

She also said she seeks a lower teacher-student ratio and would like to see more communication between youngsters in the various programs offered within the district.

Mrs. Marioni, of 130 Montezuma Road, worked as a newspaper reporter in New Jersey for two years and as a personnel counselor in San Francisco for six years until 1967. She studied at Farleigh Dickinson University and Columbia University.

She is active in the Telegraph Hill and San Geronimo Valley pre-schools. Her husband, Thomas, is director of a San Francisco art museum.

RICHARD C. SLOAN, 37, elected to the Lagunitas board last year after running unsuccessfully in 1971, is a carpenter and resident of Woodacre.

He is a former San Quentin correctional officer, Marin County juvenile probation officer and an Army intelligence officer from 1961 to 1963.

Slaon said his candidacy is committed to parental involvement in the decision-making process of the school.

He said the two new educational programs in the district, Open Classroom and Advanced Basic Capabilities, instituted during his 18 months on the board, reflect the life style of the community and its educational goals.

He said that because of these programs people in the community are better able to accept each other's differences, and no longer feel threatened by opposing ideologies so that they have been able to work together on programs for the whole school.

"I am concerned with maximizing communication between the staffs of the three programs and also communication between staff, administrators and the board so as to break down rigid roles and authoritarian hierarchy," he said. "Decision-making should be a product of a consensus between board, parents, administration and students. In this way, people will participate in the decisions that affect them, rather than criticize the process from the outside."

He listed parental involvement in hiring for the ABC and Open Classroom programs, Open Classroom program evaluation and board rap sessions with classified as well as certificated staff as examples of shared decision-making.

Sloan, the father of two preschool age children, is the board representative to the San Geronimo Valley Planning Committee, a member of the steering committee of Marin Alternative, a board member of the American Civil Liberties Union and chairman for the Committee for Prisoner Humanity and Justice.

He was a delegate to the 1972 Democratic National Convention, an organizer for the Lagunitas school tax election and has been involved in various political campaigns.

He has a Bachelor's Degree in psychology from the University of California at Berkeley.

PATRICIA WHITE, 32, is a first-time candidate for the Lagunitas school board who is currently president of the Lagunitas Parent-Teacher Association.

She said her past two years in the P-TA, first as vice president and then as president, have brought her close to parents, teachers and students in the district.

She said she seeks to further the "one-schol concept" in the district, a path she has pursued in her P-TA work.

"One of the assets of the district is the wealth of diverse backgrounds, interests, talents and abilities on the part of its citizens. This is reflected by our school with its three programs," she said. "We are now at a point where these diversities can either work to our advantage or isolate us from one another. A respect for each other's views is imperative if any one of the programs is to grow... I do not in any way favor one program over another, and I feel for a board member to do so would be a violation of his trust."

She said she feels that success of the program depends on objectivity of the board, and considers herself objective. She added she "strongly objects" to using the board as a stepping stone to other political office.

Mrs. White, of 45 Spring Road, Lagunitas, is the mother of two sons, aged 9 and 4. She attended the University of Minnesota and the University of California at San Diego.

She is vice president of St. Cecilia's Women's Club and a member of the San Geronimo Art Center.

She has had eight years experience as a legal secretary and during that time was an active member of the National Association of Legal Secretaries.

Her husband, William C. White, is in the land investment business.

ALLAN J. KIRCHEM, 42, a civil engineer with the electric branch of the California Public Utilities Commission, is a resident of Woodacre running for the first time for the Lagunitas School Board.

Kirchem cited the three educational programs in the district as its unique feature, and said he favors "their continuance and evolution" with the guidance and study of the school board.

"The Open Classroom program and other alternatives should be available as educational choice within the limits of the resources of the district," he said. "I endorse the three philosophies used here. The balance gives the widest possible choice to pupils, parents and teachers.

"Decisions about curriculum should be made jointly by the school board, superintendent, teachers and students. The final vote on policy and guidelines is, by law, the school board's, with the benefit of the student as the criterion."

He said he disagrees with the automatic promotion of students and suggests that teachers evaluate students and confer with parents several times during the year. He also favors setting up a teacher evaluation process in accordance with the Stull Bill.

He said he approves of Senate Bill 90 and believes increased revenues from it will help the district.

Kirchem, of 36 Madrone Ave., is the father of two children, aged 8 and 5. His wife, Ann Marie, is a registered nurse.

He spent 10 years with the California Division of Highways before his employment with the PUC and is a graduate of Oregon State University.

He is a member of St. Cecilia's Church and the San Geronimo Valley Lions Club as well as being a 4-H Club leader, teaching an automotive class.

O'TOOLE believes Awareness Is Essential for Councilman

Thomas O'Toole believes that a responsible city councilman must be aware of the needs of every part of San Rafael. O'Toole cannot be a one issue candidate. His opponents seem to think the only issue is the campaign fund. O'Toole believes there are more important elements.

During a morning coffee in the Terra Linda home of Eleanor and Donald Langendorf, he cited the following areas of concern:

1. Establishment of a crime prevention unit to help reduce home burglaries.
2. Creation of a paramedic program to assist accident victims.
3. Expansion of recreational facilites.
4. Improved housing for the elderly.
5. Beautiication of major roads.
6. Redevelopment of the downtown area.
7. Open space acquisition.
8. Taxes

O'Toole, a native of San Rafael, reminded the guests that he is the candidate who has been and will continue to be readily accessible to all the citizens of San Rafael.

O'Toole has been a businessman and taxpayer in San Rafael for nearly 30 years. He has been a public servant for 11 years and deserves to be your San Rafael City Councilman.

Kentfield District Issue Is Money

New Board Must Wrestle With Problems Of A Finance Squeeze

By DAVID DIETZ

With five hopefuls vying for three seats, the Kentfield School District board race focuses on one issue: money.

The district, which has 7,057 registered voters and an enrollment of 1,282, is faced with a financial squeeze because of SB 90, the state's new tax-shift, school-finance law, and declining student population which affects state assistance.

Most of the discussion during the campaign, which will end at the polls Tuesday, has dealt with wiping out a projected 1973-74 budget deficit of $80,000 brought about by the financial squeeze.

THE CANDIDATES are incumbent Gloria Riccardi and challengers Bruce Koppe, an attorney and bank official; Winifred Setrakian, active in school affairs; Neil M. Park, an attorney, and Joan Brownstein, president of the Wolfe Grade Parent-Teacher Association. All the challengers either serve or have served on the citizens advisory council to the district board.

Besides Mrs. Riccardi's position, seats being contested are those of J. Richard Ellis and DeWitt K. MacDonald Jr., both of whom are leaving the board after long service.

The district's dilemma is this: trustees last year dipped into budget reserves to keep the tax rate down to $2.96 per $100 of assessed valuation, a procedure called deficit spending. Then along came SB 90, which not only halted deficit spending but clamped a lid on spending per pupil by all school districts and required school boards to ask voter approval of certain overrides.

Thus, combined with an annual average drop of 45 in student population the past four years, the district is confronted next fiscal year with the prospect that expenses will exceed revenues by $80,000 and with no way of wiping out the deficit except by budget cuts.

Views on what and how much to cut vary among the candidates, with all expressing a desire at the same time to maintain the best educational program possible.

The situation, in the words of candidate Winifred Setrakian, has forced a "hard look at reality."

Meanwhile, district officials are hoping legislation in Sacramento will point a way out of the dilemma for Kentfield.

GLORIA RICCARDI, the incumbent trustee, has taken part in some cost-cutting already undertaken by the board in preparation for next fiscal year. Trustees have notified four teachers that they might be laid off and cut six aide positions, among other things.

Mrs. Riccardi hopes to avert the layoffs. "We'll be trying very hard to keep those teachers," she said.

With the help of staff and the citizens advisory council, she said, "the board is in the process of setting priorities on programs." She raised the possibility of elimination of the Spanish program, which she described as "fragmented."

"From the list of priorities, we'll make some decisions," said Mrs. Riccardi, 45, seeking her second full term on the board.

The incumbent, married and the mother of three children, lives at 39 Corte Gracitas, Greenbrae.

BRUCE KOPPE, 39-year-old vice president and tax manager with the Bank of America in San Francisco, supports elimination of low priority programs as set by the citizens advisory council, although he adds some or all might be integrated with basic classroom instruction.

"At the same time, the entire budget must be reviewed to eliminate all deferable or superfluous expenses," said Koppe, who lives with his wife and four children at 54 Paseo Way, Greenbrae.

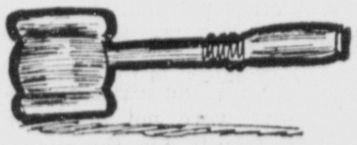
That done, he said, the "only alternative" will be to examine staffing cuts if a deficit still exists.

WINIFRED SETRAKIAN, active in citizens advisory council and Parent-Teacher Association work, believed the district should strive to eliminate teaching positions through resignation, retirement or staffing combinations, rather than layoffs. The 43-year-old mother of four children, who lives at 21 Turnagain Road, Kent Woodlands, said: "It is becoming increasingly clear that a reduction in teaching staff is unavoidable."

Mrs. Setrakian, stressing that long-range considerations also are involved in the fiscal dilemma, saw possibly an expanded role for Parent-Teacher Association members in helping to pick up some of the district's transportation costs.

NEIL M. PARK, of 105 McAllister Avenue, Kentfield, also looks to parents picking up costs of special programs in which their children are involved, such as the $1,000 outdoor education project. But he also supports investigating cuts in junior high school bus transportation and new equipment purchases.

And, like most of the other candidates, Park raised the specter of personnel cuts, noting that 85 per cent of the budget goes toward staff salaries and benefits.



The 30-year-old Park, in private law practice in San Francisco, is the attorney representing the Kentfield Gardens Homeowners Association in its fight against a condominium project behind Marin Catholic High School. He is married and the father of two children.

JOAN BROWNSTEIN, 40, of 25 Wolfe Glen Way, Kentfield, hoped that in addition to trims in areas such as transportation and furnishing of towels to students — "all of these things add up" — teachers would be "conservative" in their 1973-74 salary requests.

Mrs. Brownstein, mother of four who holds a teaching credential from the University of Southern California, also called for scrutiny of the $45,880 capital outlay budget. "Special services which are non-instructional or extra-curricular need assessment," she said.

BEYOND FISCAL consideration, the new board will have to get acquainted with a new superintendent, Eugene C. Peters, named last month to replace the late Anthony G. Bacich.

Peters, now administrative assistant to the superintendent of the San Diego County Department of Education, will take office with the new board in July.

JOHN AND DICK FOX

People ask Dick Fox why he's running for San Rafael City Council. He's running because he wants to help people in San Rafael get together and keep the good things we have and change the not so good. His only special interest group is all the people. He's been solving problems in research for 20 years after MIT and a PhD from Illinois. He knows that people are the most important. He knows we have a precious natural beauty that must be preserved, yet we must see that the fruitful initiative of the free enterprise system is used in a wise way that is constructive not destructive. We need to reduce government burden and cost.

Dick Fox knows how to make progress on all these things. First you have to like people, then you listen to them carefully and try to understand their problems. You encourage them, help them solve their problems in a spirit of mutual trust and respect with an occasional dash of humor.

The above are old, but still good principles. Dick Fox tries to practice them.

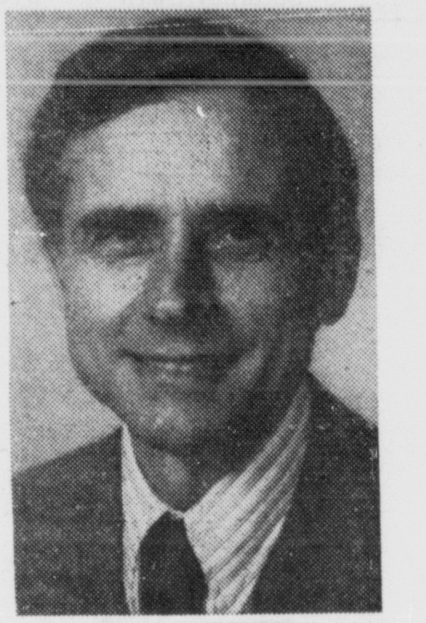
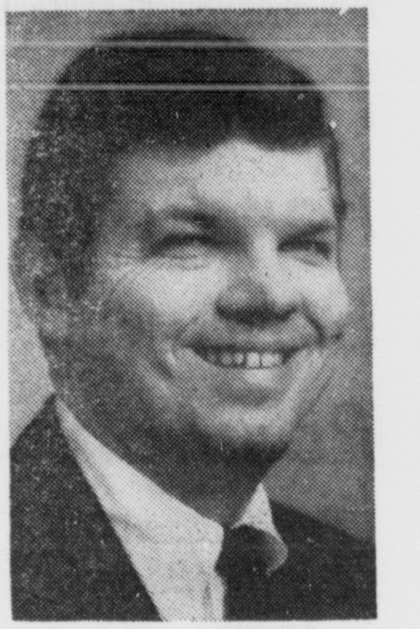
Reconciliation High On Lists Of Reed District Candidates



JOHN J. OSBORN
Research physician



CHARLES V. PATTERSON
An attorney

ROBERT K. OCHNER
U.C. faculty

DONALD FURLONG
Bechtel executive

By GEORGE NEVIN

A rift between two camps in the Reed School Distirct — bridged for the last two years but not eliminated — looms large in the minds of four candidates for three board seats.

Although the district has been relatively quiet since the last board election in 1971, with no new outbreaks of the controversies which regularly rocked Reed during previous years, the potential for new hostilities still exists.

All four candidates — incumbents John J. Osborn and Charles V. Patterson and newcomers Robert K. Ockner and Donald Furlong — mentioned reconciliation of splinter groups as high on his list of priorities if elected.

The third of the three seats vacant is held by Kenneth G. Wells, who decided not to run for another term. The district has 7,619 registered voters.

THE DISAGREEMENT in Reed goes back several years before 1969. During the late 1960s, Reed began experimenting with new types and methods of education and began deemphasizing the traditional skills taught in school in favor of a more loosely structured program — too untraditional, some argued.

As costs skyrocketed — from $469 per pupil in 1960 to $1,019 in 1969 — some parents began to complain the experimental programs were not producing enough results for the money spent.

In 1969, three trustees were elected on platforms pledging opposition to a scheduled 50-cent tax rate increase. They also promised to fight "innovation for innovation's sake" and experimental programs which they said were not working.

The three — Gordon C. Wright, James B. Richwagen and Wells — formed the board majority for a time, but Wright eventually was recalled in a bitter election in 1971 and Richwagen resigned when he moved out of the district.

The 1971 election — which not only involved Wright's recall but also two other board seats — saw the candidates many considered the educational liberals regain control of the board. Osborn replaced Wright and joined Leo Souza, who won reelection, and Margaret E. Jones to tip the balance away from the conservatives.

Things have been calmer in the district since then, but it is safe to say the parents and others who elected Wright, Richwagen and Wells and who voted against Wright's recall haven't gone away.

It is these parents and their views on education that most concern the four candidates running for the board April 17.

Other controversies which could crop up again include a dispute over graded report cards versus ungraded ones; votes of "no confidence" in the board by district teachers, and squabbles over educational goals and achievements, spending of foundation grants and charges that teacher morale and effectiveness suffered from board actions.

The candidates, their backgrounds and their views on issues in the election are:

DR. JOHN J. OSBORN is one of two incumbents running for reelection. A San Francisco research physician, Osborn was elected to the board in 1971 and was its president during his first year in office.

He and his wife, Anne Mary, live at 2960 Paradise Drive, Tiburon, with the last of their seven children. Osborn, 55, is a native of Detroit who has lived in the district 20 years. He is a graduate of Princeton University and Johns Hopkins Medical School.

The major problem facing Reed, he said, "is to let the district settle down and get some work done after the upheavals of two years ago."

"The whole debate of then was very useful and both sides have contributed constructive components" to the district, he said.

Two years ago, he explained, "a group of parents, sometimes labeled the conservatives, wanted more accountability and evaluation of programs. The other parents, called by some the liberals, wanted innovative and flexible education."

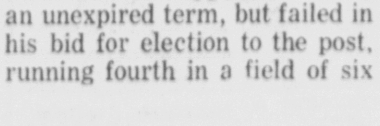
Both groups, he said, "had very important and constructive things to say and both should be listened to."

One goal of the board, he said, should be to return much of the detailed day-to-day work in the district to the administration. "The board took over too much work two years ago. I'm convinced administration is the job of administrators, not of the board."

With "all sorts of different ways of teaching," Osborn said it is "important to keep enough flexibility and variety in teaching to match the child to the teaching method." Parents, he said, should have voice in which type of program their children enter. "Educators tend to forget it, but often parents have pretty good idea which whqch type of education is right for their children."

CHARLES V. PATTERSON, 41, is the other incumbent in the race. A native of California, Patterson was elected to the board in a special election in June to fill the unexpired term of James R. Richwagen, who moved out of the district.

Patterson, an attorney with offices in Tiburon, was a member of the Reed board in 1969, when he was appointed to fill an unexpired term, but failed in his bid for election to the post, running fourth in a field of six candidates and losing out to Richwagen by 41 votes.



Patterson is a graduate of the University of California at Los Angeles and of Hastings College of Law. He and his wife and three children live at 20 Peninsula Road, Belvedere.

"The two most important things a board members must address himself to are economics and curricula," he said. It is the duty of the board to "make sure the taxpayer is getting a fair break. The board has the obligation to see that district programs are in line with the money available."

The district "should be willing to explore new approaches in methodology in education," he said. "In a small district such as ours it's vital to evaluate the potential of any program before it is implemented, and to constantly evaluate and follow up programs after they begin."

If they are unsuccessful, there should be "willingness to admit it."

While board members are "not professional educators and must rely on the professionals to supply information," that is no reason for trustees to agree with everything the administration suggests, Patterson said.

In Reed are "a great number of varying opinions," he said, "and we must try to understand them all. Each opinion probably has merit and there's no reason we can't exchange ideas and opinions as long as we don't become emotional about them."

Patterson stated his philosophy on board intervention in day-to-day district operations: "The board is not an administrative body but a policy-making body. There's no way a board can administer a district when it is meeting twice a month."

As an attorney, Patterson said he could help the district by exploring the implications of various pieces of legislation that affect schools in California.

DR. ROBERT K. OCKNER, 36, was born in Pennsylvania and grew up in Los Angeles. He is a graduate of Pomona College and Harvard Medical School and is a member of the faculty of the University of California Medical School in San Francisco.

Ockner has lived in the Reed District four years, currently residing at 1 Corte Palos Verdes with his wife, Patricia, and three boys. Two of them attend Bel Aire School.

The district, said Ockner, needs "a continuation of the unity and stability that has characterized it for the past two years. One of the major responsibilities of the board is to foster an atmosphere that is conducive to good education."

The district has a ood superintendent in Ralph D. Giovanniello, said Ockner, and "we should allow him as much authority as is consistent with good education."

If elected, Ockner said he would strive to "increase the degree of articulation between our district and the (Tamalpais) high school district as a means of better enabling us to prepare our students and better enabling the students to select their own programs" as they approach high school age.

Also needed in the district, he said, is "a high level of input by the community in the operation of schools. Community interest and involvement have been one of our principal assets and that should continue."

DONALD FURLONG, 56, is a Bechtel Corp. executive. A graduate of the U.S. Naval Academy and holder of a Master's Degree from the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, he has been with Bechtel since 1962 and is manager of the firm's research and development operations.

He is a veteran of World War II and the Korean War, and a retired U.S. Navy captain.

He and his wife, Patricia, who was reared in Sausalito, reside at 4 Eucalyptus Road, Belvedere. Their two children, Thomas and Patricia, attend Belvedere School.

Furlong says he sees no critical issues confronting the Reed District at present, and that he feels "the district is in good hands, with a good staff and a good board." However, he believes, his presence on the board would make it a better balanced board, and that his experience with business and technology — especially such matters as environmental preservation, the energy crisis, the effects of technology on mankind, etc. — would be particularly beneficial to the district in effecting the budgeting and teacher evaluation changes provided for by new state laws.

"My background has made me aware of the fact that our children are going to need the very best preparation for a complex future," he says. "I want to contribute my time and experience to that end."

Four Bid For Ross School Positions

Three Openings On The Board

Four candidates are contesting for three seats on the Ross School District Board of Trustees in Tuesday's election.

They are incumbents Sally Ann Rakow and Elizabeth F. Way, Thomas A. Guerin and David A. Dixon.

The district has one school, Ross School, with 510 students in kindergarten through eighth grade. There are 1,835 registered voters in the district.

THOMAS A. GUERIN
Accounting partner

DAVID A. DIXON
Corporation officer

ELIZABETH F. WAY
Board incumbent

SALLY ANN RAKOW
Veteran trustee

The district faces implementation of the new state tax-shift school financing law, Senate Bill 90, which could restrict its tax rate. Voters, however, approved a higher tax ceiling in June, 1970, the unused portion of which could be added to the amount mandated by the new state law.

Known for quality education and high scores on statewide tests, the district also must deal with decisions regarding open classroom and other innovative educational programs being implemented in other districts.

THOMAS A. GUERIN, 45, a partner in a certified public accountant firm in San Francisco, is running for the Ross School District Board for the first time.

He said that implementation of Senate Bill 90 is the most important task facing the district.

"This comprehensive bill contains new procedures concerning taxation and school financing that will make careful budgeting of even greater consequence in years to come," he said. "I feel that my business experience will be helpful to the school board in this area."

One of his particular goals would be to increase student awareness of career opportunities.

"I would like to call upon the men and women of our community to explain the interesting aspects of their work to seventh and eighth grade students at five or 10 meetings during the school year. This would encourage youngsters to think about careers at an early age and broaden their knowledge of the opportunities open to them."

Guerin said he favors select open board sessions where parents and students could pass along their views on educational needs directly to principals and board members.

He also said he would seek through liaison representatives closer association with other organizations in the community, including the PTA, Recreation Committee and Town Council.

Guerin said he does not endorse the open classroom concept, "although I understand it has been tried and found effective in many areas." He said he does not believe that alternative school ideas apply to the Ross District.

Guerin, of 11 Ames Avenue, Ross, and his wife, Janice, have five children, aged 8 to 18, all of whom have attended or are attending Ross School.

He received a degree in business administration from the University of Santa Clara and served in the Army in Korea from 1946 to 1947 and from 1951 to 1952.

Guerin, a resident of Marin County for 18 years, the past seven in Ross, has coached Little League baseball and girls soccer at Ross School as well as Catholic Youth Organization basketball teams at St. Anselm's Church.

DAVID A. DIXON, 42, is a corporation officer and director of several companies allied with trucking, race horses, fresh food and vegetable export and insurance. He is seeking his first term as a Ross School District trustee.

"I think that curriculum (educational) decisions should be made through the joint effort of board members, school administrators and the certified staff," he said. "This requires very good communication between the three groups, with neither the board nor the school management allowing a feeling of fear or intimidation to exist in the minds of the teaching staff regarding what they are teaching, what changes they would like to see, or even what salaries are fair."

Dixon said he endorses the new concept of school finance as required by last year's Senate Bill 90.

"Something like this was long overdue," he said, "in spite of the U.S. Supreme Court saying that the right to an equal education is not a right guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution.

"It just means that our wealthy districts are going to have to be more critical of how they spend their money. And, of course, there remains the override provision whereby district residents can vote more money for their schools in the future."

Dixon said he does not at this time endorse the open classroom concept.

"I think that changes and improvements in classroom teaching are certainly possible and desirable, but only after they have proven successful in other similar teaching situations in other schools. At the elementary level, we have no need for alternative schools, nor do we have much need for career education."

Dixon and his wife, Edith Ann, live at 1 Arroyo Drive in the Del Mesa section of Kentfield, which is part of the Ross School District. They have

Ross Voters To Fill Three Trustee Slots

Four Residents Have Campaigned For Positions On The School Board

three sons, all of whom attend the district's lone school.

He has a degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Illinois and has done graduate work in business administration at the University of Southern California. He is a former regional manager for Union Carbide and a division vice president for Occidental Petroleum Corp.

Dixon, a member of the San Francisco Commonwealth Club, holds most of the world's patents covering preservation of perishable foodstuffs using low oxygen atmospheres.

ELIZABETH F. WAY, 40, is seeking re-election to a full term as Ross School District trustee.

She was the only candidate to file for the vacancy on the five-member board created by the resignation of H. Jack Wyman last year.

Mrs. Way was graduated from the University of Iowa and Skidmore College with a degree in economics.

"I'm interested in the financial end of school operations and in maintaining the high standards of the school district," she said.

"With recent legislative limits upon school spending, it becomes increasingly difficult for school boards to maintain and improve programs while meeting increasing costs of operation. Economizing within the school will necessitate careful and thorough review of all areas of spending.

"Imaginative development of all available resources must be an important objective of the Ross School Board, so our students may be given every opportunity to progress academically."

Mrs. Way and her husband, Dr. Walter L. Way, live on Shady Lane in Ross with their three children — two in high school and one in Ross Elementary School. They have lived in the district 12 years.

She has been active in the school's Parent-Teacher Association, Sunnyhills Junior Auxiliary, Northgate Group, Ross Guild of the Boyd Museum, and the doctors' wives group at the University of California at San Francisco.

SALLY ANN RAKOW is seeking her fifth term on the Ross School District board.

Mrs. Rakow, first elected to the board in 1969, said she is running for reelection because "I think I can provide continuity and experience to the board."

She said she believes that one of the primary responsibilities of the board is to set "the general character of the educational program and to approve policies to carry out this program," rejecting the idea that educational decisions be left to district staff while the board concentrates on finance, housing and housekeeping.

"Staff should have the opportunity to develop new curriculum approaches that should be reviewed by the superintendent. The superintendent is responsible for presenting to the board a clear rationale for curriculum changes, including built in evaluation procedures."

She indicated that student interest has prompted several elective courses in the seventh and eighth grade program, but that final decision on new courses is the board's responsibility.

She said she endorses the concept of Senate Bill 90 as meeting the purposes of the Serrano-Priest decision.

"Sb 90 will eventually raise the expenditures of the lower wealth districts statewide, which I feel is right," she said.

Regarding Open Classroom and other programs, she said she would support them if they are what the community wants, within the financial and other limitations of the district.

"If the community wanted an educational choice, both an open and contained classroom situation, I believe we could provide it at Ross and still maintain our academic standards."

Mrs. Rakow lives with her husband, Jack, and two children at 59 Winship Ave. in Ross. She is a graduate of Dominican College in San Rafael.

She has served as chairman of the Ross board and is currently Marin's delegate to the California School Boards Association. She is also a member of the State Scholarship and Loan Commission and the Marin County Committee on School District Organization, and was appointed this year to the Republican State Central Committee.

This is the fifth council seat.
There is something you should know about it.

The man who wins this seat in April will break a dead lock. He can make the difference between one way decisions and a council that operates as it should. He must have one main quality: the ability to be fair and rational in the face of pressure. He must have one special interest: you and the quality of San Rafael's future.

No matter what your concerns and feelings, if you want them equally and fairly considered; vote JACK NIXON to the fifth council seat.

Six On School Board Ballots In San Rafael

The Quality Of Education, Alternative School Debated

Six candidates vying for two seats on the San Rafael Board of Education have discussed a number of subjects during their campaigns, but have offered the widest spectrum of views on two issues: proposals to cut school costs, and alternative schools.

Candidates for the board are Suzanne L. Beittel, co-president of the Terra Linda Parent-Teacher Association; Gale B. Fisher, a member of the San Pedro Parent-Teacher Association board; incumbent Paul K. McMullen, a public relations director for Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Co.; Lewis S. Pollock, a sales engineer for an air conditioning firm; Marie J. Sessi, legislative chairman of the Terra Linda and San Rafael Parent-Teacher Association councils, and Jeff D. Yarbrough, a senior at San Rafael High School.

McMullen, appointed to the board last year, is making his first bid for a full term. Board president Lawrence I. Kramer is not running for reelection.

The names of Joan Lisetor and Clarence W. Koop will also appear on the ballot, since they did not drop out of the race early enough to eliminate their names from the ballot listing.

MOST CANDIDATES generally agree that selection of a new superintendent is the major task facing the school system, and there has been little debate that the selection process should involve community input.

(Supt. John F. Plank will resign his post as of June 30 to accept a similar position with the Singapore-American School in Singapore.)

The San Rafael School System, which has 29,926 registered voters and an enrollment of about 8,500, embraces 12 elementary schools, two middle schools and two high schools.

Like other school districts, the San Rafael School System is faced with a financial squeeze in the wake of declining enrollment - especially in the elementary district where a current enrollment of 4,300 pupils is expected to dip by about 200 next year. Most candidates have endorsed cautiously SB 90, the state's new tax shift school financing law, and have offered a wide range of proposals for belt-tightening.

Candidates have also provided a wide spectrum of opinion on the issue of alternative school programs and the quality of education in the San Rafael School System.

Most candidates have agreed the lottery system is unfair, and that state tenure law needs revision. All oppose automatic promotion of students.

SUZANNE L. BEITTEL, of 675 Barberry Lane, is a member of the education committee of the Marin Association for Mental Health, the conservation committee of the Marin Audubon Society, Marin Conservation League, Marin Alternative and the San Rafael Citizens Advisory Committee on the General Plan.

Mrs. Beittel, 45, a volunteer in outdoor education at Santa Margarita School, is past president of the Dixie Coordinating Council and holds a Bachelor's Degree in chemistry from Antioch College. Her three children are enrolled in Terra Linda High School.

Throughout her campaign she has stressed her various activities in the Dixie School District, saying the San Rafael school board needs a Dixie representative since local children graduate into the San Rafael School System. "I feel that I bring representation and input from the Dixie District where I have lived 12 years and have been active in schools and the community."

She has urged a "close look at the budget" and consideration of the possibility of closing one or two of the elementary district's small neighborhood schools in an effort to cut costs.

Mrs. Beittel has said she has "positive feelings" about the San Rafael School System and endorses "a variety of educational techniques," including traditional and alternative programs.

"I would do almost anything" to spark student motivation, she said, adding students need a wide variety of educational programs. "I am pleased with the alternative schools in San Rafael."

School boards should be continually "tuned in" to the kinds of things going on in all district classrooms, she said.

GALE B. FISHER, of 7 Dunfries Terrace, has held board positions with the Womens Agricultural League of Northern California and the Peacock Gap Garden Club. She has been a stewardess, a union representative for a national airline, and a fashion representative for a number of women's publications. She has acted as an "in class" volunteer in the San Rafael School System.

She holds an agricultural degree from the University of Illinois and has lived in the district for 9 years. Her four sons are enrolled in San Pedro School.

Mrs. Fisher, 42, is also a member of the Children's Home Society and a den leader for Cub Scout Pack 55. She is an area chairman for the Republican Party and is on the board of the U.S. Resin and Onyx Corp.

Mrs. Fisher has stressed the need for a "yardstick of judgment," or an "outline in writing as to the learning in a particular year or class. Parents will then be able to better judge if a child is getting the proper instruction to enable him to go to the next school level." She has also proposed that all students be given an aptitude test in their sophomore year and that the school system "follow up on what happens to students after they leave school."

She has urged improvement of the quality of education in the district high schools, saying that many students flunk entrance English exams at the College of Marin.

Mrs. Fisher said the district's spending program can be cut by using Golden Gate Bridge District buses for transporting students, assigning one principal to two schools and by "being thrifty."

She has declared that there would be less call for alternative schools if good teachers were placed in the "mainstream schools." She advocates grade penalties for tardiness and absenteeism and more vocational alternative programs.

PAUL K. McMULLEN, of 248 Knight Drive, has served on the board since last April when he was appointed to fill the vacancy created by the resignation of Paul L. Jones. He is chairman of the San Rafael High School Human Relations Committee, former chairman of the school board's citizen advisory committee, past president of the Glenwood Parent-Teacher Association and a past member of the San Rafael High School Parent-Teacher Association.

McMullen, 41, holds a bachelors Degree from Whitman College and also attended Stanford University and the University of Oregon. He is a member of the board of the Golden Gate Chapter of the American Red Cross.

He has lived in the district for eight years and has two children, one enrolled in Davidson School and the other enrolled in San Rafael High School.

McMullen has stressed the teaching of basic skills, equipping students for the responsibilities of citizenship and offering them a wide spectrum of career opportunities. He has suggested that "career exploration opportunities" be offered to students at the elementary level and that local professional people be made available to show students what careers are like.

McMullen has proposed instructional aid cutbacks and an end to duplication in elementary and high school busing services and consideration of the possibility of closing one or two of the elementary district's small neighborhood schools in an effort to cut costs.

McMullen supports alternative schools "as long as they have clear-cut educational goals" and has proposed an alternative program based on career education. "But alternatives should not be permitted where the goals are poorly defined, or not consistent with the broad objectives laid down by the district."

LEWIS S. POLLOCK, of 9 Knoll Way, is a member of the San Rafael School System's citizen's advisory committee and was the committee's first chairman. He is a member of the Santa Venetia School and Terra Linda High School parent-teachers association and president of the American Society of Heating, Refrigeration and Air Conditioning Engineers.

Pollock, 43, holds a Bachelor's Degree in mechanical engineering from the University of Pittsburgh and is past president of the Nova Albion Parent-Teacher Association and the Los Ranchitos Home Improvement Association.

He has two daughters enrolled in Terra Linda High School and three sons enrolled in Santa Venetia School. He has lived in the district 10 years.

Pollock has expressed concern that the San Rafael school board is "gradually loosing the depth of experience" needed to evaluate school matters. He said he can provide such experience since he has attended 85 per cent of all school board meetings over the past five years.

Pollock has urged better public relations between the school system and community, saying big flaps in the press sometimes overshadow the good things being done in the schools.

Pollock has proposed consideration of the possibility of closing one or two of the elementary district's small neighborhood schools as a means of belt-tightening, but feels that major budget cuts are not needed because the "situation is manageable."

He has expressed support of the alternative school concept, saying "we have to make sure our district is able to provide a flexible environment for the kids to learn in." He has called for "improved ways to evaluate the end product" of both traditional and alternative programs.

MARIE J. SESSI, of 195 Circle Road, is co-chairman of Girls State for the American Legion Auxiliary, vice president of the Blessed Sacrament Womens Guild, treasurer of the Las Gallinas Valley Master Plan Committee, a member of the Los Ranchitos Improvement Association and a room mother at Hartzell School.

Mrs. Sessi, 45, is part president of the Santa Venetia Parent-Teacher Association and has served in various capacities with the Red Cross, Gallinas Valley Little League and Childrens Home Society.

She is a graduate of Hadley Technical High School and has attended a number of night school courses. She has six children, enrolled in the College of Marin, Terra Linda High School, and Santa Venetia and Hartzell schools. She has lived in the district 20 years.

Mrs. Sessi has urged that students be tested at the beginning and end of each school year using national examinations. She has suggested that teachers "weed out" colleagues not doing their jobs and proposed that students grade teachers as a means of relevant feedback.

She has proposed that various administrative departments within the school system - such as custodial and grounds services - be merged to help cut costs.

Some alternative programs appear inadequate, according to Mrs. Sessi, because of loose scheduling and lack of discipline. She has urged that regular high school sites, and not off-campus locations, be used for alternative schools and has proposed that more vocational education aimed at "saleable skills" be established.

"What I endorse is education results. We are continually trying various innovations. I could only endorse these when it is shown to me that results have been equal or better than previous methods."

JEFF D. YARBROUGH, of 11 El Cerrito Avenue, helped found and is an active member of San Rafael High School's "new voter" program. He is an assistant manager of McDonald's restaurant in San Rafael.

Yarbrough, 18, has attended schools in Sacramento, is a graduate of Davidson School, and plans to attend college and law school after graduation from San Rafael High School.

He is a member of the school's marching band.

Yarbrough was forced to obtain a court order to place his name on the ballot since he had been ruled ineligible under the city charter to run for the board because he has lived in the city for only two years. The charter requires that candidates for elective office meet a three year residency requirement, though a proposal to amend the requirement to a one-year stipulation, as required by the courts, will appear on the April 17 ballot.

Yarbrough has stressed the need for student representation on the board during his campaign. "We need more young people in politics," he said, adding he can relate to fellow students and businessmen.

Yarbrough has proposed a program whereby high schools would become three-year facilities, including grades 10, 11 and 12. Such a program, according to Yarbrough, might help cut district costs, raise educational standards and allow teachers to relate to students on a high level.

He has suggested that the school system "cut back on most everything" in an across-the-board axing aimed at trimming fat from the budget.

Yarbrough has strongly supported the alternative school program, saying it "is crucial," and has declared that test grades don't necessarily reflect student abilities.

In Mill Valley, It Is Tradition Vs. Experimentation

Voters in the Mill Valley School District will be faced with clear choices when they go to the polls Tuesday to elect three trustees.

Three of the candidates — incumbents John G. Eliot and John H. Cutler and newcomer Cate Bauer — support present board policies regarding the amount of experimentation in the district versus the teaching of the three Rs.

Two of the remaining three hopefuls — Dr. Thomas D. Spencer and Eileen Bach-y-Rita — have contended the district fails to teach academic fundamentals and does not offer alternatives to parents who want their children to learn traditional skills. The sixth candidate, Harold A. Drob, falls somewhere in between.

Spencer and Mrs. Bach-y-Rita were two of about 1,300 persons who signed a petition in the fall of 1971 asking the board for a return to emphasis on traditional skills. Both spoke at a series of board meetings called to air the complaints.

TO BE FILLED in the election are seats held by Eliot and Cutler and a third board member, William P. Everts Jr., who decided not to run again. There are 15,675 registered voters in the district.

Facing the district in the years ahead is the consideration of merging the Mill Valley and Sausalito school districts. A small step toward that end was taken recently when the Mill Valley board voted to allow up to 40 students from Sausalito's Martin Luther King School to attend the Mill Valley Middle School next year.

Despite the future importance of the proposed merger, the most talked about issue in the race is the one involving experimentation versus tradition.

Candidates questioned by the Independent-Journal for the most part said it was important to offer a variety in education so that parents could place their children in the kinds of programs they wish. Mrs. Bach-y-Rita and Dr. Spencer, however, emphasized that point more strongly than did the other candidates.

The hopefuls, their backgrounds and some of their views are:

JOHN G. ELIOT, 41, was born in California and has lived 11 years in the Mill Valley district. He was graduated from Yale University with a Bachelor's Degree and received his law degree from Boalt Hall at the University of California.

Eliot, an attorney, lives at 21 Monte Vista Ave. with his wife, Merieo, and two children, one of whom attends Mill Valley public schools.

He was elected to his first term on the board four years ago and chosen chairman last July.

"I'm firmly committed to the idea that public schools exist to serve all children, not just particular types of children. Public education, along with parents, the community and peers, plays a role in the total learning process of the child. Hopefully, as a result of the total process, in which schools play an important part, our schools will turn out people who will become successful human beings."

More than anything else, Eliot said he would like to see "reconciliation between those who see schools simply as factories for instilling proficiency in certain academic skills and those who see the schools as playing a much larger role in the learning process."

Schools should do both, he said, "and I think our district does both well on the whole. I'm convinced that a lot of the apparent disagreement is more a matter of not fully understanding the other point of view rather than being any fundamental philosophical difference."

JOHN H. CUTLER, 38, is the other incumbent seeking reelection. He was elected to the board in 1969.

Cutler, of 186 Corte Madera Avenue, was born in New York and was graduated from Brown University in Providence, R.I., and from Harvard Law School. He also was a Fulbright Scholar at the University of Edinburgh.

He and his wife, Marge, have lived 10 years in the district and have four children, three of them attending district schools. He is a partner in a San Francisco law firm.

As a board member, he said, "I have worked hard to exercise fiscal diligence and objective judgment and to act as trustee for all the children in the district, rather than as a champion of special interest groups."

"There are many challenges which the next school board will face," he said. "The financial difficulties to the district inherent in the recently enacted SB 90 is certainly one of them. Others include the reconciliation of different factions in school community and our relations with neighboring school districts."

"In the past," he said, "our community has occasionally been preoccupied with educational jargon and abels, and arguments as to which of the various methods of instruction are preferable. I hope the entire school community has learned a lesson of tolerance from our past conflicts, and that different points of view (and teaching methods) will be tolerated by all."

It has been the district's policy "to encourage the individualization of instruction — focussing on the unique strengths, weaknesses and motivations of each child — while stressing the basic academics," said Cutler. "I believe this should continue to be our goal."

AROLD A. DROB, 50, was born in New York. He received a bachelor's degree in economics at the City College of New York and has done graduate work in business management and accounting there as well.

Drob is business manager of the Learning Resources Center at the University of California Medical Center in San Francisco. He and his wife, Pearl, an artist, live at 599 Marin Avenue, Tamalpais Valley, and have two daughters, both of whom attend schools in Mill Valley district. They have lived in the district 12 years.

The school board and school staff working with the community, can bring about "a significant improvement of learning in our Mill Valley Schools," Drob said.

"The board must provide the leadership that will bring us together in developing, carrying out and evaluating long-range educational programs employing all available resources to bring about more effective instruction."

"The overall system must allow for alternative approaches, with the relationship between teachers, parents and students of utmost importance. They must be working together toward common goals which can be identified and communicated if the child is to be most receptive to learning and the teacher able to alter the course of instruction to meet the individual child's needs."

If this is done, he said, "we can develop programs making the most effective use of available funds. We can make money work for quality, instead of being in a constant state of financial crisis and emergency.

Such planning and coordination "can only be effective in an atmosphere of trust based on open communication and information," he said. He suggested a weekly newspaper column and rotating school board meetings through district schools as ways to "begin improving communications and the exchange of information."

Drob said he has extra time to devote to school matters because he works a four-day week.

DR. THOMAS D. SPENCER, 36, is an associate professor of psychology at California State University, San Francisco, and director of the Child Study Center there.

Spencer holds a Bachelor's Degree from the University of Illinois and graduate degrees from Hollins College in Virginia and the Institute of Child Behavoir and Development, University of Iowa.

He and his wife, Gloria, have lived five years in the district and now reside at 429 Live Oak Drive, Tamalpais Valley. They have two daughters in district schools.

"With two daughters in the Mill Valley Schools, I have a strong personal as well as professional commitment to education," he said.

"In a diverse community such as Mill Valley, the school board must assure that all points of view are heard and given equal consideration. Overburdened taxpayers have the right and responsibility to insist that schools provide the best educational programs possible with available funds."

"Too much importance has been placed on the methods and techniques of teaching rather than on the ability, skill and enthusiasm of the teacher," he said. "The district must hire and retain teachers who will challenge children academically, expect excellence in the basic skills and assume the responsibility of teaching children respect for the rights and property of others as well as to be independent and socially responsive."

School board trustees, Spencer said, "must guide the district's programs in directions that will strengthen the trust and support of the entire community."

He said he is a candidate because "I feel the present board has focused too much emphasis on 'innovation' and in the process lost sight of those parents and teachers who place higher priorities on strong academic curricula, systematic evaluation of programs and personnel and establishment of behavioral standards aimed at teaching children respect for the rights and property of others. A more representative board could restore a balance in educational programs and gain the trust and support of the entire community."

EILEEN BACH-y-RITA, 31, is a housewife who lives at 208 Richardson Drive, Strawberry. She has lived in the school district 10 years, and has worked in the school system for seven years as a volunteer.

She and her husband, Paul, a San Francisco physician engaged in vision research, have two children, both of them attending Mill Valley Schools.

Mill Valley has the potential

It's The Traditional, Versus The Experimental

"of being a very healthy district," she said, "but there are a few weak spots to be recognized and improved."

She cited what she said was a "yearly increase of students entering Tamalpais High who are poorly prepared in reading." These students come from the Mill Valley district and others, she said.

Not only that, she said, but "children entering the middle school are poorly prepared in the technical aspects of writing, spelling and grammar as well as in math skills. When middle school teachers have to concentrate on teaching these skills that should have been learned in the previous five years, then something is wrong."

Mrs. Bach-y-Rita said she does not believe, "as is being more and more frequently implied, that there is 'something wrong' with these children." Instead, she suggested there may be "something wrong" with the administration of the teaching program.

"One of the big problems is that often the responsibility of teaching has been shifted from the teacher's shoulders to the child's," she said. "Many children neither are ready or willing or trained to take on such a responsibility. Furthermore, they need to be guided, motivated, inspired and challenged to do their best by competent, well-trained adults."

As a trustee, Mrs. Bach-y-Rita said she would "want us to use every possible means of evaluation (of the district program) that we could get our hands on. I think that we urgently need on the board a voice which will question and analyze the pros and cons of every educational plan in order to prevent problems in them and to assure that they will help the basic program, not deteriorate it."

CATE BAUER, 31, of 290 Cascade Drive, is a housewife who has lived more than 12 years in the district. She has been a volunteer worker in the district for seven years.

Mrs. Bauer and her husband, Karel T. Bauer, have three chidren attending district schools. She was born in New York.

The major problem in the Mill Valley schools, she said, is "how to accommodate the diversity of the community within the public school system. The answer: to provide alternatives within the educational philosophy of the district, alternatives that are real to the people who have different desires for the education of their children."

Another issue, she said, is that of "trust among parents, educators, the board and other citizens of the community who pay school taxes. As someone who is here in Mill Valey daily and who will be able to consult with all the different people, and as someone who keeps trying to keep her mind open, I feel I can make a viable contribution to the board."

Teachers, she said, "are really where it's at. We must work to identify effective teachers, attract them, keep them and encourage them to grow. As parents and educators we must get together and define what we all consider effective teachers and then make it a high-priority budget item to provide more in-service training for them."

Mrs. Bauer said she considers year-round schools "an exciting possibility" which should be studied and said community involvement in the schools is "a very helpful thing" and "the more the community and the schools work together toward common goals the better off our kids and all of us will be."

A Field Of Six In San Anselmo

Three Vacancies Will Be Filled By Voters Tuesday

JUDITH L. VALLAS
Housewife, mother

By MARY LEYDECKER

Voters in the San Anselmo School District will have a choice Tuesday of six candidates for three vacancies on the school board.

Only one of the incumbents, Millard R. Morgen, whose terms expire chose to run again. The other vacancies are the seats now held by Franklin C. Latcham and Mary H. Olive.

San Anselmo schools, like many others in the county, are learning to live with a continually declining enrollment along with stringent tax limitations.

One of the questions on which the six hopefuls are divided is whether or not the district's two junior high schools, Red Hill and Hidden Valley, should be combined.

Here are the candidates' backgrounds and some of their views:

CHARLES H. DAIBER, 62, is a salesman for Montgomery Ward in Corte Madera. He and his wife, LaVaur live at 70 Ridge Road. They have a grown daughter.

Daiber, a native of New York, attended Rutgers University and has a degree from the Insurance Institute of America.

He has done volunteer work for the March of Dimes and is a member of Marvelous Marin Lodge, Sons of Italy.

When he filed for election, Daiber told the Independent-Journal that he "got interested in local politics when I saw the election announcement in the newspaper."

Daiber has said that he is "basically in accord" with the virtues of teaching reading, writing and arithmetic as they are "important for later life."

He also has said that, while "not in favor of laxity of discipline in schools," he does believe "there should be latitude for social changes as they occur . . ."

Daiber told the Independent-Journal he favors "structured classrooms" over the "alternative school concept" and that he thinks pupils should be promoted only when they deserve to be unless there are "unusual circumstances."

As for merging Red Hill and Hidden Valley schools, Daiber thinks no move should be made until further study of the matter is made and expert advice obtained.

OLIVER L. HARLE, 52, is a senior research chemist for Chevron Research Co. in Richmond. He and his wife, Nancy, and their two children live at 21 Echo Court.

Although this is Harle's first try for elective office, he made a bid for appointment to the San Anselmo Planning Commission last year.

He was a member of the San Anselmo schools study committee on regular programs last year has served on the city's citizens committee on zoning and housing and another one on the general plan.

He holds a Bachelor's Degree from the University of Texas, his home state, and a doctorate from the University of California.

Harle foresees a challenge to the district in maintaining current programs under tight financial restrictions. He doesn't see a tax rate cut unless there is considerable enrollment drop.

Harle believes such approaches as alternative classes and "on-location" programs should be encouraged if they meet specific needs but not without adequate evaluation and not at the cost of other programs.

Harle has adivsed against the board making decisions during crisis situations and has suggested a planning group of parents, teachers and students to make suggestions to the board on directions the district should take.

ROBERTA S. MICHELS, 33, is a dental hygienist and housewife. She lives with her husband, Spencer, a television news reporter, and their three sons, one a pre-schooler and the others pupils at San Anselmo schools.

Mrs. Michels has been a volunteer in the classroom and has used her dental hygiene training in several classroom presentations.

She is secretary of the San Anselmo Human Rights Mini-Board and initiated and participated in a dental health program for children enrolled in Head Start.

She also served a year as San Anselmo's representative on the Marin County Economic Opportunity Council board, consistently advocating for fiscal responsibility for the now defunct agency.

Mrs. Michels has advocated using skills and talents of members of the community in the classroom and better communication between parents, teachers, administrators and board members.

Mrs. Michels also has suggested that board members spend more time in the schools and in the community and that parents should be encouraged to attend board meetings, possibly by sending memos home with their children.

MILLARD R. MORGEN, 49, is a professor of history at College of Marin. He and his wife, Patricia, have four children, three of whom are still at home and the other is in college.

The family home is at 39 Hawthorne Ave.

Morgen holds a Bachelor's Degree from San Francisco State College and a master's from the University of California, Berkeley.

Morgen was appointed to fill a vacancy on the board last fall and is standing election now for the first time.

Morgen has said that schools should be concerned with mental health as well as scholastic achievement and placed mental health as a first priority, saying without it there can be no achievement.

Morgen also has advocated seeking out and utilizing talents of the staff as well as pinpointing weaknesses in the system and staff, when they exist, in order to correct them.

The candidate acknowledged that "taxes are too high," but blamed the situation of an "inequitable distribution of state monies" and said that "San Anselmo can't reduce taxes unless it reduces services and these are all reasonable."

GARTH M. STANTON, 39, is also a senior research chemist for Chevron Research Co. in Richmond. He and his wife, Marion and their five children live at 100 Meadowcroft Drive.

Stanton is chairman of the San Anselmo citizens advisory committee on streets and traffic and was one of the coordinating chairmen of Brookside School Association last year. He also served on one of six advisory committees to the school board last year.

He holds bachelor's and master's degrees from the University of Detroit and a doctorate from Purdue University.

Stanton called communication in the district "better than in some districts but not good enough." He suggested a monthly district newsletter containing notice and discussion of new policies and programs as well as workshops on topics of interest.

Stanton said that he is not so concerned with whether so-called alternative programs or more traditional classroom are used, as long as the results are good. "The teacher is everything" in the learning situation, he said.

He also said he thought that the line should be held on expenditures in the district since enrollment is decreasing and taxes already at a high level.

JUDITH L. VALLAS, 33, is a housewife and mother of two young sons. Her husband, James, is a state bridge engineer. The family home is at 260 Brookside Drive.

Mrs. Vallas is a graduate of the University of Hawaii and was a department executive with the Emporium for five years.

She is chairman of the Brookside School Association, serves on the Stull Bill Coordinating Committee and has been a member of the citizen advisory committee on special education. She also has been a volunteer aide in the school educationally handicapped program.

Mrs. Vallas believes that the school board should establish goals and a plan of direction in order that priorities for curriculum and facilities may be established in light of declining enrollment and loss of financial support.

She also advocates planning how programs such as remedial reading, classes for the educationally handicapped and mentally gifted can be maintained when state funds are reduced or eliminated.

Polling places in Marin County for Tuesday's school trustee and coinciding special district elections will be open from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m.

Four Of The Five Bolinas-Stinson Trusteeships Up For Grabs

By PAT ANGLE

Four of five seats on the Bolinas-Stinson School District board will be up for grabs Tuesday when district voters go to the polls to choose new trustees from a field of 10 candidates.

Two incumbents — Jessie Reasoner and John W. Harris — have announced they will not run for reelection and one trustee, John G. Barrow, has resigned. Incumbent Michael E. Aitken is seeking a second term.

The only board position not up for election is that of President Charles E. Hancock.

Seven persons are competing for the seats now held by Aitken, Reasoner and Harris. The candidates are: Aitken, Carol A. Flynn, Paul Mann, O'Brien Young, Carolyn Brown, Michael D. Sanford and Diana L. Farnsworth. All are trying for a full-term on the board.

Seeking to replace Barrow and complete the remainder of his term which expires in June 30, 1975, are: Susan F. Washington, Peter B. Weston and Russell Riviere.

The only concrete issue which has surfaced in the campaign is the 50-cent tax rate increase which the district will ask voters to approve next week.

Most of the board hopefuls interviewed indicated they oppose the tax measure at this time —for various reasons. Only one — Aitken —supported the proposal.

Proponents argue that the district's revenues, already cut by more than $10,000 through land lost to the Point Reyes National Seashore, will decline even further when the impact of the Golden Gate National Recreation Area is fully assessed.

They fear that SB 90, the new state tax shift measure, will freeze district revenues at their current, depleted level, and that existing programs will have to be cut as expenses increase and income remains the same.

Opponents, for the most part, contend that the tax proposal is being presented too soon, before the district actually knows just what the effect the land losses and the tax shift will have.

The candidates and their views are as follows:

CAROL A. FLYNN, 31, is a Stinson Beach pediatrician who has lived in the district four years.

A graduate of Marywood College in Pennsylvania with a bachelor's degree in biology, she received her M.D. degree from Temple University in Philadelphia. She interned at Harkness Community Hospital in San Francisco and completed her residency at Mount Zion Hospital.

She and her husband, George, also a physician, live at 291 Buena Vista Street. The couple has one child, a three-week-old girl.

Dr. Flynn said she decided to seek election to the board "because my child is going to go to that school and I'm interested in how it is being run."

If elected, she would work "to provide the best possible fundamental education for the children." She thinks more school time should be devoted to subjects such as reading, math and language arts.

"There are some people who have suggested replacing some of the teachers (at Bolinas School) with teacher's aides because it costs less," Dr. Flynn said. "I'm opposed to this."

She favors the tax increase "because I think the district needs the money."

O'BRIEN YOUNG, 35, is a musician and photographer who has lived in the district since August of 1972, moving here from Santa Barbara.

She is a graduate of Radcliffe College, with a bachelor's degree in English.

She and her husband, Landon, director of the Community Music Center in San Francisco, reside at 275 Dogwood Road. The couple has two children, both of whom attend Bolinas School.

If elected, Mrs. Young would use her interest and experience in fine and creative arts to bring more cultural events — particularly music and the performing arts — to the school.

The candidate believes the district could make better use of "the fantastic variety of skills and talents" of people in the community, by encouraging them to share their abilities with the children. "That way we could add to the variety of our educational program without increasing the expense," she said.

Mrs. Young admits to "mixed feelings" about the tax measure and does not think its passage "terribly crucial" to the district. "We have one of the highest expenditures per student in Marin County and we should be able to use that money more effectively," she said, but added: "On the other hand, the district hasn't asked for a tax increase in 10 years."

She said she decided to run "because this is a school I find exciting and I would like to be a part of it."

MICHAEL E. AITKEN, 27, is a deputy sheriff and a 17-year resident of Bolinas, where he lives with his wife and four children.

Aitken, a student in police science at the College of Marin, is seeking his first full term on the board. He was first elected in February of 1971 to fill a vacancy created by the resignation of Trustee Erik Lund.

If his bid for another term is successful, Aitken said, he will try to insure that Bolinas School remains a "facility for learning, not just one big babysitting operation.

"I don't want to see the school fall back to where it was two years ago, with all the conflicts" between supporters of traditional education and those who prefer a more free-learning atmosphere, he said.

The candidate said he doesn't "go in for campaign promises, because most of them don't pan out.

"I'll just do the best I can," he added.

CAROL A. FLYNN
A pediatrician

Polling places in Marin County for Tuesday's school trustee and coinciding special district elections will be open from 7 a.m. until 8 p.m.

MICHAEL D. SANFORD, who has lived in Stinson Beach since last September, is an attorney for the Constitutional Revisional Commission in San Francisco.

The 37-year-old candidate holds a law degree from the University of California at Berkeley and a bachelor's degree in liberal arts from St. John's College in Maryland. In addition, he had done graduate work in sociology at UC.

Sanford is married and the father of two children who attend school in the district.

He is chairman of Stinson Beach Projects, a community action organization.

Sanford does not favor the tax increase, saying the district does not yet know enough about the effects of SB 90 to make a decision as to whether more money is needed.

In addition, he said, the tax shift was designed to provide tax relief for homeowners and "I think it is a mistake for local government to use it as an opportunity to increase taxes." He believes the increase would hurt people on fixed incomes in the community.

As a lawyer, Sanford thinks he could help the board "keep its feet on the ground in relation to various state and federal programs and requirements."

He is not committed to "any particular educational philosophy." Rather, he would like to see the school offer "a broad range of alternative educational approaches, from informal, open classroom programs to traditional, high achievement teaching techniques."

DIANA L. FARNSWORTH is a pre-law student at University of California, Berkeley, who has worked as a teacher's aide at Bolinas School and has been active in school activities, including fundraising and a parent survey.

She is a Montessori-trained teacher who has lived in the district since 1966 and resides at 176 Rosewood Road with her husband, Philo —an inventor and designer —and four children, one of whom attends Bolinas School.

If elected, she said, she would work to increase parent involvement in the school. "I feel many parents are alienated from the school; they don't know quite what's going on even though they need to," she said.

She would encourage parents to come to the school and talk with the teachers and staff. "I think they will come if they know the school people are receptive to their ideas and concerned with their problems."

Because of the small size of the district, Mrs. Farnsworth believes it should be possible to give "each child what he or she needs" in the way of individual attention and instruction.

She thinks that gifted children at the school, as well as those with handicaps, are not given sufficient attention and will seek to remedy that.

Mrs. Farnsworth would also work to bring "the many talented people in the community" into the school and its programs. " This town is so rich; we have so many talented people who aren't being utilized and they could be."

She would also like to see some type of educational master plan developed for the district and opposes the proposed tax increase.

"I think we should do more with our present income than we have done in the past," she said. "I am certain there are ways we can save money."

Mrs. Farnsworth said she could bring to the board a love and concern for all children. "When we see the tremendous possibilities in our own children, we have to translate them to all children and I try to do that," she said.

PAUL MANN, 31, is a plumbing contractor and a partner in the Bolinas firm of M and M Plumbing.

Beofre moving to Bolinas, he studied engineering at Pennsylvania State University and was in the Merchant Marine.

He and his wife and three children live at 130 Evergreen Road. The couple's oldest daughter is a student at Bolinas school. His wife is expecting a fourth child.

"I'm going to have four of them going to that school, so I'd like to keep an eye on what's going on," he said to explain his reason for seeking election.

"It's a good school, headed in the right direction and I think all the people there are good people."

Mann said he is "not on any one side" with regard to educational philosophy and would keep an open mind in any conflicts which might arise between those who favor traditional education and those who prefer more progressive methods.

"I will look at each issue as it comes along, try to see all sides and make my decision in an unbiased fashion," he said.

Mann is opposed to a tax increase at this time, believing that district homeowners should not be burdened with more property taxes and that it is too soon to tell if the district will need the additional funds.

"I think more study is needed," he said. "If, at the end of the fiscal year we're in debt and it looks like the situation might be worse next year, then I might go for it, if that's the only way the money can be raised.

He too would like to see more community involvement in the school, more persons devoting their "time, energy and skills" to the district's educational efforts.

Water Board Race Poses Key Question

Should Supply Be Limited To Control Development?

Residents of the Marin Municipal Water District's Division Four will have the chance to decide if they want the district to restrict population growth by limiting water supply when they go to the polls Tuesday to choose a representative to the MMWD board.

There are 17,019 registered voters in Division Four.

Three candidates, with diverse views on that controversial question, are seeking to replace Director Eugene A. Miller — who resigned last November — as representative for the division which includes Mill Valley, and parts of Tamalpais Valley, Corte Madera and Kentfield.

Dr. L. Martin Griffin, physician and conservationist, believes that limiting supply may be the only way to curb population, since he thinks the proposed county-wide plan may not be effective in stopping overdevelopment.

Two other contenders for the board post, Jerome C. Hauke, a civil engineer and former Mill Valley city councilman, and Ross S. Shade, a certified public accountant, contend that planning and responsibility for limiting development should be left to the county's planning agencies.

THE QUESTION of a moratorium on new connections — particularly for large developments — has also been one of the major campaign issues.

The district board has considered a connection ban on at least three occasions — always before large audiences —, but the proposal has failed to pass.

There has been considerable controversy on that subject among district residents, with one group believing that the district is facing a water shortage and should curtail new connections and another which contends there is enough water to grant all new services until additional supply is found.

Since Miller's resignation, the four-man MMWD board has often split 2-2 on the granting of pipeline extensions for new services. Two directors, Jack R. Felson and Ronald T. Stafford, have voted against most applications for extensions, while Directors Jordan L. Martinell Jr. and John M. MacPhail Jr. have favored them.

Also at issue is the fate of the North Marin intertie which would bring between 1,000 and 4,000 acre feet of Russian River water into the district each year.

In 1972, the board approved the intertie, then stalled it indefinitely after Miller resigned by deadlocking 2-2 on a contract to obtain the water.

The campaigners have also addressed themselves to waste water recycling, another "hot topic" in the district.

Some believe that the MMWD should immediately begin planning to recycle water for domestic use. Others believe it to be a good idea whose time has not yet come.

A biography of each contestant, together with a summary of his views:

DR. L. MARTIN GRIFFIN, a Kentfield internist, is a native of Utah and has lived in Marin County since 1949.

The 53-year-old candidate is a co-founder of the Audubon Canyon Ranch, past president of the Audubon Society, a co-founder of the Marin Environmental Forum, a founding director of the Louise Boyd Museum and a member of the Marin Conservation League and the Sierra Club.

He holds a Bachelor's Degree in zoology from the University of California at Berkeley and obtained his M.D. Degree and did post-graduate work at Stanford Medical School.

Griffin, former chief of medicine at Marin General and Ross Hospitals and co-founder of the Ross Valley Clinic, left his medical practice in 1971 to return to U.C. where he obtained a Master's Degree in public health, specializing in environmental health sciences.

He now devotes his time to working for a better environment in many different ways, including serving as a member of the environmental quality committee of the city-county planning council and lobbying for passage of Sen. Peter Behr's Wild Rivers Bill while a delegate to the Eel River Water Council.

Griffin is currently chairman of the Tomales Bay land acquisition for the Audubon Ranch and has been instrumental in establishing seven new wildlife sanctuaries in the area.

He has also served as chairman for the Tomales Bay Environmental study for the Conservation Foundation in Washington, D.C., an organization formed to protect the bay.

In addition, Griffin helped to establish the 600-acre Richardson Bay Sanctuary in 1969 by obtaining a gift of land on the preserve's eastern border.

He was one of those who spearheaded the drive to save Kent Island in Bolinas Lagoon, and worked for establishment of a county park around the lagoon. He has been involved in fighting three attempts to bring freeways from East to West Marin.

He and his wife, Mary, a physician with the Marin County Health Department, live at 313 Goodhill Road. The couple has four grown daughters.

Griffin believes the county should live within the limits of its own water resources and is opposed to importing water from outside to Marin. He thinks the district should work toward obtaining water of the highest quality locally and providing better service for its customers.

He said he will use his public health training "to encourage reclamation, reuse and eventual recycling" of MMWD water if he is elected to the district board.

The candidate is convinced that the water district is facing a serious water shortage and will continue to do so until new supplies are found.

As a MMWD director, Griffin said he would vote against any new connections for large developments and grant water only to small projects — like single-family homes — until a new supply is developed.

The district should use the legal means it now has at its disposal to help implement the goals of the county-wide plan, particularly the growth control objectives, according to Griffin.

One of the tools he mentioned is a new amendment to the government code which makes it positive for the MMWD to take a planning role for all water-related resources, such as marshes, estuaries and watersheds. The new regulation could permit the district to have an official voice in dealing with development proposed for these areas, he said.

Griffin said there are currently efforts to undermine the county-wide plan, both by some cities and development interests. Consequently, he thinks that refusing to expand water supply past a certain point may be "the only way left to halt overdevelopment and unreasonable growth in Marin" and insure that the plan's population goals are met.

Griffin does not favor the North Marin intertie as a means of bringing water to serve current users and provide for a small amount of additional development. He thinks the money for the intertie should be used to develop a firm supply from sources in the county.

JEROME C. HAUKE, former Mill Valley city councilman, is a 15-year resident of Marin and the district.

He is a planning engineer for the State Department of Public Works and holds a Bachelor's Degree in civil engineering from the University of Wisconsin.

The 37-year-old candidate is a member of the Marin County Disaster Council, the Marin Conservation League and the Sierra Club, and also serves as an alternate to the advisory committee for Improvement District A (District A was formed by the MMWD board to plan for a consolidated waste disposal system for Southern Marin.)

He and his wife, Mary Ellen, and their six children reside at 53 Millay Place in Mill Valley.

Hauke served on the city council from 1968 to 1972 and was on the Mill Valley Parks and Recreation Commission from 1963 to 1968. He is a former member of the Flood Control Advisory Board, Zone 3.

VOTE APRIL 17

An Important Water District Election

Candidates Take Differing Stands On Development

In 1968, he was named "Man of the Year" by the Mill Valley Jaycees.

He sees his engineering background as a strong point in his campaign for the seat. "There are no engineers on the board now," he explained. "It would be valuable to have a member who could translate engineering items that come up, to provide a practical approach to matters.

His platform is basically one of concilation. "What is needed is someone who can work with both sides," he said. "I'm not tied to any narrow ideology and would like to tie the board together. It's really split now."

If elected, Hauke would attempt to restore public confidence in the MMWD board by "supplying the voting public with complete and honest data so that may make informed decisions on. . .proposed solutions to our water problems."

He would also work to investigate methods of developing additional water supply, and to provide better water pressure in all areas of the district and improved fire mains. He would also like to explore the feasibility of waste water reclamation of district water.

Hauke does not believe it is the water district's function to control population by limiting water supply. "It is the duty of the water district board to coordinate and cooperate with planning agencies, not compete with them," he said.

He does not think there is immediate danger of a districtwide water shortage and would not vote for a moratorium on new connections until the fate of the bond issue for new supply is decided by voters, probably in November.

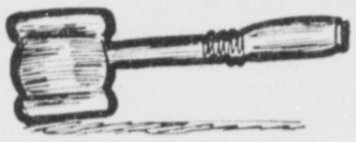
Hauke would consider importing water from the Russian River if no Marin sources can be found. "Just because water crosses a county line it doesn't become tainted," he said.

ROSS S. SHADE, a certified public accountant, lives in Mill Valley and has been a resident of the county since 1954.

He holds a Bachlor's and Master's Degree in business administration from the University of California at Berkeley and a law degree from the University of San Francisco.

The 45-year-old candidate is a partner in the San Francisco accounting firm of Shade Faisst and Co. and was formerly a partner in a large national CPA firm.

He is a member of the Commonwealth Club, San Francisco Urban Renewal Planning Associates (SPUR), the California Society of Certified Public Accountants, the Americans Institute of CPA's and the Sierra Club. In addition, he is an associate member of the Municipal Finance Officers Association.



Shade, his wife and two daughters reside at 219 Oakdale Avenue.

He believes that the MMWD should leave growth control to the county's planning agencies, but thinks that district voters themselves will impose some restraints on unlimited water supply which might stimulate unlimited growth by voting down bond issues.

"I don't think the voters want unlimited development and we (THE MMWD board) are going to have to give them what they want," he said.

Shade is convinced that recycling of waste water for irrigation and domestic use will not be feasible "for many years." Consequently, he does not think the district's planning for consolidated sewer facilities should include recycling at this time.

The candidate indicated he would oppose a ban on new connections — at least at this time. He said he might consider it if district voters turn down the next bond issue to finance supply. But, even then, he would explrore other alternatives for obtaining water before voting for a moratorium.

The district's top priority goal should be to find a feasible solution to its water supply problems, he said.

Shade would have no qualms about importing water from outside Marin, but would prefer to seek sources inside the county first, "because it may cost less to get water locally."

He is opposed to the North Marin intertie because that pipeline would not meet all of the district's future water needs or solve long-term water supply deficiencies.

If elected, Shade said he could contribute a firm knowledge of business management to the MMWD board's operations. "I would be able to determine if the district is complying with good business standards and state regulation," he said.

Seeing Bali By Bicycle

The Travel Pages

By RALPH HUBLEY

SANUR, Bali, Indonesia — Cycling through the lush Balinesian countryside and small villages is worth every ounce of pedal power exerted. It brings the rider close to a pleasant way of life still found in Bali.

The crowing of roosters and melodious tones of tropical birds; laughter coming from just over the wall of a compound; crickets chirping their endless chorus; the excited "Hello-Hi" of countless children playing along the roadside; the friendly wave of a farmer as he looks up briefly from plodding behind a water buffalo — there are the rewards of the cyclist in Bali.

They are much more pleasing than the chatter of the marketplace where most tourists gather.

IN THE WARM sunshine of the island it may be difficult to pull away from the comforts of beach and pool offered by an increasing number of hotels here in the Sanur resort area and the only other major resort area at Kuta nearer the airport. But there are not the places to find Bali at its best.

Those who do take off seem satisfied with touring the countryside by taxi or microbus, stopping to visit temples, to watch a shadow show or a trance dance, or to bargain with sellers of batik, silver and woodcarvings..

The many Japanese visiting Bali these days usually rent motorcycles (made in Japan) and roar down the roads. To enjoy the sights and sounds of Bali, one must go a slower pace.

IF A BICYCLE sounds too strenuous the visitor might like to try the "dokar" — Balinese for horse and buggy. These can be rented in Denpasar.

But for me, I wanted to try the Bali bikeway. Although Jogjakarta retains good claim to its title of "Bicycle Capital of Southeast Asia," Bali comes a close second.

Renting an easy-to-pedal, German-made Gazelle from the Bali Beach Hotel at which I was staying, I strapped on my flight bag, plopped on my old tennis hat, and joined the solid stream of Bali cyclists which seems reluctant to give more than half the road even to constantly honking trucks and tour buses.

BEFORE I KNEW it I was riding in formation, in ever-changing patterns, sometimes four abreast, moving at a slow but steady speed.

Sometimes I would be riding next to a student with a book bag over his shoulder. Then it would be a man in a coolie hat with large baskets crammed with sticks balanced on each side of his bike. Or it might be an elegantly dressed Balinese woman with her head held high as if on a royal steed. The stream of two-wheelers would part briefly for an oncoming pedestrian brave enough to buck this constant current.

I can definitely state that this area of Bali is not the place for walkers.

BUT FOR CYCLISTS it's a different story, especially when swinging away from the town areas. The southern part of the island is quite flat, so 10- and 15-speed bicycles are unnecessary. And even on the hottest day, the breeze created by the bike's motion makes the cycler wish to go on and on.

Which I did. After about two hours I found myself 20 miles away from my hotel, and darkness was suddenly upon me. It was then I discovered my lights were not working.

But before I describe my nocturnal return I would like to describe some of the endearing incidents that occurred that afternoon along these country roads.

IT DOESN'T TAKE long for the mass of cyclists to thin out once you head toward rural areas. But that doesn't mean you will be alone on the road, slightly elevated above the paddies where some of the finest varieties of rice in Southeast Asia are grown. I kept finding teen-age riders appearing beside me. They would ride along for about a mile and then wave goodbye. After a few minutes another would appear.

It seems they jumped on their bicycles when they saw me go by.

My tentative companions had one thing in common — they wanted to carry on a conversation in English. Each began by stating he didn't speak English very well and then proceeded with these stock phrases:

"From where are you?"

"How many children have you?"

"How many sons?"

"Do you enjoy yourself in Bali?"

"What do you like most about Bali?"

WHEN I WOULD ask them the same questions they seemed surprised. "How many children have you" brought head-shaking laughter. One 19-year-old explained that he didn't plan to marry for another 10 years.

At an intersection near the port of Benoa my progress was halted by a herd of cattle which filled the road "from wall to wall." There were about 200 steers with about 100 men and boys leading them with ropes. One Balinesian "cowboy" spotted me taking pictures and explained that they were headed for Hong Kong on a cattle boat waiting in the harbor.

Intersections usually have an island in the center with a statue assigned to "ward off the evil spirits of accidents." As I sat there making notes, two youngsters were leaning over my shoulders watching. Then as I changed film in the camera they became even more interested, so I asked the young boy and girl to pose for a picture. I would line them up, step back a little, look through the view finder, and find them about a yard apart again. It was like trying to put the opposite poles of magnets together.

THE LITTLE GIRL was almost in tears, but this quickly turned to joy when I didn't insist on togetherness and offered them a couple of ballpoint pens with pantomimed instructions on how to use them. I also left them some paper, and they imitated my note taking.

I didn't realize I stuck out my lower lip when taking notes.

As I began to head back toward the hotel darkness closed in. My concern over the unworkable light on the bike was somehwat relieved by seeing other cyclists in the same condition.

About this time a student with his younger brother sitting behind him started up a side-by-side conversation. He said he was studying to be a teacher, and that they were orphans being raised by their uncle who was working the half acre of land left to them by their parents. The boys insisted on guiding me to Denpasar, so I suggested we stop at a stand along the road and I would buy some refreshments.

THE DIMLY-LIGHTED counter was crowded with cans and bottles, stacks of native fruits and wrapped snack packs. We chose a Balinese version of popcorn to go with our orange drinks and found just about room enough for us to fit on the inside bench. The shopkeeper joined us at one side of the counter, waving a fan in our direction.

Thus, refreshed, we headed toward the city lights. After giving careful instructions on how to reach the hotel, the two boys, Djudiana and Sukadana, waved good-bye when we reached the main intersection.

By remembering one word — "dimana" — I had no trouble getting around Bali. It means "Where is?" Thus by adding the name of the town or hotel you are seeking you will get ready help from the Balinese.

If you wish to thank them, they are delighted to hear you say, "Terima kasih."

THE RICE TERRACES are very much a part of the scenery one sees touring the peaceful Indonesian island of Bali. And that countryside is best seen, writes Christian Science Monitor's Ralph Hubley, from the seat of a bicycle.

The Real Mexico Seen At Leisurely Pace

A five-hour train ride for 44 cents?

Such an economical excursion is possible between Mexico City and Cuernavaca. And it's a fun trek, reminiscent of the days when train rides were sometimes regarded as rather risky undertakings.

First, there are the soldiers aboard.

But no need to worry, reports American Airlines travel experts. The soldiers are simply historical holdovers from the 1910-20 revolutionary era. Back then, they were the prime targets of Emiliano Zapata's rebel bands staked out in the mountains around Cuernavaca.

ZAPATA'S MEN eventually took over the Cuernavaca train and staffed it with sandaled gentlemen in big, floppy sombreros who had bandoliers of bullets draped across their shoulders.

When the revolution was won, folks put away their weapons and settled down. From then on, the Cuernavaca train was as peaceful as a Disneyland monorail. But even with the territory tamed, the train looks like rolling stock from a six-pistol thriller — set amid dazzling technicolor terrain.

Picture the scene:

The train winds up impossibly beautiful mountains across a 10,000-foot high pass, with full brakes on the downgrade to Cuernavaca. It creaks and curves through bald-faced gaps, on past odd little cones of dead volcanoes and rocky shoulders bulging out of pines and tall grass. Seemingly at any minute, a stalwart lawman should mosey through the train cars to survey the riders on the slat benches.

MORE LOCAL color comes with the people along the route. Whenever the train stops, Indian vendors appear with baskets of food and drink. They walk along hawking their wares as travelers hand out of the windows to buy their lunch. Everybody eats each time food appears. So, most passengers bring more appetite than baggage.

Prices are low, and the food is appetizing and filling.

But food is not always the only reason for a rest stop.

The engineer has been known to stop and chat with relatives who live along the way. Passengers can get off during such a pause to stretch their legs, or even pick wild flowers in the fields. No one is in any great hurry to get where they are going.

The pace is leisurely, but it is never boring. And certainly the experience is something very different from anything United States citizens can find in their own land of rush and hurry.

There's no better way to see the real Mexico — close-up.

THE STRUGGLE FOR THE CITY ON THE VOLGA

THE ENEMY AT THE GATES: The Battle For Stalingrad by William Craig; Reader's Digest Press-Dutton, 404 pages, $10.95. Reviewed by John D. Yates.

In 1944 Charles de Gaulle visited the battlefield of Stalingrad, and wandered through the acres and acres of devastation: ". . .un peuple formidable, un tres grand peuple. . ." muttered the General. A correspondent agreed, "Ah, oui, Les Russes." De Gaulle shook his head: "No, No! I speak of the Germans — that they should have come so far. . ."

We could always rely upon Le Grand Charles to speak his mind.

In reaching the Volga River and the eastern limits of European Russia, the German war machine had far out-paced the French Emperor Bonaparte of another age, and had worked miracles of strategy and logistics; and the German soldier had performed with his usual courage and tenacity. But in the final drive to Stalingrad on the west bank of the Volga, there were dark omens of a disaster in store for the Germans: over-extended supply lines, an overconfidence that denied all thoughts of decline and defeat, and the choice of a battleground between two great natural barriers — The Don and the Volga — behind which preparations for defense and counter attack by the Russians could be staged.

However, the factor that contributed most to the terrible German denouement was the takeover of strategic (and even tactical) direction of the campaign by a lunatic ex-corporal of the German Army, Adolf Hitler; and by subsequent false assurances of airlift support by a gross, drug-ridden incompetent, Reichmarshal Herman Goering.

That the aristocratic and dedicated professional, Gen. (and before the end of the battle, Field Marshal) Frederich Von Paulus, could have sacrificed his 6th Army to the whim of the Fuehrer, is incomprehensible. But in the total picture of the Hitler war, I suppose the destruction of an army was nothing compared with the German leader's plans to destroy the entire nation in one final Gotterdammerung, to which military men far senior to Von Paulus gave their tacit approval.

The battle for Stalingrad will remain for all time the most horrendous of struggles in destructiopn of life, limb and property, between competing land armies in what we are pleased to call today "conventional warfare." The statistics are staggering:

The Germans lost 400,000 men, the Italians 130,000 out of their 200,000 man army, the Hungarians 120,000, and the Rumanians 200,000 men. The satellites therefore lost more than the Germans, as did the subjugated nations in 1812 whose soldiers made up more than 50 per cent of Napoleon's army.

But the Russians lost in killed, wounded and missing, 750,000 men; and after five months of fighting and bombing, 99 per cent of the city had been reduced to rubble, more than 41,000 homes had been destroyed. The population of the city in September, 1942, was about 500,000, and by February, 1943, only 1,500 remained. Probably 50 per cent had been killed and the rest had fled to Siberia and other parts of Asia.

Author William Craig has produced an absorbing human record of the struggle, based upon hundreds of interviews over a long period of time with survivors on both sides. Within the framework of the historical calendar of events, the movements of armies and the plans of grand strategy, the book is composed of on-location stories from the memories of participants, and of fascinating vignettes.

We learn of the presence of two famous sharpshooters in the street-fighting — Major Konings of the Germany Army and the Russian Vassili Zaitsev and his girl friend assistant, who carried out a personal duel; of Dr. Kohler, who despite a broken and wired-together jaw, worked 20 hours a day attending friend and foe alike in fire and flame; the famous Soviet violinist who entertained Russian troops at Christmas time, and responded to German shouts from across the streets requesting Bach; of the Russian Girl prostitutes who administered to both sides in a cellar in the rubble. When the Germans were surrounded by the Russian counter-offensive which they had so long ignored, and the Goering airlift was bringing in only 100 tons a day rather than 750 tons, we see the beginning of the total disintegration of the German war machine. Cannibalism becomes common, as soldiers turn into animals.

The author tells us that the physical evidence of this cruel struggle is now very sparse — there are a number of flamboyant monuments and plaques, all overshadowed by a giant statue of Mother Russia at the top of Mamaev Hill.

All the rubble was removed over 25 years ago and the city is rebuilt; and I suspect that even in Stalingrad the battle for the city is largely forgotten because a mere handful of its inhabitants in those days survive.

In all such struggles it is the common people and soldiers who suffer most, but who are remembered or acknowledged least. Craig's fascinating book, however, records the story from the grassroots level and is probably one of the most profound anti-war documents ever written.

Salisbury Of The Times On The New China

TO PEKING — AND BEYOND: A Report on the New Asia by Harrison E. Salisbury; Quadrangle; The New York Times; 308 pages, $7.95. Reviewed by Larry Kramer.

These days a visa to visit China is a passport to a publishable book. "To Peking — And Beyond," written by the experienced Moscow correspondent of the New York Times, combines some of the best and worst attributes of the current reports on the Central Kingdom.

It is only fair to Salisbury to start with the positive contributions that he makes.

As a sophisticated, long-time observer of the Russian scene, he is able to contribute valuable insights into the changing relationship between China and the Soviet Union. Even while U.S. foreign policy was laboring under the assumption that the two most powerful Communist powers had been fused into a monolith bound together with Marxist abstractions, Salisbury was able to anticipate more tangible forces that would pull them apart.

Russian Far Eastern policy, under czars and commissars, has concentrated on the needs and objectives of Moscow. Long before the 1918 Revolution, Russia and China had quarreled over their joint boundary in Central Asia. Right up until the Nationalists under Chiang Kai-shek were driven off the mainland, the Russians withheld any significant support for Mao Tse-tung, and concentrated their efforts on stabilizing a Chinese government which they knew to be badly divided and ineffectual.

Russia simply did not want a strong unified China as a neighbor, regardless of its political persuasion.

With the Chinese Communists in power, international pressures forced China and Russia to try to build a relationship. Even at the height of this honeymoon, Russian aid to China was no Marshall Plan. There were only loans of limited magnitude, and each loan carried a price tag in obligations. Russia was not China's brother, she was her usurer.

Salisbury's account of the Sino-Soviet partnership and its deterioration, and his comparison of Russian post-revolutionary society with China's, are built on his experience as a critical observer of Soviet society and politics and repays careful reading.

China's population — its vast magnitude, its military potential, its capacity for manual labor, and its potential need for room in which to expand so that it can feed itself — is of great interest to the United States as well as to China's neighbors. Chinese population statistics are unreliable, but Salisbury cites data that convinces him that the numbers of Chinese are still growing at a rate greater than those of other world powers. Despite the almost complete lack of overt sexuality among young people, and the emphasis on late marriage, the birth rate, particularly in rural areas, is very high. Why? Because it still takes the total effort of 80 per cent of the population to provide enough food for everyone.

Salisbury judges that China's population will continue to grow rapidly until further mechanization of agricultural production reduces the need for farm labor. At that point he anticipates a major internal transition — a flood of hundreds of millions of peasants from the rural areas into the cities. China's leaders will have to cope with an urban population "bomb" that will dwarf anything the West has known. How China deals with population growth and movement will radically affect her internal stability as well as her relations with her neighbors.

Another valuable aspect of "To Peking —And Beyond" is the two-chapter section on North Korea and its dictator, Kim Il-Sung. Very little is available to the American public about the Hermit Kingdom. Salisbury gives a clear, concise description of North Korea's intense police state, its national drive for security against being any state's vassal, and the unbelievable "personality cult" that has left every leader nameless except Kim Il-Sung.

Salisbury contributes very little to our understanding of the Cultural Revolution, Mao's unleashing of the young people against the New Red bureaucracy in 1966 that has clouded the Chinese scene for even the most clear-eyed China-watchers. Edward Rice in "Mao's Way," and Barbara Tuchman in "Notes From China" give us much more thoughtful and analytical accounts of the import, implications and possible consequences of Mao's attempt to keep the Revolution fluid.

When he makes comparisons with the Soviet Union or discusses Sino-Soviet relations, Salisbury is on familiar ground and his analysis is convincing. When he romanticizes about the "new Chinese man," Salisbury lets himself be carried away by the visible evidence of the greatly improved quality of life for the vast majority of Chinese.

Russian propaganda used to trumpet about the "new Soviet man." Salisbury lived in Russia long enough to know that the "new Soviet man" is strikingly like the old Russian man. Because he knows less about China, Salisbury is less rigorous than he should be in distinguishing between the "new" Chinese man and the new Chinese circumstances.

Hammond Innes' New Novel Features The Wild Outback

THE GOLDEN SOAK by Hammond Innes; Knopf, 334 pages, $6.95. Reviewed by Lee Thompson.

The wild outback of western Australia is the real hero of this new adventure novel by Hammond Innes.

The story, told in the first person throughout, follows the protagonist's adventures as he escapes from England after his bankruptcy and his failed marriage. He goes to Australia attempting to rebuild his life among the wild western mining towns. Immediately he becomes involved in a cursed mine, greedy speculators and incredible tales of a lost mine in the great Gibson desert. And as the novel paces to its conclusion, he begins to find the seeds of his own moral resurgence.

The characters are just graphic enough to allow the plot to plunge headlong to its conclusion. But what makes this novel most enjoyable is the verisimilitude of Innes' presentation of the outback.

The heat, the draught, the savage desert winds, all have the feel of reality. The plant and animal forms, many of which are indigenous only to Australia, are encountered so frequently as to be almost part of the plot, making this novel most enjoyable, and a fascinating introduction to the wild and the exotic in Australia.

"I've always had a special liking for old men . . . I listened to the stories strangers told — old people who sat next to me on a bus — and recognized that their pride in what they said was not random boasting, that a man's life story summarizes plainly enough the stamina, concentration and energy he has had over the years, as well as his luck, loyalty, friendship, sanity, imagination . . . Old men are usually joyful men at heart." Edward Hoagland in "Walking the Dead Diamond River."

An Essayist At Work

By DON KEOWN

WALKING THE DEAD DIAMOND RIVER by Edward Hoagland; Random House, 340 pages, $7.95.

As both a novelist and essayist, Edward Hoagland has earned himself a reputation as one of the best among the current crop of younger American writers.

His latest book, "Walking the Dead Diamond River," finds him in the latter role, demonstrating anew the form that won him praise as "a fresh breeze amid so many stale opinions" for his earlier "The Courage of Turtles."

"Walking the Dead Diamond River" is a collection of Hoagland essays that have appeared earlier in The Village Voice, Life, Audience, Esquire, The New Yorjer and The Atlantic Monthly. To give the collection some cohesion and to provide a theme, the dustjacket proposes that the pieces be treated as a delineation of the contrast between urban and rural or wilderness life.

Hoagland does, indeed, divide his residence between New York City and a New England farm only miles from the Canadian border. Thus some of the essays deal with life in the city, others with life in the country or the wilds. But Hoagland never really brings about the confrontation the jacket blurb suggests. Each essay stands alone, as it was written, sometimes related to one or more of the other pieces, even to a degree repetitive, but never really close enough for comparison or conflict.

This absence of a genuine unifying theme is a weakness of many such collections. It means that each essay must then engage the reader's interest entirely on its own merits. Frequently, but not always, Edward Hoagland succeeds. When he is writing about something for which he has deep feeling, the essay is engaging, sometimes even electrifying. When he is writing about a subject of less consequence to himself, the result is far less satisfying, even disappointing and flat.

Not surprisingly, the pieces inspired by the Vermont and Maine wilderness for which Hoagland feels such a strong affection are the best offerings. The title piece, about a long walk with a biologist making a grouse count, is splendid. The reader accompanies the pair through the unspoiled, but threatened, wild country, sharing their observations, their conversations and their thoughts.

An account of a canoe trip on the Allagash is similarly gripping.

"The New England Wilderness" recounts his contacts and discussions with the men entrusted with the preservation of the region's forests and the wildlife they shelter, and offers a course in ecology that avoids the one-sidedness of most such presentations.

"The Midnight Freight to Portland." the story of a ride aboard a freight train across northeastern Vermont into Maine, is a delightful recreation of an experience railroad buffs will envy. And "Tiger Bright," focusing upon the great animal trainer Gunther Gebel-Williams, is alive with the fascination the circus has held for Hoagland ever since a youthful stint as a roustabout.

The shorter pieces are also generally the lesser — a silly bit on dogs; another on boxing that strives for realism but slips into the romanticisms too often accorded a grim, grimy and gruesome sport; a report on jury service that is really nothing more than a personalized newspaper feature story and not a particularly good one; another on assassination that seems to cast no real light upon that dark problem.

But a Hoagland inspired is a Hoagland who holds your attention with passages well worth that heeding. There's a lot of unfortunate truth in "The New England Wilderness' conclusion that "despite all the fuss about wilderness, people nowadays don't really want to be in the woods all alone. If they did, there would be less wildness in the woods and in the end there would also be more of it. Even faster than the woods go, people are losing their taste."

Hoagland is one who sees the tourist and part-time resident as a greater threat to the wilderness and wildlife than the logger or the hunter. "The villain in wildlife management . . . was the summer people like me, who come crowding in, buying up, chopping up the land after the loggers have skinned off the trees."

But, while he can criticize some of them and their tactics, Hoagland is basically himself a wholehearted conservationist: "All factions have reason to worry if the board majority of citizens lose that mysterious sense of felicity and exuberance they once had in the presence of natural grandeur — the feeling of having known it before, or being linked to it via thousands of centuries before they were born — and simply stop caring."

Hoagland's mastery of language is beyond question. He uses it sharply, accurately, efficiently. But good rhetoric will not in itself suffice for the essayist. One must also have something to say — and believe that it is vital. When Edward Hoagland is talking about something very important to him, as when he deals with nature and the menaces to it he is very, very effective indeed, a master of description, an expert at exposition.

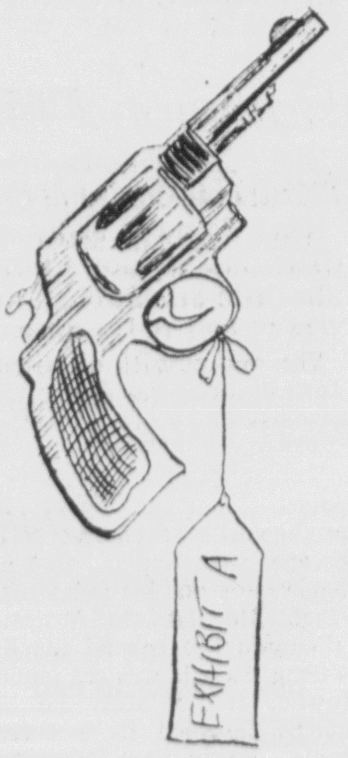
INSPECTOR GHOTE TRUSTS THE HEART by H.R.F. Keating; Doubleday, 201 pages, $4.95. Reviewed by Patricia Perry.

Connoisseurs of intelligent mysteries who haven't yet met inspector Ghote, a lovely little Indian policeman who works out of Bombay, could do no better than make their introductions in this novel.

The dignified inspector is assigned to investigate a kidnapping because he is so goodhearted; and the abduction, which was a mistake in the first place, serves to accentuate his comic, yet highly intellectual, character.

It's an enjoyable adventure, with chases all over the city, and some remarkably perceptive writing. . . Ghote approaches the father of the intended kidnap victim to see if he'll pay the ransom of the wrong boy . . . "the tall business man's strongly marked features were becoming moment by moment locked more and more in a mask of not deciding. . ."



Book Pages

THE FIRST four titles in a new series of American Civil Liberties Union handbooks for special interest groups are:

"The Rights of Teachers" by David Rubin, $4.95; "The Rights of Mental Patients" by Bruce Ennis and Loren Siegel, $6.95; "The Rights of Servicemen" by Robert S. Rivkin, $4.95, and "The Rights of Prisoners" by David Rudovsky, $4.95. Future books will cover the rights of women, students, suspects and the very poor. Norman Dorsen and Aryeh Neier, general counsel and executive director of the American Civil Liberties Union, are the general editors for the series. Richard W. Baron Co., New York, is the publisher. And the premise is that "rights are given life only through their exercise. If they are forgotten or undiscovered, they tend to disappear. The aim of the . . . series is to inform Americans of their rights in the hope that they will then be encouraged to exercise them."

CLIFF MERRITT'S "Man on the Move!" cartoons, a sort of transportation-oriented version of Robert Ripley's "Believe It or Not" feature, done on behalf of United Transportation Union, have been reprinted as a 75-cent paperback by Popular Library.

THE TRUE-TO-life antics and quips of the "small fry" in Bil Keane's comic panel "The Family Circus" has won the cartoon a loyal following among readers of the Independent-Journal and the 400 other newspapers in which it appears. Those fans can enjoy some of Keane's funniest creations in "Can I Have a Cookie?," a collection of Family Circus ribticklers published by Fawcett as a 60-cent Gold Medal paperback.

THE EFFECTIVE presentation of exhibits, whether they be for a school science fair or a trade exposition or a store window, is an art in itself. Jefferson Warren of Miami's Vizcaya Museum has put together an illustrated manual, "Exhibit Methods," that covers the subject from design through construction to promotion and publicity. Successful exhibits are shown and analyzed. Special effects — animation, sensory stimuli, etc. — are stressed. The Sterling Publishing Co. book sells for $6.95.

DELL HAS reprinted as a 95-cent paperback Hans Peter Richter's award-winning novel, "Freidrich," in the English translation by Edite Koll.

ONE MORE SPRING

One more spring, I asked, of God,
One more emerald sight
Of grass upon the hill,
Of gulls low upon the sea in flight,
Of white-tailed deer sunning in the warmth
And children laughing in the gentle winds,
Of young love, arm-in-arm.
Let me know the birth - the start—
So that the end
Will be as it had just begun:
A poppy opening to the morning sun.

Fit theme for song or triolet.

IT IS THE time of the year for puttering in the backyard. Which means it is also a time for cluttering, unless you have provided yourself with adequate storage for all those garden tools, lawn care supplies, barbeque gear and other things that tend to get scattered while you work or play. Steven Ellingson has designed the outdoor storage center shown at right as the answer to the problem. It stands eight and a half feet tall and measures eight feet wide, and it is actually four units in one — potting bench, two storage closets large enough to serve as poolside dressing rooms, and a storage cabinet with shelves. The unit with the fold-down potting bench takes care of garden tools and equipment, and the counter can serve you equally well as a barbeque work center and serving area. The second unit at ground level is perfect for the mower and sweeper, with extra room for small tools. The other units can handle bags of peat and fertilizer, the wheelbarrow, more tools, etc., through their full-height double doors. Order Outdoor Storage Center Pattern 513 by sending $1 to Steve Ellingson, San Rafael Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 2383, Van Nuys, Calif., 91409. You will get step-by-step instructions plus a complete materials list. Or, if you prefer a storage unit styled in a different period, order Little Red Barn Pattern 461 for $2.

A Craft To Soothe The Troubled Mind

There are certain crafts and trades, long on tradition and steeped in the pride of their practitioners, that seem to serve as an antidote to the hustle, bustle and hurry of today's society.

Bricklaying is one of those. With trowel in hand, the bricklayer seems to forget the pressures around him and to concentrate upon the task before him — to lay those bricks as perfectly as possible.

For all its traditions, bricklaying is not beyond the capabilities of anyone who can cook, sew or saw a board, according to Don Brann of the Easi-Bild Pattern Co.

ALL THE NOVICE needs is a little instruction at the outset.

To provide that direction, Brann has written a book, "Bricklaying Simplified." To get it, send a $2 check (made payable to Directions Simplified) to Independent-Journal pattern department, Post Office Box 215, Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., 10510, and ask for Book 668 — "Bricklaying Simplified."

The book offers step-by-step directions on the mixing of the mortar, the achieving of uniform mortar joints and the placement of the bricks. The 128 pages contain more than 190 illustrations to clarify the directions.

Having read and mastered the book, you are ready to proceed with that brick wall or barbecue, that brick veneer for your house, that walk or terrace, or even that brick floor.

AND YOU WILL discover for yourself the uncanny quality that bricklaying has for relaxing the mind. You will find yourself so involved in the challenge of good bricklaying that the cares of home and office will soon slip away.

Don't overlook, either, the healthful exercise that bricklaying affords the body and its muscles in this day of growing awareness of the importance of physical fitness.

You will rarely see a flabby, unfit bricklayer.

Just as you will seldom see a worried and unhappy bricklayer — at least not while he is at work at his old and honored craft.

Try it, and you'll buy it.

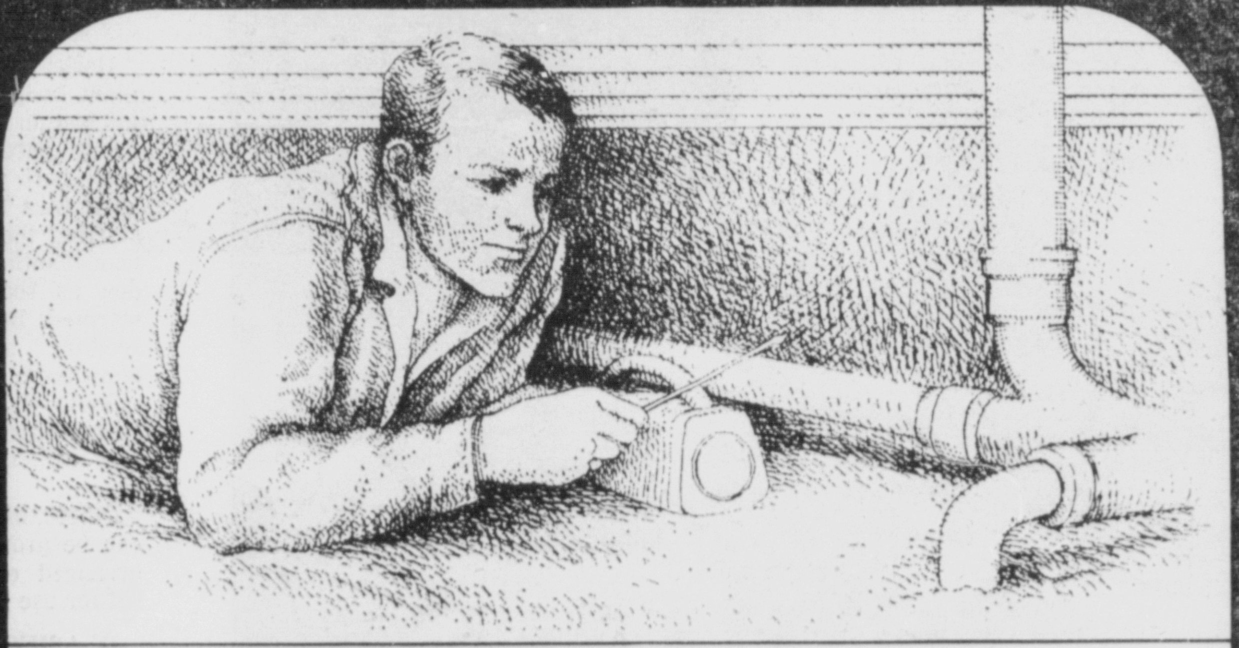
Marin
Homeowner's
Notebook



LOVE IS BLIND. THAT'S WHY YOUR HOME NEEDS US NOW.

Most people fall madly in love with their homes here in Marin County. And love, as everybody knows, is blind. So many homeowners overlook the little faults in their homes. Even the ones that are serious warning signs. That's why your home needs the dispassionate eye of a professional "structural pest control" inspector once a year.

You see, a good "structural pest control inspection" is a lot more than just a "termite inspection." Hinkley & Gordon inspects your home for termites and other destructive organisms, of course. But we also inspect your home for all other conditions which might lead to expensive repairs if neglected.

For example, replacing the grout seal around your shower is perhaps a $30 professional repair now. But give a leaky shower a couple of years to attract termites or dry rot, and you may have to spend $1000 to replace the entire bathroom floor.

That's why a Hinkley & Gordon inspection is so thorough. We inspect your home from top to bottom, inside and outside. We cover literally hundreds of maintenance items, spending a full two hours to check the average home. A very detailed written report, drawings, and specific recommendations are mailed to you within 48 hours.

Whether you follow our suggestions is strictly up to you. There's no obligation whatsoever to have us perform further work. This inspection isn't just a gimmick to sell you a termite job. It's the best way to avoid one.

The cost of a Hinkley & Gordon inspection is just $50 for the average Marin home. And it certainly beats trusting blind luck to protect your investment.

A call to our office today will arrange it.

Herbs Spice Up The Garden And The Dinner Table

EVEN IF YOU don't have space for them in the garden — and it takes only a nook — you can still grow your own herbs. Just plant them in a claypot, or some fancier container, and place them in a sunny window. They will thrive, close at hand for your use in the kitchen. The photo is from "How to Grow Your Own Vegetables" by Michael Kressy.

Seasonings must never shout; they should only sing softly.

A smidgen of thyme, a flurry of dill, or a pinch of basil can elevate a recipe from mere run of the mill to one that becomes a specialty of the house. A few chives can transform plain sour cream into an inviting, flavorful party dip.

The lowly navy bean, laced with the flavor of ginger, produces an aroma that has given baked beans a national reputation.

CREATIVE HOME library, in association with Better Homes and Gardens, has published a new book entitled "How to Grow Your Own Vegetables" (hardbound, $8.95, Meredith Corp.) by Michael Kressy. The book guides gardeners of any experience in selecting a garden plot, planting and growing vegetables and bush fruits, and also contains a chapter on herbs — how to grow, harvest, dry and store them.

Herbs are the "spice" of the plant world as well as the kitchen and deserve a corner in every garden. To assure an early herb yield "How to Grow Your Own Vegetables" advises starting the seeds indoors and transplanting them to the garden as soon as the soil has warmed. But now you can get seedlings at the nursery and plant them immediately.

Some herbs are perennials (mint, chives, savory, and sage) and will sprout season after season.

Others, like basil and parsley, can be grown in clay pots and arranged on a sunny window sill for use in the kitchen.

IF A RECIPE makes no mention of herbs but you want to tinker with a dish anyway, allow: a half teaspoon fresh herbs for each pound of meat or poultry; a half teaspoon fresh herbs for every two cups of soup or sauce; three-quarters teaspoon fresh herbs for every two cups of vegetables; half teaspoon fresh herbs for each cup of salad dressing.

Basil is delicious when sprinkled on freshly sliced tomatoes and can be planted as a border along a walk, in clumps in the garden or in pots on the terrace. When picked fresh, dill leaves add a subtle flavor to salads, fish and many other dishes as well as adding flavor when placed in the pickling jar along with cucumbers.

Marjoram produces aromatic and flavorful leaves that make a tasty addition to almost any meat dish and will do wonders for leafy vegetables, beans, peas or squash.

Parsley can be used with virtually every vegetable as well as with a variety of meats.

REMEMBER, herbs can only be added. If too much is used there is no way to subtract them. Some herbs, like oregano, are more pungent than milder types such as basil and can easily overpower a dish if overdone.

The last chapter of "How to Grow Your Own Vegetables" contains recipes for home grown produce. Herbed Summer Squash is a recipe that not only takes advantage of fresh produce from the garden but enticing home grown herbs as well. Here are the ingredients and easy directions.

HERBED SUMMER SQUASH

¼ cup butter
⅓ cup thinly sliced scallions, including green tops
1 teaspoon thyme leaves or ½ teaspoon dried thyme
½ teaspoon oregano leaves or ¼ teaspoon dried oregano
¼ teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 quart summer squash (about 1 pound), thinly sliced
¼ cup finely chopped parsley

Melt butter in a large skillet. Blend in scallions, thyme, oregano, salt and pepper. Add squash and mix lightly to blend. Cover and cook over moderate heat, stirring occasionally, 10-15 minutes or until squash is tender. Sprinkle with parsley and serve immediately.

Yield: three to four servings.

A CHECKLIST FOR GARDENERS OF MARIN

The Marin gardener's checklist for the coming week:

✓ Now is the time to replace all those shrubs and plantings killed by the heavy frosts and rains this past winter. Make your selections with care. Your choices should be with you for years to come.

✓ Roses are beginning to burst into bloom on many bushes. A good feeding with spur their blossoming. So will a regular plucking of spent flowers.

✓ Give lawns a spring feeding now, too. They will green-up quickly.

✓ Azaleas, rhodendrons, roses and camellias full of buds or full blooms make ideal Easter gifts.

✓ Now is the time to plant tuberous begonia and fibrous begonia seedlings. Give them some shade.

✓ April is a big month for planting summer-flowering annuals. A wide selection is available.

Play It Safe With Outdoor Appliances

During the gardening season many Marinites will be using electric appliances such as lawn mowers, edger-trimmers, cultivators, grass shears, or hedge trimmers to make their outdoor work both easier, and more enjoyable.

However, along with the increased use of these convenience items goes an increased sense of responsibility for adherence to rules of safety. Underwriters' Laboratories Inc., an independent, not-for-profit organization that tests products for public safety, recommends that you observe the following guidelines when working with outdoor appliances:

KEEP THE work area clean.

Never use appliances in damp or wet locations.

Keep all visitors, especially children, a safe distance away.

Store appliances in high, dry places and keep them out of the reach of children.

Never force an appliance to work faster than the rate at which it was designed.

Never wear loose clothing or jewelry which could get caught in the moving parts. Use rubber gloves and proper footwear.

Never carry an appliance by the cord, and never yank it when removing from a receptacle. Keep the cord away from heat, oil, and sharp edges.

Never use an appliance in the rain.

Keep proper footing and balance at all times, don't overreach.

Keep appliances sharp and clean for best and safest performance. Disconnect an appliance before servicing, changing accessories, or lubricating.

Look for the UL symbol in a circle when purchasing outdoor appliances. Such equipment has been evaluated with respect to hazards affecting life and property, by undergoing rigid tests which duplicate in-service uses and abuses that products may receive.

UL FURTHER suggests observing the following rules of satety when working with edger-trimmers or lawn mowers.

Keep guards in place, and in working order.

Keep blades sharp.

Keep hands away from the cutting area.

HITTING A ROCK or other foreign object with a lawn mower can be dangerous. In the event that this should happen, take the following steps.

1. Stop the mower.
2. Inspect for damage.
3. Repair the damage before restarting and operating the mower.

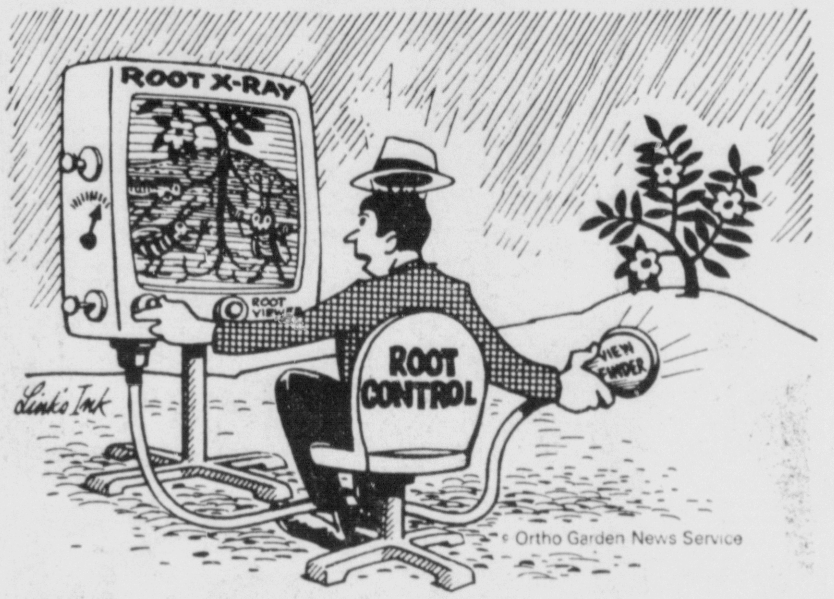
GIVE ROOTS A BREAK

There's Lot Going On Beneath The Soil Out In Your Garden

By FRANK J. TAYLOR



© Ortho Garden News Service

What this home gardener needs isn't a five cent stogie but a five dollar X-ray machine that will take pictures of the roots of his trees, shrubs and plants down in the soil. Most other backyard gardeners have the same need.

I can do some pretty good guessing about what ails a sick plant when the leaves begin to curl, dry up or drop, and the tips of the branches die back. First of all I look for sucking bugs, but if the leaves are clean and they still curl or drop, I know I have a root problem. How do I get a good look at the roots?

"BORE A HOLE and see what goes on down there under the top soil," a county horticultural expert advised me.

Whereupon I added a soil augur to my gardening arsenal in the toolshed. It's still hanging on the wall.

The first dozen holes I drilled alongside trees and shrubs brought up subsoil all right but it was so churned up I learned next to nothing. So, putting on my Thomas A. Edison hat, I invented a home-made coring tube of strong, thin pipe. It brought up cores of earth an inch in diameter which told me that beneath the foot or so of top soil the roots were trying to push through compacted clay and they were finding it hard going.

"You'll have to break up that clay and let some air into it," my expert said.

HE RECOMMENDED some soil conditioners in small but frequent applications. That helped solve one soil problem but not two others — the root chewers and the PH, or alkali-acidity balance.

To catch the root pests in the act I dug small holes alongside scattered shrubs and plants with a trowel, carefully trying to avoid cutting the roots I wanted to examine.In one place I found some nematodes, in another cutworms and nests of root aphids. Under the lawn I spotted sod web worms feasting on the grass roots.

Once I had flushed out these underground enemies it was no trick to lambaste them with the hose turf gun loaded with the right pesticides from the Garden Center — things like Nemagon for nematodes, Chlordane and Diazinon for the bugs and worms, Dyrene for the root fungus.

NOWADAYS I don't waste time digging holes to locate the enemy: I know he's down there. I give the roots a break and use the turf gun before the leaves begin falling —as root insurance, so to speak.

That left me with the most baffling soil problem of all, the PH balance. Too-acid soil wouldn't give up its nourishment, too alkaline burned the roots.

I turned chemist for a day with my home soil-testing kit. The color in the tubes gave me some clues, but to be sure I sent soil samples to college for more reliable tests. Once I had the reports back it was an easy trick to scatter lime or gypsum where the roots cried for less acid soil, or sulphur to counteract too alkaline nourishment.

Sounds like work, but it wasn't really, and it paid off big above ground to give the roots the break they deserved down under.

TV ICTES

The tennis battle of the sexes — veteran Bobby Rigg vs. Margaret Court for a $10,000 pot — will be telecast live from San Diego, Calif., by CBS on May 13.

"The Little People," the Brian Keith series that was new this season, has been renewed for 1973-74 by NBC. The kids are doing well by Keith. First, there was that long, long run "Family Affair" series, in which he was guardian to three orphaned children. In this new one, he is a pediatrician in Hawaii.

NBC's baseball coverage this season is a record 41 games, 26 Saturday contests and 15 Monday night encounters.

Australian singer Helen Reddy, who seems to be on almost everyone's program each time you turn the dial this season, will be the hostess of a weekly contemporary music-comedy one-hour series this summer. It will fill the 8-9 p.m. Thursday spot while "The Flip Wilson Show" is on vacation.

CBS and the National Basketball Association announced agreement on a three-year pact that provides for this network to have exclusive video rights to NBA games beginning with the 1973-74 contract for several years.

On The Stereo Scene

By JOHN SUNIER

The traditional jazz world lost a major figure recently with the death at 86 of Edward "Kid" Ory, who wrote "Muskrat Ramble" and gave the young Louis Armstrong one of his first jobs.

The famous jazz trombonist used to own the San Francisco jazz club On the Levee, and was known for his tailgate trombone style.

The tape I'm calling your attention to is not new at all, it has been buried in the catalog of Contemporary Records for many years. In fact nowhere on the tape does it state the tape is in stereo, leading one to believe it might be dubs of old classic 78s. Imagine my surprise to discover the tape to be excellent genuine stereo with amazing presence that puts Kid Ory and his seven-man group right in your lap! (GOOD-TIME JAZZ-AMPEX GTF-1042) is titled "Kid Ory Favorites, Volumes 1 and 2" and is at three-and three-quarters ips speed though the sound is not harmed by the reduction in speed from the seven and a half speed of the other tapes we've discussed earlier.

The tunes are predictable: "High Society," "Careless Love," "Panama" and other traditional jazz favorites delivered in spirited manner somewhere between the overly slick gloss of some Dixieland groups and the wrong-note-ridden performances of most of the New Orleans bands still playing.

Everyone — even modern jazz snobs — should have some good gutsy traditional jazz in their collection, and I strongly recommend this definitive Ory set.
